Further provisions came into force on 1 January 2010: ss 86-97, Schs 21-23 (in part): s 182(3). Further provisions came into force on 12 January 2010: ss 73, 138, 178 (in part), Schs 21-23 (in part): s 182(2). Further provisions came into force immediately before 1 February 2010: s 142 and Sch 23 Pt 5 (in part) (SI 2010/145). Further provisions came into force on 1 February 2010: ss 35, 59-61, 72, 112, 114, 115, 118(2) (for certain purposes), 140, 141, 149, 150, 153, 173 (in part), 174, 175 (in part), 180, Sch 12, Sch 15 paras 1-4, 5 (for certain purposes), 6, 7 (for certain purposes), 9, 10 (for certain purposes), Sch 20 paras 1-3, Sch 21 paras 53-61, 74-78, Sch 22 paras 7-11, 25, 28, 39, and Sch 23 (in part) (SI 2010/145). Further provisions came into force on 6 April 2010: ss 62-71, 74-85, 113, 118 (so far as it is not already in force), 119-136, 146, 147, 155-172, 173 (so far as it is not already in force), 175 (in part), 177 (for certain purposes), 178 (in part), Schs 13, 15 (so far as it is not already in force), 19, 20 (in part), 21-23 (in part) (SI 2010/816). Further provisions came into force on 4 October 2010: ss 52, 54, 55, 56(1), (2)(a), 57, 177 (in part), 178 (in part), Schs 21 (in part), 23 (in part) (SI 2010/816). The remaining provisions come into force on a day or days to be appointed. For details of commencement, see the COMMENCEMENT OF STATUTES table in the Current Service Noter-up booklet.

Part 1 (ss 1-51) Coroners etc

Chapter 1 (ss 1-17) Investigations into deaths

Section 1 establishes a senior coroner's duty to investigate certain deaths. A senior coroner who is under a duty to conduct an investigation may request a senior coroner for another area to conduct the investigation: s 2. Under s 3, the Chief Coroner may direct a senior coroner to conduct an investigation into a person's death even though, apart from the direction, a different senior coroner would be under a duty to conduct it. Section 4 makes provision for the discontinuance of investigation where the cause of death is revealed by post-mortem examination. The matters to be ascertained are who the deceased was, how, when and where the deceased came by his death and the particulars required by the Births and Deaths

Registration Act 1953 to be registered concerning the death: 2009 Act s 5. A senior coroner who conducts an investigation into a person's death must hold an inquest into the death: s 6. Section 7 specifies whether a jury is required. Where there is a jury, the jury at an inquest is to consist of seven, eight, nine, ten or eleven persons: s 8. Section 9 makes provision as to determinations and findings by jury. Section 10 specifies the determinations and findings to be made after hearing the evidence at an inquest into a death. Section 1, Sch 1 make provision about suspension and resumption of investigations. Section 12 concerns investigation in Scotland. The circumstances in which investigation in England and Wales may be made, despite a body being brought to Scotland, are given in s 13. A senior coroner may request a suitable practitioner to make a post-mortem examination of a body: s 14. Under s 15, a senior coroner may order the body to be removed to any suitable place. A senior coroner who is conducting an investigation into a person's death that has not been completed or discontinued within a year must notify the Chief Coroner of that fact and must notify the Chief Coroner of the date on which the investigation is completed or discontinued: s 16. The Chief Coroner must monitor investigations into service deaths and secure that coroners conducting such investigations are suitably trained to do so: s 17.

Chapter 2 (ss 18-21) Notification, certification and registration of deaths

The Lord Chancellor may make regulations requiring a registered medical practitioner to notify a senior coroner of a death of which the practitioner is aware: s 18. Primary care trusts, in England, and local health boards, in Wales, must appoint persons as medical examiners to discharge the functions conferred on medical examiners by or under ss 18-21: s 19. Provision may be made requiring a registered medical practitioner who attended the deceased before his death to provide a medical certificate of the cause of death: s 20. The Secretary of State may appoint a person as National Medical Examiner: s 21.

Chapter 3 (ss 22-24) Coroner areas, appointments etc

Section 22, Sch 2 make provision about coroner areas. Provision is also made about the appointment of senior coroners, area coroners and assistant coroners: s 23, Sch 3. Section 24 deals with the provision of staff and accommodation.

Chapter 4 (ss 25-31) Investigations concerning treasure

Section 25, Sch 4 make provision about the appointment of the Coroner for Treasure and Assistant Coroners for Treasure. The Coroner must conduct an investigation concerning an object in respect of which notification is given under the Treasure Act 1996 s 8(1): 2009 Act s 26. The Coroner for Treasure may, as part of an investigation under s 26, hold an inquest concerning the object in question: s 27. A determination must be made as to the outcome of investigations concerning treasure: s 28. Section 29 makes provision as to the exception to the duty to investigate. The Treasure Act 1996 s 8A, which concerns the duty to notify the coroner of the acquisition of certain objects, is added by the 2009 Act s 30. Section 31 s 31 makes provision for a code of practice under the Treasure Act 1996 s 11.

Chapter 5 (ss 32-34) Further provision to do with investigations and deaths

The 2009 Act s 32, Sch 5 make provision about powers of senior coroners and the Coroner for Treasure. Section 33, Sch 6 set out offences relating to jurors, witnesses and evidence. Section 34, Sch 7 provide details about allowances, fees and expenses.

Chapter 6 (ss 35-42) Governance etc

Under s 35, Sch 8, provision is made about the appointment of the Chief Coroner and Deputy Chief Coroners. The Chief Coroner must give the Lord Chancellor a report for each calendar year: s 36. The Chief Coroner may make regulations about the training of senior coroners, area coroners and assistant coroners, the Coroner for Treasure and Assistant Coroners for Treasure and coroners' officers and other staff: s 37. Section 38, Sch 9 make provision about the appointment of the Medical Adviser to the Chief Coroner and Deputy Medical Advisers to the Chief Coroner. It is the duty of inspectors of court administration appointed under the Courts Act 2003 s 58(1) to inspect and report to the Lord Chancellor on the operation of the coroner system: 2009 Act s 39. Section 40 concerns appeals to the Chief Coroner that may be made by an interested person. Section 41, Sch 10 make provision for an investigation into a person's death to be carried out by the Chief Coroner or the Coroner for Treasure or by a judge, former judge or former coroner. Pursuant to s 42, the Lord Chancellor may issue guidance about the way in which the coroner system is expected to operate in relation to interest persons.

Chapter 7 (ss 43-51) Supplementary

The Lord Chancellor may make regulations for regulating the practice and procedure at or in connection with investigations under ss 1-51, examinations under s 14 and exhumations under Sch 5 para 6: s 43. The Lord Chancellor may also make regulations for regulating the practice and procedure at or in connection with investigations concerning objects that are or may be treasure or treasure trove: s 44. Coroners rules may be made for regulating the practice and procedure at or in connection with inquests: s 45. The office of coroner of the Queen's household is abolished: s 46. Section 47 defines 'interested person' and s 48 provides general interpretation. Sections 49, 50, Sch 11 relate to Northern Ireland and Scotland. Section 51 amends the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 2 in relation to public funding for advocacy at certain inquests.

Part 2 (ss 52-73) Criminal offences

Chapter 1 (ss 52-61) Murder, infanticide and suicide

The 2009 Act s 52 substitutes the Homicide Act 1957 s 2 so that a person who kills or is a party to the killing of another is not to be convicted of murder if he was suffering from an abnormality of mental functioning which arose from a recognised medical condition, substantially impaired his ability to do certain specified things and provides an explanation for his acts and omissions in doing or being a party to the killing. The 2009 Act s 53 relates to Northern Ireland. Section 54 provides the partial defence to murder of loss of control. Section 55 gives the meaning of 'qualifying trigger'. The common law defence of provocation is abolished and replaced by ss 54, 55: s 56. Section 57 amends the Infanticide Act 1938 s 1. The 2009 Act s 58 relates to Northern Ireland. Section 59 provides that a person commits an offence if he does an act capable of encouraging or assisting the suicide or attempted suicide of another person and his act was intended to encourage or assist suicide or an attempt at suicide. Section 60 relates to Northern Ireland. Section 61, Sch 12 make special provision in relation to persons providing information society services.

Chapter 2 (ss 62-69) Images of children

It is an offence for a person to be in possession of a prohibited image of a child, however this does not apply to excluded images, an 'excluded image' being an image which forms part of a series of images contained in a recording of the whole or part of a classified work: ss 62, 63. Section 64 specifies defences and s 65 gives the meaning of 'image' and 'child'. Section 66 deals with penalties and s 67 with entry, search, seizure and forfeiture. Section 68, Sch 13 make special rules relating to providers of information society services. Section 69 amends the Protection of Children Act 1978 s 1A so as to include pseudo-photographs with photographs.

Chapter 3 (ss 70-73) Other offences

The 2009 Act s 70 amends the International Criminal Court Act 2001 in relation to genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes. The 2009 Act s 71 provides that a person commits an offence if he holds another person in slavery or servitude and the circumstances are such that he knows or ought to know that the person is so held, or he requires another person to perform forced or compulsory labour and the circumstances are such that he knows or ought to know that the person is being required to perform such labour. Section 72 amends the Criminal Law

Act 1977 s 1A in relation to conspiracy. The common law offences of sedition and seditious libel, defamatory libel and obscene libel are abolished: 2009 Act s 73.

Part 3 (ss 74-117) Criminal evidence, investigations and procedure

Chapter 1 (ss 74-85) Anonymity in investigations

Section 74 defines 'qualifying offences' for the purposes of ss 74-85. For the purpose of ss 74-85 a criminal investigation is a qualifying criminal investigation if it is conducted by an investigating authority wholly or in part with a view to ascertaining whether a person should be charged with a qualifying offence or whether a person charged with a qualifying offence is guilty of it: s 75. Section 76 defines 'investigation anonymity order'. Section 77 concerns applications for investigation anonymity orders made to a justice of the peace. Section 78 provides conditions for making the order. An appeal may be made against the refusal of an order: s 79. A justice of the peace may discharge an investigation anonymity order if it appears to the justice to be appropriate to do so: s 80. A chief officer of police of a police force in England and Wales may authorise a person to exercise the chief officer's functions under ss 74-85: s 81. Section 82 provides that nothing in ss 74-85 affects the common law rules as to the withholding of information on the grounds of public interest immunity. Under s 83, the Secretary of State must review the operation of ss 74-85 and prepare a report of that review. Section 84 makes provision as to the application of ss 74-85 to the armed forces. Section 85 provides interpretation.

Chapter 2 (ss 86-97) Anonymity of witnesses

Section 86 defines 'witness anonymity order'. Under s 87, an application for a witness anonymity order to be made in relation to a witness in criminal proceedings may be made to the court by the prosecutor or the defendant. Section 88 provides the conditions for making a witness anonymity order. The relevant considerations for deciding whether Conditions A-C in s 88 are met are set out in s 89. Where, on a trial on indictment with a jury, any evidence has been given by a witness at a time when a witness anonymity order applied to the witness, the judge must give the jury such warning as the judge considers appropriate to ensure that the fact that the order was made in relation to the witness does not prejudice the defendant: s 90. A witness anonymity order may be discharged or varied: s 91. Section 92 deals with discharge or variation after proceedings. Discharge or variation of the order may be made by the appeal court: s 93. Special provisions apply in relation to service courts: see s 94. Nothing in ss 86-97 affects the common law rules as to the withholding of information on the grounds of public interest immunity: s 95. The Criminal Evidence (Witness Anonymity) Act 2008 ss 1-9, 14 cease to have effect: 2009 Act s 96. Section 97 provides interpretation.

Chapter 3 (ss 98-105) Vulnerable and intimidated witnesses

Section 98 amends the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 ss 16, 21, 22 in relation to the age of child witnesses in the context of eligibility for special measures. The 2009 Act s 99, Sch 14 concern eligibility for special measures with regard to offences involving weapons. Section 100 amends the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 21 with regard to special provisions relating to child witnesses. The 2009 Act s 101 makes special provisions relating to sexual offences. Section 102 concerns the presence of a supporter where evidence is given by live link. Section 103 concerns supplementary testimony where there is video recorded evidence in chief. Section 104 makes provision for the examination of the accused through an intermediary. Section 105 makes provision in relation to the age of a child complainant.

Chapter 4 (ss 106-110) Live links

Section 106 amends the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 57B so that directions may be given to attend through a live link. The 2009 Act 107 amends the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 ss 46ZA, 46A in relation to answering to live link bail. The 2009 Act s 108 adds the 1984 Act s 54B so that a constable may search at any time any person who is at a police station to answer to live link bail and any article in the possession of such a person. The 2009 Act s 109 concerns the use of live link in certain enforcement hearings. Section 110 permits the power to give a live link direction for hearings in the Court of Appeal to be exercised by the registrar.

Chapter 5 (ss 111-117) Miscellaneous

Section 111 amends the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 138 in relation to the effect of the admission of a video recording. The 2009 Act 112 concerns the admissibility of evidence of previous complaints. Section 113 sets out the powers in respect of offenders who assist investigations and prosecutions. Section 114 provides that if the defendant is charged with murder, the defendant may not be granted bail unless the court is of the opinion that there is no significant risk of the defendant committing, while on bail, an offence that would, or would be likely to, cause physical or mental injury to any person other than the defendant. A person charged with murder may not be granted bail except by order of a judge of the Crown Court: s 115. Section 116 amends the Administration of Justice (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1933 s 2 in relation to indictment of offenders. The 2009 Act makes provision in respect of the detention of persons under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41.

Part 4 (ss 118-141) Sentencing

Chapter 1 (ss 118-136) Sentencing Council for England and Wales

The 2009 Act s 118, Sch 15 establish a Sentencing Council for England and Wales. The Council must, as soon as practicable after the end of each financial year, make to the Lord Chancellor a report on the exercise of the Council's functions during the year: s 119. 'Sentencing guidelines' means guidelines relating to the sentencing of offenders: s 120. Section 121 provides for sentencing ranges. Section 122 defines 'allocation guidelines'. Under s 123, provision is made for the preparation or revision of guidelines in urgent cases. The Lord Chancellor can propose to the Council that it prepare or revise its guidelines: s 124. Every court must, in sentencing an offender, follow any sentencing guidelines which are relevant to the offender's case, and must, in exercising any other function relating to the sentencing of offenders, follow any sentencing guidelines which are relevant to the exercise of the function, unless the court is satisfied that it would be contrary to the interests of justice to do so: s 125. Section 126 makes provision as to the determination of tariffs. Where the Council publishes draft guidelines under s 120 or s 122, or issues guidelines as definitive guidelines under s 120 or s 122, the Council must publish a resource assessment in respect of the guidelines: s 127. Under s 128, the Council must monitor the operation and effect of its sentencing guidelines. The Council may promote awareness of matters relating to the sentencing of offenders by courts in England and Wales: s 129. Section 130 provides that the annual report for a financial year must contain a sentencing factors report. The annual report for a financial year must contain a non-sentencing factors report: s 131. The Council's duty to assess the impact of policy and legislative proposals is dealt with in s 132. By s 133, the Lord Chancellor may provide the Council with such assistance as it requests in connection with the performance of its functions. Section 134 provides for the entrenchment of the Lord Chancellor's functions. The Sentencing Guidelines Council and the Sentencing Advisory Panel are abolished: s 135. Section 136 provides for interpretation.

Chapter 2 (ss 137-141) Other provisions relating to sentencing

Section 138, Sch 16 make provision about the extension of disqualification for holding or obtaining a driving licence in certain circumstances. Section 138 makes provision for certain terrorism offences. Section 139 concerns Northern Ireland. Section 140 makes provision with regard to appeals against certain confiscation orders. Section 141 concerns Northern Ireland.

Part 5 (ss 142-148) Miscellaneous criminal justice provisions

Section 142 modifies the status and functions of the Commissioner for Victims and Witnesses. Section 143 allows the implementation of the European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2000/31 on e-commerce and the European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/123 on services in the internal market. Section 144, Sch 17 contain amendments relating to the treatment of criminal convictions imposed by courts outside England and Wales. Section 145 deals with the transfer to the Parole Board of functions under the Criminal Justice Act 1991. The 2009 Act s 146 amends the Courts Act 2003 s 55 in relation to the retention of knives surrendered or seized. The 2009 Act s 147 relates to Northern Ireland. The Lord Chancellor may, by order, authorise or require the Lord Chancellor, or such other person as may be specified, to designate persons as security officers in relation to a specified description of tribunal buildings: s 148.

Part 6 (ss 149-154) Legal aid and other payments for legal services

Section 149 makes provision with regard to pilot schemes for Community Legal Service. Section 150 amends the Access to Justice Act 1999 Sch 2 with regard to the excluded service of help in connection with business matters. The 2009 Act s 151 extends the power to seek information from the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and the Secretary of State, which at present may be exercised for purposes relating to an individual's financial eligibility for legal aid services to cover purposes relating to an individual's liability to make contributions toward the cost of those services. Section 152, Sch 18 provide for the enforcement of an order to pay for the cost of representation. By virtue of s 153, secondary legislation made by the Lord Chancellor may include consequential, incidental supplementary, transitional, transitory and saving provisions. Section 154 provides for the regulation of damages-based agreements in respect of claims relating to employment matters.

Part 7 (ss 155-172) Criminal memoirs etc

A court may make an exploitation proceeds order in respect of a person if it is satisfied, on the balance of probabilities, that the person is a qualifying offender and has obtained exploitation proceeds from a relevant offence: s 155. Section 156 defines 'qualifying offender'. Section 157 makes further provision as to qualifying offenders in relation to service offences. Section 158 makes supplementary provision in relation to qualifying offenders. Section 159 defines 'relevant offence'. Section 160 sets out what amounts to 'deriving a benefit' for the purposes of s 155. A court may not make an exploitation proceeds order except on the application of an enforcement authority: s 161. Section 162 sets out a range of factors that the court must take into consideration when deciding whether to make an exploitation proceeds order in respect of any benefit and, if it makes an order, the recoverable amount to be specified in the order. Section 163 places a limit on the amount that the court can order a person to pay ('the recoverable amount'). The available amount is the total of the value of the respondent's relevant assets, to the extent that any benefits identified in the order are benefits secured for a person other than the respondent, the value of those benefits, and the value, at the time the exploitation proceeds order is made, of such relevant gifts, if any, as the court considering making the exploitation proceeds order considers it just and reasonable to take account of in determining the available amount: s 164. 'Property' is all property wherever situated and includes money, all forms of real, corporeal or personal property and things in action and other intangible or incorporeal property: s 165. Section 166 makes provision as to where the court has made an exploitation proceeds order and a conviction relevant to the order is quashed. Section 167 sets out the powers of the court on repeat applications. A court making an exploitation proceeds order may also make an additional proceeds reporting order in respect of the respondent: s 168. Section 169, Sch 19 extend the provisions relating to investigations to include exploitation proceeds investigations. Section 170 makes consequential changes to the functions of the Serious Organised Crime Agency. Section 171 has the effect that an application for an exploitation proceeds order may not be made more than six years after the enforcement authority's cause of action accrued. Section 172 provides interpretation.

Part 8 (ss 173-175) Data Protection Act 1998

Section 173 provides so that the Commissioner may serve a data controller with a notice for the purpose of enabling the Commissioner to determine whether the data controller has complied or is complying with the data protection principles. Section 174 amends the Data Protection Act 1998 s 52 so that the Commissioner must prepare a code of practice which contains practical guidance in relation to the sharing of personal data in accordance with the requirements of the 1998 Act and such other guidance as the Commissioner considers appropriate to promote good practice in the sharing of personal data. The 2009 Act s 175, Sch 20 contain further amendments of the Data Protection Act 1998.

Part 9 (ss 176-183) General

Orders or regulations made by the Secretary of State, the Lord Chancellor, the Welsh Ministers or the Chief Coroner under the 2009 Act are to be made by statutory instrument: s 176. Section 177, Schs 21, 22 make consequential amendments and transitional and saving provisions. Section 178, Sch 23 contain repeals. Section 179 deals with financial provision. Section 180 makes provision as to the effect of amendments to provisions applied for purposes of service law. Sections 181-183 deal with extent, commencement and short title.

The 2009 Act ss 10-13, 28-33, 79, 80, 83, 84 (for certain purposes), 97, 110, Schs 4, 6, Sch 7 paras 27-44, and Sch 8 (in part) came into force on 29 January 2010: SI 2010/125. The 2009 Act s 1 came into force on 15 March 2010: SI 2010/125. The 2009 Act ss 3, 4, 112 (in part) and Sch 8 (in part) came into force on 19 April 2010: SI 2010/999. The 2009 Act s 112 (in part), Sch 7 (in part) came into force in relation to Wales only on 8 May 2010: SI 2010/999. The 2009 Act s 2 comes into force on 1 September 2010: SI 2010/999. The remaining provisions come into force on a day or days to be appointed. For details of commencement, see the COMMENCEMENT OF STATUTES table in the Current Service Noter-up booklet.

Part 1 (ss 1-13) Police reform

Sections 1-5 amend the Police Act 1996. By virtue of the 2009 Act s 1, police authorities are required, when discharging any of their functions, to have regard to the views of the public in their area concerning policing. Section 2 establishes the Police Senior Appointments Panel, which has the function of advising the Secretary of State on any matter on which it is consulted by the Secretary of State in connection with senior officer appointments, on consents to deputy chief constables and assistant chief constables fulfilling the role of the chief constable for a period exceeding three months, and on consents for the second most senior officer in the City of London police to act as Commissioner for a particular period. Under s 3, regulations under the 1996 Act s 50 may make provision for payments to be made to senior officers who cease to serve before the end of their fixed-term appointment. The 2009 Act s 4 gives the Commissioner a formal role in appointments to the ranks of Assistant Commissioner, Deputy Assistant Commissioner and Commander in the Metropolitan Police. By virtue of s 5, agreements may be made between chief officers of police forces to carry out their functions through collaboration in the interests of the efficiency or effectiveness of policing. Section 6 amends the Police Act 1997 s 93 to enable an authorising officer acting under s 93(5)(a)-(c) to grant an authorisation to interfere with property on an application made by a member of the officer's own police force or by a member of another police force. The 2009 Act ss 7-9 amend the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000. The 2009 Act s 7 empowers a person who is a designated person by reference to an office, rank or position with a police force to grant an authorisation for persons holding offices, ranks or positions with another police force to obtain communications data under the 2000 Act. Under the 2009 Act s 8, arrangements equivalent to those in the 2000 Act s 29(5) must be in force in relation to sources of police collaborative units comprising two or more police forces. A person who is a designated person for the purposes of s 28 or 29 by reference to his office, rank or position with a police force is entitled to grant an authorisation under s 28 or 29 on an application made by a member of another police force: 2009 Act s 9. Section 10 amends the 1996 Act to provide for an order-making power to amend s 97 to add further types of service that qualify as relevant service outside a police officer's own force. The 1996 Act is also amended by the 2009 Act s 11 so that the Secretary of State may make regulations concerning software used by the police. By virtue of ss 12 and 13, regulations requiring police forces to adopt particular procedures or practices or concerning common facilities or services need not apply to all police forces.

Part 2 (ss 14-27) Sexual offences and sex establishments

Section 14 amends the Sexual Offences Act 2003 by creating a strict liability offence which is committed if someone pays or promises payment for the sexual services of a prostitute who has been subject to exploitative conduct of a kind likely to induce or encourage the provision of sexual services for which the payer has made or promised payment. Equivalent provision is made in relation to Northern Ireland by the 2009 Act s 15. Section 16 amends the offence of loitering or soliciting for the purposes of prostitution, as set out in the Street Offences Act 1959 s 1, by introducing a requirement that the conduct must have been carried out at least twice in any three-month period. The 1959 Act is also amended by the 2009 Act s 17, Sch 1, which introduce a new penalty for those convicted of loitering or soliciting for the purpose of prostitution, allowing the court to make a rehabilitative order instead of imposing a fine or any other penalty. Section 18 amends the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 s 5 to apply a rehabilitation period of six months for those sentenced to an order following conviction for loitering or soliciting. Under the 2009 Act s 19, a new offence of soliciting is created which replaces the offences of kerb-crawling in a street or public place and persistent soliciting in a street or public place for the purposes of prostitution. Equivalent provision is made in relation to Northern Ireland by s 20. The courts are empowered by s 21, Sch 2 to close, on a temporary basis, premises being used for activities related to certain sexual offences. Sections 22-25 amend the Sexual Offences Act 2003. The Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 127 is disapplied by the 2009 Act s 22 in relation to applications for civil orders made under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Pt 2 (ss 80-136). The 2009 Act s 23 raises the age of a child that must be at risk in order for a foreign travel order to be made, and s 24 extends, from six months to five years, the maximum duration of such an order. By virtue of s 25, offenders who are subject to a foreign travel order that prohibits them from travelling anywhere outside the United Kingdom must surrender their passports at a police station specified in the order. The 2000 Act s 53 is amended by the 2009 Act s 26 so that a maximum sentence of five years' imprisonment can be imposed in relation to cases involving the showing, taking or possessing an indecent photograph of a child. Section 27, Sch 3 add a new category of sex establishment called a 'sexual entertainment venue' to the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 Sch 3, which brings the licensing of lap dancing and pole dancing clubs and other similar venues under the regime set out in the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982, which is currently used to regulate establishments such as sex shops and sex cinemas.

Part 3 (ss 28-33) Alcohol misuse

Section 28 amends the offence of persistently selling alcohol to children so that the offence is committed if alcohol is sold to an individual under the age of 18 on two or more occasions within three months rather than on three or more occasions within three months. The Confiscation of Alcohol (Young Persons) Act 1997 is amended by the 2009 Act s 29 so that police officers can confiscate sealed containers of alcohol from young persons in public places without needing to prove that they were consuming alcohol or that they intended to consume alcohol in a public place. A person under the age of 18 commits an offence contrary to s 30 if he is caught with alcohol in a public place three or more times within a 12-month period. Section 31 amends the Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 s 27(1) so that the police can issue directions to leave to persons between the ages of 10 and 15. The 2009 Act s 32 gives effect to Sch 4, which makes provision about mandatory licensing conditions relating to alcohol. Section 33 amends the Licensing Act 2003 ss 13 and 69 to allow members of a licensing authority to act as interested parties.

Part 4 (ss 34-50) Injunctions: gang-related violence

Section 34 enables the court to grant an injunction in order to prevent a person from engaging in, encouraging or assisting gang-related violence (as defined) and/or to protect a person from gang-related violence. The possible effects that prohibitions or requirements contained in the injunction could have on the person are listed in s 35. Supplementary provision relating to such injunctions is made by s 36, including in relation to time limits and review hearings. Under s 37, an application for an injunction can be made by the police or a local authority. Before applying for an injunction, the applicant authority must consult with any local authority, any chief officer of police and any other body or individual that the applicant thinks it appropriate to consult: s 38. Provision for without notice applications is made by s 39. Section 40 prescribes the powers of the court to grant an interim injunction where the court adjourns a hearing of which notice has been given to the respondent. The court's powers to grant an injunction where it adjourns the hearing of an application which has been made without notice are specified in s 41. Provision is made by s 42 for the variation and discharge of an injunction. Under s 43, if a power of arrest has been attached to any of the prohibitions or requirements contained in an injunction, a police officer may arrest without warrant a respondent who is reasonably suspected to be in breach of that prohibition or requirement. Section 44 allows a court to grant a warrant for arrest if it believes that the respondent is in breach of any provision of the injunction. If a person has been arrested, with or without a warrant, s 45 empowers the court to remand a person for the purpose of medical examination and report if it has reason to consider that such a report will be required. Section 46 gives effect to Sch 5, which makes further provision about the powers to remand under ss 43 and 44. The Secretary of State is required by s 47 to issue and publish guidance in relation to injunctions. Rules of court may be made which provide that powers conferred on county courts are exercisable by judges of a county court and district judges: s 48. Section 49 defines various terms used in Pt 4. Under s 50, the Secretary of State is required to review the operation of Pt 4 and prepare and publish a report of that review.

Part 5 (ss 51-66) Proceeds of crime

Part 5 amends the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002. By virtue of the 2009 Act s 51, receivers from the Crown Prosecution Service and Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office, along with accredited financial investigators and members of staff of other departments and public bodies, are entitled to deduct their expenses from recovered sums when they are appointed as receivers pursuant to the 2002 Act s 48 or 50. An appropriate officer (as defined) can continue to retain property that has been or may be seized under a specified seizure power if that property is also subject to a restraint order: 2009 Act s 52. Sections 53 and 54 make equivalent provision in relation to Scotland and Northern Ireland. Section 55 provides for search and seizure powers to prevent the dissipation of realisable property that may be used to satisfy a confiscation order. Sections 56 and 57 make equivalent provision in relation to Scotland and Northern Ireland. By virtue of s 58, property that has been seized by an appropriate officer under a relevant seizure power, or which has been produced to such an officer in compliance with a production order under the 2002 Act s 345, may in certain circumstances be sold to meet a confiscation order. The 2009 Act ss 59 and 60 make comparable provision in relation to Scotland and Northern Ireland. Section 61 adds the Serious Organised Crime Agency to the list of enforcement authorities that are liable to pay compensation to a person whose property has been affected by the enforcement of confiscation legislation. Under s 62, the limitation period for actions for the civil recovery of property obtained through unlawful conduct under the 2002 Act Pt 5 Ch 2 (ss 243-288) is extended from 12 to 20 years. An officer can require the search of a vehicle if he has reasonable grounds for suspecting there is cash in the vehicle which is recoverable property or intended for use in unlawful conduct: 2009 Act s 63. Section 64 provides that the period during which cash seized under the 2002 Act s 294 can be detained may be extended for a period of six months. By virtue of the 2009 Act s 65, law enforcement agencies may forfeit detained cash without a court order in uncontested cases. Section 66 transfers the jurisdiction for applications relating to detained cash investigations from a High Court judge to a judge entitled to exercise the jurisdiction of the Crown Court.

Part 6 (ss 67-78) Extradition

Part 6 amends the Extradition Act 2003. The 2009 Act ss 67 and 68 ensure that the United Kingdom is in a position to deal with alerts transmitted via the second generation Schengen Information System which request the arrest of a person for extradition purposes. By virtue of ss 69 and 70, an appropriate judge is permitted to adjourn extradition proceedings on the basis of a domestic sentence after a person has been brought before him before the extradition hearing has begun. Section 71 clarifies that, where consideration of an extradition request is deferred in order to allow domestic proceedings to be concluded or a prison sentence to be served, consideration of the extradition request should recommence once the person is released from detention pursuant to any sentence imposed. Provision is made by s 72 for the treatment of persons who are serving a sentence of imprisonment in the United Kingdom, are extradited to a category 1 territory under a European Arrest Warrant, and then return to the United Kingdom. Corresponding provision is made in s 73 for persons who return to the United Kingdom after being extradited to a category 2 territory. Section 74 provides a regime within which the United Kingdom will be able to provide undertakings as to a person's treatment in the United Kingdom and eventual return to a requested territory. The protection afforded by the Extradition Act 2003 s 152 applies where a person is extradited to the United Kingdom from a territory which is neither a category 1 nor a category 2 territory: 2009 Act s 75. Section 76 deals with situations in which the United Kingdom would want to deal with an offence committed by a person previously extradited to the United Kingdom for the purposes of prosecution for a different offence. Under s 77, weekends and certain specified holidays are excluded from the calculation of the 48-hour period during which a person provisionally arrested under the Extradition Act 2003 s 5 must be brought before, and relevant documents provided to, the appropriate judge. The 2009 Act s 78 enables a judge to give a live link direction in hearings before the judge other than the extradition hearing itself and other than any extradition proceedings which postdate surrender.

Part 7 (ss 79, 80) Aviation security

Section 79 amends the Aviation Security Act 1982 by making provision for the establishment of Risk Advisory Groups and Security Executive Groups at aerodromes. The 2009 Act s 80 gives effect to Sch 6, which makes further amendments to the Aviation Security Act 1982 supplementary to and consequential on the creation of these bodies.

Part 8 (ss 81-111) Miscellaneous

Chapter 1 (ss 81-97) Safeguarding vulnerable groups and criminal records

Section 81 renames the Independent Barring Board as the Independent Safeguarding Authority and makes consequential amendments to various enactments. Sections 82-89 amend the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006. The effect of the 2009 Act s 82 is that a person who is required under the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006 s 13 to make a check on a member of a governing body (a 'governor') of an educational establishment does not commit an offence if the governor fails to consent to the check or fails to provide the appropriate officer with any information necessary to make the check. The 2009 Act s 82 also makes it an offence for a governor to act as a member of a governing body before consenting to the check or providing the appropriate officer with any information required to carry out the check. The Secretary of State is entitled to determine the form, manner and content of the form for applying to become subject to monitoring pursuant to the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006 s 24: 2009 Act s 83. Section 84 makes provision for the payment of a fee by persons who are subject to monitoring and have benefited from a free application to the monitoring scheme as a volunteer, if they subsequently enter paid employment in activities regulated under the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006. The requirements arising from the declaration to be made by persons eligible to receive vetting information under s 30 or information about the cessation of monitoring under s 32 are revised by the 2009 Act ss 85 and 86. Section 87 creates an additional duty and confers a further power on the Independent Safeguarding Authority in circumstances where it proposes to bar an individual from working with children or vulnerable adults. Under s 88, the Independent Safeguarding Authority is empowered to provide information that it holds to the police for use by the police for any of various specified purposes. It is the Independent Safeguarding Authority rather than the Secretary of State that must now be satisfied that a person has met the prescribed criteria for automatic barring before the Authority is required to bar him: s 89. Sections 90-92 make provision in relation to Northern Ireland equivalent to that made by ss 87-89. By virtue of s 93, a copy of a person's criminal conviction certificate is to be sent to an employer where specifically requested. Section 94 amends the Police Act 1997 to provide for 'right to work' information to be recorded on basic, standard and enhanced disclosures where a request for such information is made. The 2009 Act s 95 allows for other methods of identity verification to be prescribed under the Police Act 1997 s 118 when making an application for a criminal conviction certificate. The Criminal Records Bureau is authorised to check the suitability of individuals to be registered to countersign and receive standard and enhanced disclosures against the new barred lists established under the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Act 2006: 2009 Act s 96. The Police Act 1997 is amended by the 2009 Act s 97 so that the Secretary of State may determine the form, manner and contents of applications for criminal records disclosures.

Chapter 2 (ss 98-111) Other

Section 98 amends the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 by enabling an officer of Revenue and Customs to require a person entering or leaving the United Kingdom to produce his passport or travel documents and answer questions about his journey. The 1979 Act is also amended by the 2009 Act s 99, which clarifies the powers available to officers at the border to ask questions about, and to search for, cash that is recoverable property or is intended by any person for use in unlawful conduct. Section 100 clarifies that the protection from interception afforded to postal communications in the 2000 Act does not restrict Revenue and Customs' powers to check international postal traffic for customs or excise purposes. A prohibition on the importation and exportation of false identity documents is created by the 2009 Act s 101. Section 102 amends the Criminal Justice Act 1988 by empowering the Secretary of State to specify weapons for the purposes of the prohibition on importation. The 2009 Act s 103 amends the Football Spectators Act 1989 so that those subject to banning orders in England and Wales are also banned from attending regulated football matches in Scotland and Northern Ireland. Under the 2009 Act s 104, when an individual is directed to report to police by the court or an enforcing authority, the specified police station may be anywhere in the United Kingdom and thus local to the individual's place of residence. Section 105 deals with the enforcement of the 1989 Act in Scotland and Northern Ireland. The offence of failing to comply with the requirements of a Scottish banning order or a notice issued by the Scottish Football Banning Orders Authority and the offence of giving false information in connection with an application for an exemption are extended to England and Wales by the 2009 Act s 106. Section 107 adds to the list of relevant offences for the purposes of the 1989 Act Pt 2 (ss 14-22A) (1) failing to comply with a requirement made on initially reporting to the police in respect of an English and Welsh imposed order; and (2) knowingly making false statements in relation to an application for an exemption to the English and Welsh enforcing authority. Under the 2009 Act s 108, every provider of probation services in a particular area whose arrangements under the Offender Management Act 2007 s 3 provide for it to be a responsible authority is to be added to the list of responsible authorities which comprise Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships (in England) or Community Safety Partnership (in Wales) in that area. The Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 is amended by the 2009 Act s 109 by the creation of three exceptions to the general rule that employees of the Serious Organised Crime Agency are not servants of the Crown. Section 110 amends the Firearms Act 1968 so that certain provisions of the 1968 Act apply to a member of the Scottish Crime and Drug Enforcement Agency in the same way as they apply to a member of a police force and a member of staff of the Serious Organised Crime Agency. The requirement that a constable who wishes to obtain a warrant under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 s 23(3) to enter and search premises must be acting for the police area within which the premises are situated is removed by the 2009 Act s 111.

Part 9 (ss 112-117) General

Sections 112 and 113 prescribe the order-making power of the Secretary of State for the purposes of the 2009 Act. Section 112 also gives effect to Sch 7, which makes minor and consequential amendments, and Sch 8, which makes various repeals and revocations. Section 114 makes financial provision, s 115 deals with extent, s 116 makes provision for commencement, and s 117 specifies the short title.

Amendments, repeals and revocations

Subscribers should note that the lists below mention repeals and amendments which are or will be effective when the Act is fully in force. Please refer to the top of this summary for details of the in-force dates of the provisions of the Act. Please also note that these lists are not exhaustive.

The following Act is repealed in full: Sexual Offences Act 1985.

Specific provisions of a number of Acts are added, amended or repealed. These include: Street Offences Act 1959 s 2; Aviation Security Act 1982 ss 25, 25A, 30; Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 22A; Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ss 14, 15, 44; Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 ss 48, 49; Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001 s 36; Police Reform Act 2002 s 84; Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 45; Extradition Act 2003 ss 143, 144, 151; Drugs Act 2005 s 2; Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 120; and Serious Crime Act 2007 s 78.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(1) THE NATURE OF CRIME/1. Definition of 'crime'.

1. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY

(1) THE NATURE OF CRIME

1. Definition of 'crime'.

'Criminal' and 'crime' are words of ordinary English usage. There is no satisfactory definition of 'crime' which will embrace the many acts and omissions which are criminal and which will at the same time exclude all those which are not<sup>1</sup>. Ordinarily a crime is a wrong which affects the security or well-being of the public generally so that the public has an interest in its suppression<sup>2</sup>. A crime is frequently a moral wrong in that it amounts to conduct which is inimical to the general moral sense of the community. There are, however, many crimes which exhibit neither of these characteristics<sup>3</sup>. An act may be made criminal by Parliament simply because it is criminal, rather than civil, process which offers the more effective means of controlling the conduct in question.

1 Whether conduct amounts to a crime may be determined by whether it is followed by criminal or civil proceedings: see PARA 2 post.

2 See Mogul Steamship Co v McGregor, Gow & Co (1889) 23 QBD 598 at 606, CA, per Lord Esher MR ('an illegal act which is a wrong against the public welfare seems to have the necessary ingredients of a crime').

3 See Sherras v De Rutzen [1895] 1 QB 918 at 922 per Wright J ('acts which . . . are not criminal in any real sense, but are acts which in the public interest are prohibited under a penalty').

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/1. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(1) THE NATURE OF CRIME/2. Criminal and civil proceedings distinguished.

2. Criminal and civil proceedings distinguished.

Civil proceedings have for their object the recovery of money or other property, or the enforcement of a right or advantage on behalf of the claimant, whereas criminal proceedings have for their object the punishment of a person who has committed a crime<sup>1</sup>. Criminal proceedings are not to be used as a means of enforcing a civil right<sup>2</sup>. Whether conduct amounts to a crime may be determined by ascertaining whether the conduct in question is followed by criminal or civil proceedings. If the proceedings will result in the punishment of a party, the conduct in question will be a crime notwithstanding that it may be a matter of small consequence<sup>3</sup>.

It is a question of construction in each case whether a breach of statutory duty for which Parliament has provided no remedy creates an offence or not: among the factors which will have to be considered are whether the duty is mandatory or prohibitory, whether the statute is ancient or modern, and whether there are any other means of enforcing the duty<sup>4</sup>. It is easier to infer in the case of a modern statute that Parliament does not intend to create an offence unless it says so: in the case of a mandatory duty imposed by a modern statute, enforceable by way of judicial review, the inference that Parliament did not intend to create an offence in the absence of an express provision to that effect is, nowadays, almost irresistible<sup>5</sup>.

An act may be prohibited or commanded by statute in such a manner that the person contravening the provision is liable to a pecuniary penalty which is recoverable as a civil debt; and in such an instance contravention is not a crime<sup>6</sup>.

Whether a statute creates a criminal offence is a question of interpretation: eg if the word 'penalty' as distinct from the word 'fine' is used, the general rule is that the penalty must be recovered as a debt in a civil court: see Brown v Allweather Mechanical Grouting Co Ltd supra at 446 and at 475 per Lord Goddard CJ; but cf R v Paget (1881) 8 QBD 151. The Common Informers Act 1951 s 1(3) (amended by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46) substituted fines for the penalties previously recoverable in many common informer actions and made the acts for which the penalties had been recoverable into crimes.

The word 'offence' is sometimes used to describe a criminal act (see R v Paget supra) and sometimes to describe an act which is not criminal (see A-G v Radloff supra at 101; Brown v Allweather Mechanical Grouting Co Ltd supra). There is a rule of statutory interpretation that 'a man is not to be put in peril upon an ambiguity': London and North Eastern Ry Co v Berriman [1946] AC 278 at 313-314, [1946] 1 All ER 255 at 270, HL, per Lord Simonds.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(1) THE NATURE OF CRIME/3. Legal punishment.

3. Legal punishment.

Legal punishment is punishment awarded in a process instituted at the suit of the Crown standing forward as prosecutor on behalf of the subject on public grounds<sup>1</sup>. Such process, once instituted, may be stayed:

- 1 (1) after the indictment has been signed only at the instance of the Attorney General acting on behalf of the Crown<sup>2</sup>;
- 2 (2) during the preliminary stages of the proceedings in magistrates' courts, and subject to statutory conditions, by the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>3</sup>; or
- 3 (3) after a person has been sent for trial but before the indictment has been preferred, and subject to statutory conditions, by the Director of Public Prosecutions or a specified authority<sup>4</sup>, and the punishment, when imposed, may be remitted only by the Crown<sup>5</sup> or by Parliament.

In the absence of statutory provision to the contrary any person may of his own initiative, and without any preliminary consent, institute criminal proceedings with a view to an indictment: see PARA 1071 post. The prosecution is, however, always at the suit of the Crown. Hence criminal proceedings were known as Pleas of the Crown. ## (2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME

(i) In general

4. The constituents of crime in general.

A person is not to be convicted of a crime unless he has, by his conduct, brought about those elements which by common law or statute constitute that crime, and in general a person does not incur criminal liability unless he had the requisite state of mind as to those elements which constitute the crime. These concepts are traditionally expressed in the maxim 'actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea'<sup>1</sup>. In some instances a person may be convicted of a crime if he has negligently brought about its constituent elements<sup>2</sup>.

In certain crimes, nearly all of which are created by statute, a person may incur criminal liability even though he was blamelessly inadvertent as to one or more of the elements of that crime<sup>3</sup>. Such crimes are known as crimes of strict liability. Notwithstanding that the statute creating an offence contains no expression indicating that a mental element is a necessary constituent, there is a presumption in favour of the requirement of mens rea<sup>4</sup>; and, before criminal liability without fault can be imposed, this presumption must be displaced by clear words or by necessary implication<sup>5</sup>.

1 The maxim originated with Coke: see 3 Co Inst 6. It has been said that 'the maxim not only looks more instructive than it really is, but suggests fallacies which it does not precisely state': 2 Stephen's History of the Criminal Law 95. See also Haughton v Smith [1975] AC 476 at 491-492, 58 Cr App Rep 198 at 206-207, HL, per Lord Hailsham of St Marylebone LC ('the phrase means 'an act does not make a man guilty of a crime unless his mind be also guilty'. It is thus not the actus which is reus but the man and his mind respectively . . . it is well to record this as it has frequently led to confusion'); Sweet v Parsley [1970] AC 132 at 162, 53 Cr App Rep 221 at 245, HL, per Lord Diplock.

4 This presumption was categorically affirmed by the House of Lords in Sweet v Parsley [1970] AC 132, 53 Cr App Rep 221, HL; B (A Minor) v DPP [2000] 2 AC 428, [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 65, HL; R v K [2001] UKHL 41, [2002] 1 AC 462, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 121.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(ii) The Criminal Conduct/5. The actus reus.

(ii) The Criminal Conduct

5. The actus reus.

Every crime has specified elements, prescribed by the common law or by the statutory definition of the offence, which together make up its actus reus. The expression actus reus can be summarised as meaning an act (or sometimes an omission or state of affairs) indicated in the definition of the offence charged together with:

- 4 (1) any consequences of that act which are indicated by that definition; and
- 5 (2) any surrounding circumstances so indicated (other than references to the mens rea or element of negligence required on the part of the defendant, or to any defence).

In a criminal trial the prosecution must prove the existence of all those elements constituting the offence; failure to prove the existence of any particular element necessarily involves a failure to establish the commission of the crime<sup>1</sup>. Where, on the other hand, it is proved that the defendant brought about all the constituent elements of the particular crime, he is not entitled to be acquitted merely because certain facts exist which, unknown to him, provided a justification<sup>2</sup>.

1 R v Deller (1952) 36 Cr App Rep 184, CCA (conviction for obtaining by false pretences quashed where prosecution could not prove statement to be untrue though defendant believed it to be untrue).

2 R v Dadson (1850) 2 Den 35, 4 Cox CC 358, CCR (constable, unaware of circumstances which would have justified his use of force, convicted of wounding with intent to cause grievous bodily harm). But see R v McKoy [2002] EWCA Crim 1628, (2002) Times 17 June (where a defendant used force to escape from a police officer, mistakenly believing that he was being unlawfully arrested, it was held that his mistake did not affect his entitlement to use reasonable force to resist unlawful arrest and his conviction for assault occasioning actual bodily harm and another offence was accordingly quashed). As to justification see PARA 16 et seq post.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(ii) The Criminal Conduct/6. Omissions.

6. Omissions.

Save in exceptional circumstances the criminal law imposes no obligation on persons to act so as to prevent the occurrence of harm or wrongdoing. There is no general duty to prevent the commission of crime<sup>1</sup>; nor does a person commit a crime or become a party to it solely because he might reasonably have prevented its commission<sup>2</sup>. Omission to act in a particular way will give rise to criminal liability only where a duty so to act arises at common law or is imposed by statute<sup>3</sup>. Such a duty is exceptional at common law and the criminal law does not ordinarily require a person to be his brother's keeper<sup>4</sup>. Nevertheless, if a person assumes that role, he may incur criminal liability not only for any subsequent acts but also for omissions<sup>5</sup>. In such circumstances there is no need to prove that the defendant had been obliged by law to undertake the particular duty, or that he was bound by contract to care for the other<sup>6</sup>; it is sufficient that he voluntarily undertook the care of another in circumstances in which that other was unable to fend for himself<sup>7</sup>.

Where the defendant inadvertently creates a situation endangering a person or property (so that he lacks the necessary mens rea at that time) he is under a duty to take such steps as lie within his power to try to counteract the danger before it materialises; if he becomes aware of the train of events caused by his act before the resulting harm is complete (and has the necessary mens rea in consequence) but fails to take those steps he can be convicted of the crime which the resulting consequence entails<sup>8</sup>.

It is possible for the person owed the duty to release from it the person owing the duty, either before or at the time that the duty would otherwise require action, even if it is contrary to his best interests, provided that the subject is an adult capable of making a rational decision<sup>9</sup>.

A crime may be so defined that it is impossible or difficult to conceive of circumstances in which the actus reus could be constituted by an omission<sup>10</sup>; but it would seem that, in conjunction with the appropriate mens rea, most offences against the person and most offences against property, including theft<sup>11</sup> and dishonest handling<sup>12</sup>, may be so constituted.

1 A constable has a duty to prevent crime: see R v Dytham [1979] QB 722, [1979] 3 All ER 641, CA (failure by uniformed police officer to intervene when he saw a man being kicked to death; it was held that he could be convicted of the common law offence of misconduct in public office (see PARA 536 post)); and it is an offence for a person to refuse without reasonable excuse to assist in quelling a breach of the peace when called upon by a constable (R v Brown (1841) Car & M 314; and see PARA 738 post).

2 Cf Rice v Connolly [1966] 2 QB 414, [1966] 2 All ER 649, DC (person refusing to answer questions is not 'wilfully obstructing' a police officer even though this may hamper inquiries). See also Swallow v LCC [1916] 1 KB 224, DC.

3 Where pursuant to an Act of Parliament an order is made requiring a corporation to effect certain works, an indictment lies for failure to comply: R v Birmingham and Gloucester Rly Co (1842) 3 QB 223.

4 At common law a parent has a duty to act for the welfare of his child and, if harm is caused to the child by his failure to act, he may be criminally liable for the resulting harm: R v Bubb, R v Hook (1850) 4 Cox CC 455; R v Gibbins, R v Proctor (1918) 13 Cr App Rep 134, CCA. Thus a woman who assumes responsibility for the care of another's child may be liable in respect of a failure to provide food (R v Gibbins, R v Proctor (1918) 13 Cr App Rep 134, CCA) or to provide medical aid (R v Lee, R v Parkes (1917) 13 Cr App Rep 39, CCA). PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(ii) The Criminal Conduct/7. Causation.

7. Causation.

To give rise to criminal liability in a crime whose actus reus specifies a consequence, it is not enough that the defendant had a culpable state of mind: it must be proved that the consequence was caused<sup>1</sup> by some conduct on his part<sup>2</sup>. That conduct need not be the sole or the effective cause of the consequence: it is sufficient, if it is a cause, that is a cause which cannot be dismissed as minimal or as slight or trifling<sup>3</sup>. It is therefore possible to have two or more independent operative causes of a consequence, and any person whose conduct constitutes a substantial (that is, more than minimal) cause may be convicted of an offence in respect of the consequence<sup>4</sup>.

Unless it is so gross as to prevent the defendant's act being a substantial cause, the contributory negligence of the victim is no defence<sup>5</sup>. The existence of a medical condition which rendered the victim more susceptible to death or injury does not prevent attribution of that consequence to the defendant; the defendant must take his victim as he finds him<sup>6</sup>.

The occurrence of an independent intervening natural event causing the specified consequence, which would not have had that effect but for the defendant's act, will not prevent the attribution of the consequence to the defendant if the type of event (as opposed to the details of the particular event) was reasonably foreseeable in the ordinary course of things; in such a case the specified consequence is said to be a 'natural' consequence of the defendant's act<sup>7</sup>.

Where the defendant's act is not an operating cause of the required consequence but nevertheless contributes to it, in that an intervening act by another person, whether the third party or the victim, which is the immediate cause of the consequence, would not have occurred but for the defendant's act, the rule is that the free, deliberate and informed intervention of that other person, who intends to exploit the situation created by the first, but is not acting in concert with him, is normally held to relieve the defendant of criminal responsibility: otherwise an intervening act by another person does not prevent the consequence being attributed to the defendant<sup>8</sup>. A different approach is, however, taken in respect of an offence which imposes a duty which requires one to guard against, or makes one responsible for, the deliberate acts of third parties, as is the case with certain offences of negligence and strict liability: an intervening third party act does not prevent attribution of the consequence to the conduct of the person under the duty (the defendant) unless that act was extraordinary, rather than a normal fact of life<sup>9</sup>. In addition, if the defendant prepares a syringe of a controlled drug for immediate self-injection by another, who self-injects it, the defendant may be convicted of causing a noxious substance to be administered to the other<sup>10</sup> and, if the other dies in consequence of that injection, of manslaughter<sup>11</sup>.

If the defendant puts the victim in fear of harm and the victim brings about his own death or injures himself in trying to escape, the victim's death or injury can be attributed to the defendant, provided that the victim's reaction was within the foreseeable range of possible responses of a reasonable person in the victim's situation<sup>12</sup>.

If a wound is inflicted and death results, the person who inflicted the wound will be held to have caused the death although the victim may have neglected to use proper remedies<sup>13</sup>, or refused to undergo a necessary operation<sup>14</sup>. Similarly, where a wound or hurt has necessitated medical treatment and such treatment is negligent so that death ensues, the wound will be regarded as causing the death if it continues to be an operating cause at the time of death<sup>15</sup>. Moreover, if the original wound is not an operating cause of death because the deceased does not die from the wound caused by the defendant but from the negligent treatment given for it, the wound will be regarded as causing death unless the treatment is so independent of the defendant's conduct and in itself so potent as to render the contribution to death of the defendant's conduct insignificant<sup>16</sup>.

1 In the context of homicide offences, 'cause' simply means 'accelerate': see R v Dyson [1908] 2 KB 454, 1 Cr App Rep 13, CCA; R v Adams (1957) unreported, summarised at [1957] Crim LR 375; and PARA 89 post.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(iii) The Mental Element/8. Mens rea in general.

(iii) The Mental Element

8. Mens rea in general.

As a general rule every crime requires a mental element<sup>1</sup>, the nature of which will depend upon the definition of the particular crime in question. Expressions connoting the requirement of a mental element include: 'with intent'<sup>2</sup>; 'recklessly'<sup>3</sup>; 'maliciously'<sup>4</sup>; 'wilfully'<sup>5</sup>; 'knowingly'<sup>6</sup>; 'knowing or believing'<sup>7</sup>; 'fraudulently'<sup>8</sup>; and 'dishonestly'<sup>9</sup>. Each of these expressions is capable of bearing a meaning which differs from that ascribed to any other. The meaning of each must be determined in the context in which it appears, and the same expression may bear a different meaning in different contexts<sup>10</sup>.

Although the view has been expressed that it is impossible to ascribe any particular meaning to the term mens rea<sup>11</sup>, concepts such as those of intention, recklessness and knowledge are commonly used as the basis for criminal liability and in some respects may be said to be fundamental to it.

1 See, however, R v Larsonneur (1933) 24 Cr App Rep 74, CCA; and PARA 6 note 1 ante. Even in crimes of strict liability some mental element is normally required: see PARA 15 note 3 post.

2 See PARAS 10, 13 post.

3 See PARA 11 post.

4 For the meaning of 'maliciously' in the context of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 23 (as amended) see R v Cunningham [1957] 2 QB 396, 41 Cr App Rep 155, CCA (held to import intention or recklessness as to the particular kind of harm done: see further PARA 124 post). In the context of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 20 (as amended), in order to prove that the defendant acted 'maliciously' it is sufficient to prove that he intended his act to result in some unlawful bodily harm to some other person, albeit of a minor nature, or was reckless as to the risk that his act might result in such harm: see R v Savage [1992] 1 AC 699, [1991] 4 All ER 698, HL; and see further PARA 120 post.

5 For the meaning of 'wilfully' in the context of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1 (as amended) (cruelty to a child: see PARA 143 post; and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 611) see R v Sheppard [1981] AC 394, 72 Cr App Rep 82, HL; in the context of the Malicious Damage Act 1861 s 36 (wilful obstruction of railway: see PARA 344 post) see R v Gittins [1982] RTR 363, CA; in the context of the common law offence of misconduct in public office (see PARA 536 post) see A-G's Reference (No 3 of 2003) [2004] EWCA Crim 868, [2005] QB 73, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 366, CA. In these offences there is no material difference between wilfulness and recklessness (see PARA 11 post), and the same is doubtless true of 'wilfulness' in the context of other offences in the absence of a judicial decision to the contrary.

6 For the meaning of 'knowingly' in the context of the Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 4(1) (see PARA 711 post) see R v Hallam [1957] 1 QB 569, 41 Cr App Rep 111, CCA; overruling R v Dacey [1939] 2 All ER 641, 27 Cr App Rep 86, CCA.

Knowledge includes the state of mind of a person who shuts his eyes to the obvious: see Roper v Taylor's Central Garages (Exeter) Ltd [1951] 2 TLR 284 at 288-289 per Devlin J; James & Son Ltd v Smee [1955] 1 QB 78 at 91, [1954] 3 All ER 273 at 278 per Parker J; Warner v Metropolitan Police Comr [1969] 2 AC 256 at 279, 52 Cr App Rep 373 at 389, HL, per Lord Reid; Westminster City Council v Croxallgrange Ltd [1986] 2 All ER 353, 83 Cr App Rep 155, HL.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(iii) The Mental Element/9. Extent to which mens rea is required.

9. Extent to which mens rea is required.

In principle, in order to establish guilt of a common law or statutory offence, there must be proof of some form of mens rea in relation to all the elements which constitute the offence, although an offence may be defined (or interpreted) in such a manner as to require intention or recklessness or some other form of mens rea to be shown as to one or more elements, but not to be shown in relation to every one<sup>1</sup>. Nevertheless, even in the case of offences of strict liability, some mental element must normally be proved<sup>2</sup>.

1 On a charge of assault occasioning actual bodily harm contrary to the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 47 (as amended) (see PARA 149 post), it must be shown that the defendant intended to commit the assault, but not that he intended or foresaw that the assault would occasion actual bodily harm: R v Savage [1992] 1 AC 699, [1991] 4 All ER 698, HL; and see also R v Roberts (1971) 56 Cr App Rep 95, CA. See also the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 23 (as amended) (administering a noxious thing so as thereby to endanger life: see PARA 124 post); s 27 (as amended) (exposing a child whereby life is endangered: see PARA 143 post); the Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 2 (as substituted) (causing explosion likely to endanger life or property: see PARA 127 post); the Administration of Justice Act 1970 s 40 (as amended) (harassment of debtors in a manner calculated to cause distress: see PARA 838 post); the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 2(1) (so damaging an aircraft as to be likely to endanger its safety in flight: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 628); the Police Act 1996 s 90(2) (wearing articles calculated to deceive others into thinking the wearer is in police uniform: see PARA 379 post; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 481). In Turner v Shearer [1973] 1 All ER 397, [1972] 1 WLR 1387, DC, it was held that 'calculated to deceive' under the Police Act 1964 s 52(2) (repealed: see now the Police Act 1996 s 90(2)) meant 'likely to deceive' and that accordingly it was not a defence that the defendant did not intend to deceive. See also R v Davison [1972] 3 All ER 1121, 57 Cr App Rep 113, CA.

In such cases as those referred to above it may be said that the particular statute lends itself to the interpretation that intention or foresight is not required as to an element in the offence. A statutory provision may, however, be interpreted so as to require intention or recklessness as to some of the elements of the offence but not as to others, although the statute does not naturally lend itself to such an interpretation. On a charge of malicious wounding contrary to the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 20 (as amended) (see PARA 120 post), it is necessary to show only that the defendant intended or was reckless as to some unlawful bodily harm to another, and not that he intended or foresaw the wounding: R v Savage [1992] 1 AC 699, [1991] 4 All ER 698, HL. On a charge of assaulting a constable in the execution of his duty contrary to the Police Act 1996 s 89(1) (as amended) (see PARA 735 post; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 481), it is necessary to show that the defendant had the mens rea for the assault on another but not that he knew that the other was a constable acting in the execution of his duty: R v Forbes, R v Webb (1865) 10 Cox CC 362; R v Maxwell, R v Clanchy (1909) 2 Cr App Rep 26, CCA; Albert v Lavin [1982] AC 546, 74 Cr App Rep 150, HL; and see also McBride v Turnock [1964] Crim LR 456, DC.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(iii) The Mental Element/10. Intention.

10. Intention.

The mental element required to constitute many serious crimes is an intention to bring about a specified consequence, which may or may not be required to result from the defendant's conduct; such crimes can be committed only by intention<sup>1</sup>. A person intends a consequence where it is his aim or purpose to bring it about<sup>2</sup>. Where he has this aim or purpose, he acts intentionally as to that consequence, though, to his knowledge, the chances of his causing the result are small. If he does not have this aim or purpose, he may nevertheless be found to have intended it in the rare case where he nevertheless appreciated that the consequence was virtually certain to result: where (in such a rare case) it is necessary to direct the jury on the matter, it should be directed that it is not entitled to find the necessary intention unless it is sure that the consequence was a virtual certainty (barring some unforeseen intervention) as a result of the defendant's actions and that the defendant appreciated that such was the case<sup>3</sup>.

In order to constitute some offences the defendant must have acted with intent to do some further act. In these offences (and certain other offences) only proof of aim or purpose can suffice to prove intention; the requirement of intention is in a context where it would be inappropriate to speak of intention where the defendant does not aim to achieve the relevant thing<sup>4</sup>.

Intention is not the same thing as motive<sup>5</sup>. The mental element of a crime ordinarily involves no reference to motive<sup>6</sup>.

1 Eg the Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 s 1 (see PARA 108 post) requires an 'intent to destroy the life of the child'. The offences created by the Aviation Security Act 1982 ss 2, 3 (which are concerned with destroying, damaging or endangering the safety of aircraft: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARAS 628-629) require that the specified acts should be done 'unlawfully and intentionally'. The offence created by the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 1(3) (as amended) (see PARA 609 post) requires that the defendant landlord should intend to cause the residential occupier to give up the occupation of the premises. For the offence of murder the defendant must intend unlawfully to kill, or do grievous bodily harm to, another human being: see PARA 89 post.

2 R v Mohan [1976] QB 1 at 8, 60 Cr App Rep 272 at 276, CA, per James LJ. Such aim or purpose is not to be equated with desire: see R v Moloney [1985] AC 905 at 926, 81 Cr App Rep 93 at 106-107, HL, per Lord Bridge; R v Nedrick [1986] 3 All ER 1 at 3, 83 Cr App Rep 267 at 270, CA. In so far as desire predicates something that is wanted because it causes pleasure or involves gain, desire in this sense is not essential to criminal intention; a killing is no less intentional where it is done by a parent to spare a child pain and suffering: R v Simpson (1915) 11 Cr App Rep 218, CCA; R v Gray (6 October 1965, unreported); cf R v Steane [1947] KB 997, 32 Cr App Rep 61, CCA.

4 In addition, there have been rare occasions where a court has held that necessary intent for an offence requires proof of an aim or purpose: see eg R v Ahlers [1915] 1 KB 616, 11 Cr App Rep 63, CCA (treason by adhering to the Queen's enemies). See also Selvanayagam v R [1951] AC 83, PC.

5 For the meaning of 'motive' see Crofter Hand Woven Harris Tweed Co Ltd v Veitch [1942] AC 435 at 452, [1942] 1 All ER 142 at 152-153, HL, per Viscount Maugham; Hyam v DPP [1975] AC 55 at 73, 59 Cr App Rep 91 at 100-101, HL, per Lord Hailsham of St Marylebone LC.

6 A bad motive is no more reason for convicting a person of crime than a good motive is an excuse for acquitting him: see eg R v Simpson (1915) 11 Cr App Rep 218, CCA; R v Gray (6 October 1965, unreported); and see R v Sharpe (1857) Dears & B 160, CCR; R v Hicklin (1868) LR 3 QB 360; R v Booth (1872) 12 Cox CC 231;

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(iii) The Mental Element/11. Recklessness.

11. Recklessness.

Recklessness on the part of the defendant is sufficient mens rea for certain statutory offences<sup>1</sup> and the common law crime of manslaughter<sup>2</sup>. Recklessness means the taking of an unreasonable risk of which the risk-taker is aware: a person acts 'recklessly' with respect to a circumstance when he is aware of a risk that did or would exist, and acts recklessly with respect to a consequence when he is aware of a risk that it will occur, and, in either case, it is, in the circumstances known to him, unreasonable to take the risk<sup>3</sup>. Provided that it is proved that the defendant was aware of a risk of a relevant circumstance or consequence, it is irrelevant that for some reason, such as bad temper, he chooses to disregard the risk or to put it to the back of his mind or to close his mind to it, not caring whether the risk materialises or not<sup>4</sup>.

Where a statute prohibits the doing of an act 'maliciously', this imports intention or recklessness<sup>5</sup>.

1 Eg the offences of criminal damage contrary to the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 (see PARA 334 post).

2 See PARA 92 et seq post.

12. Transferred fault.

Where a person who commits the actus reus of a particular crime acts with the necessary intent or recklessness, he may be convicted notwithstanding that his conduct takes effect in a manner which was unintended or unforeseen<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> See R v Latimer (1886) 17 QBD 359, CCR (the defendant aimed a blow at another's head: the blow did not harm that person but wounded a third person, and it was held that the defendant could be convicted of unlawfully and maliciously wounding that third person contrary to the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 20 (see PARA 120 post) because he had an intent to injure and it was irrelevant that he had not intended to injure that person specifically); cf R v Pembliton (1874) LR 2 CCR 119 (the defendant threw a stone at persons fighting, which missed but smashed nearby window: conviction for maliciously damaging window contrary to the Malicious Damage Act 1861 s 51 quashed because he had acted with intent to injure persons and not with intent to damage property, and the jury had not been directed to consider whether the defendant had been reckless as to the risk of breaking the window). See also R v Mitchell [1983] QB 741, 76 Cr App Rep 293, CA (defendant's unlawful act directed at one person led to the death of another; conviction for manslaughter upheld).

A person who injures a pregnant woman with intent to do her unlawful grievous bodily harm (ie having the mens rea for murder) and thereby causes the premature birth and subsequent death of her child cannot be convicted of the murder of that child, although he may be convicted of manslaughter: A-G's Reference (No 3 of 1994) [1998] AC 245, [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 91, HL.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(iii) The Mental Element/13. Proof of intention and foresight.

13. Proof of intention and foresight.

Whenever an offence is defined so as to require proof that a person intended or foresaw a particular result, the court or jury is not bound in law to infer that such person intended or foresaw that result by reason only of its being a natural and probable consequence of his actions, but must decide whether he did intend or foresee that result by reference to all the evidence, drawing such inferences from the evidence as may be proper in the circumstances<sup>1</sup>. Foresight of the consequences of an act does not necessarily imply the existence of intention but it may be a factor from which, when considered together with all the other evidence, the jury may find that the defendant had the alleged intention<sup>2</sup>. When directing juries about the mental element in any crime of intent, judges should avoid any elaboration or paraphrase as to what is meant by 'intent'<sup>3</sup>. Some further direction may, however, be necessary if the prosecution invites the jury to find intent from the foresight of a consequence as virtually certain to result<sup>4</sup>. As a matter of evidence, the greater the probability of a consequence, the more likely it is that it was foreseen and, if that consequence was foreseen, the more likely it is that it was also intended<sup>5</sup>.

1 See the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 8 (see PARA 1366 post), which in effect reversed the decision in DPP v Smith [1961] AC 290, 44 Cr App Rep 261, HL, to the effect that there was an irrebuttable presumption that a man is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts; and see Frankland v R, Moore v R [1987] AC 576, 86 Cr App Rep 116, PC. The Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 8 deals not with substantive law but with the law of evidence: see DPP v Majewski [1977] AC 443, 62 Cr App Rep 262, HL.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(iii) The Mental Element/14. Negligence.

14. Negligence.

Criminal liability for negligence is exceptional at common law; manslaughter and public nuisance appear to be the only common law crimes which may result from negligence<sup>1</sup>. Crimes where negligence is of the essence may be created by statute<sup>2</sup>, and a statute may provide that negligence as to an element of the actus reus suffices<sup>3</sup>. In addition, a statute may provide that it is a defence to charges brought under its provisions for the defendant to prove that he was not negligent<sup>4</sup>.

What is or is not negligent involves a consideration of that which a reasonable person would or would not have done, or been aware of, in the circumstances<sup>5</sup>. A statutory provision may be so phrased as to require consideration of the defendant's knowledge, intelligence or maturity in order to determine whether it was negligent for him to have acted as he did<sup>6</sup>.

Degrees of negligence are recognised; thus negligence which is sufficient to sustain a charge of driving without due care and attention<sup>7</sup> is not sufficient to found a charge of dangerous driving<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to manslaughter see PARA 92 post; and as to public nuisance see NUISANCE vol 78 (2010) PARAS 105-106.

2 See eg the Road Traffic Act 1988 ss 2, 3 (both as substituted) (dangerous driving; driving without due care and attention); and ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARAS 964, 971.

3 See eg the Official Secrets Act 1989 s 5(2) (disclosure without lawful authority of information protected from disclosure, knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that it is protected from disclosure: see PARA 487 post); and the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 1 (rape: absence of reasonable belief that victim consents to sexual penetration required: see PARA 165 post).

4 See eg the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 s 24 (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 504); the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 s 28 (see MEDICINAL PRODUCTS AND DRUGS vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 262); the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 s 22.

5 On a charge of driving a vehicle without due care and attention the defendant's physical infirmity or lack of experience is irrelevant since by driving a motor vehicle he has undertaken to conform to an objective and impersonal standard: Simpson v Peat [1952] 2 QB 24, [1952] 1 All ER 447, DC. See also McCrone v Riding [1938] 1 All ER 157 at 158, DC, per Lord Hewart CJ ('The question is not a question dependent upon inexperience or lack of skill. It is a question dependent upon lack of care and attention . . . 'Due care and attention' is something not related to the proficiency of the driver but governed by the essential needs of the public on the highway').

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(2) THE ELEMENTS OF CRIME/(iii) The Mental Element/15. Strict liability.

15. Strict liability.

Despite the general rule that criminal liability is not imposed unless a person has mens rea as to the constituents of a crime<sup>1</sup>, there are instances in which strict liability is imposed. Such instances mainly arise under statute<sup>2</sup>. Where strict liability is imposed, the defendant incurs criminal liability though he was ignorant of one or more of the factors which rendered his conduct criminal<sup>3</sup>, and even though he was blamelessly inadvertent because his ignorance is not attributable to any default or negligence on his part.

In all statutory offences whenever a provision is silent as to mens rea there is a presumption that the mens rea is nonetheless an essential element of the offence<sup>4</sup>. That presumption can be rebutted only by express provision or by necessary implication, and a 'necessary implication' connotes one which is compellingly clear, truly necessary and free from ambiguity; also the presumption must not involve an internal inconsistency<sup>5</sup>.

In determining whether the effect of a provision is by necessary implication to rebut the presumption that the offence requires mens rea, the following considerations are relevant:

- 6 (1) the language of the provision creating the offence, and in particular the presence in other offences in the statute of words expressly requiring mens rea, although such presence and the absence of such an express requirement in the offence in question does not necessarily mean that mens rea is excluded<sup>6</sup>;
- 7 (2) whether the act is criminal in the generally accepted sense or is an act which, in the public interest, is prohibited under a penalty<sup>7</sup>;
- 8 (3) the nature of the mischief at which the provision is aimed and whether the imposition of strict liability will tend to suppress that mischief<sup>8</sup>, although strict liability will not be inferred simply because the offence may be described as a grave social evil<sup>9</sup>; and
- 9 (4) the more serious the offence, the greater is the weight to be attached to the presumption that mens rea is required<sup>10</sup>.

1 See PARA 8 ante.

2 There are some instances of strict liability imposed at common law: eg outraging public decency (see PARA 764 post); and contempt of court (see CONTEMPT OF COURT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 410 et seq). It has also been suggested that, as a result of the majority decision in Whitehouse v Gay News Ltd, Whitehouse v Lemon [1979] AC 617, 68 Cr App Rep 381, HL, blasphemy is a common law offence of strict liability: cf the minority judgments of Lord Diplock and Lord Edmund-Davies and the majority judgments of Viscount Dilhorne, Lord Russell and Lord Scarman. Quare whether the minority opinion is to be preferred. As to blasphemy and blasphemous libel see PARA 826 post.

The imposition of vicarious criminal liability (see PARA 59 et seq post) may be regarded as a common law development of strict liability.

3 An offence may be so defined as to require intention or knowledge as to certain of its elements but not as to others (cf para 9 ante).

(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME

16. In general.

The general principle of the common law is that the prosecution must prove the guilt of a defendant beyond all reasonable doubt<sup>1</sup>; it is not incumbent upon a defendant to establish his innocence<sup>2</sup>. Where one of those matters affording a defence at common law, such as accident<sup>3</sup>, consent<sup>4</sup>, self-defence, prevention of crime and related defences<sup>5</sup>, duress by threats<sup>6</sup>, duress of circumstances<sup>7</sup>, necessity<sup>8</sup>, or non-insane automatism<sup>9</sup> is set up as a defence, the burden of proving the absence of such justification lies upon the prosecution<sup>10</sup>; this is also the rule in the case of provocation such as to reduce a killing from murder to manslaughter<sup>11</sup>. The burden of proving insanity<sup>12</sup> or the statutory defences of diminished responsibility<sup>13</sup> or marital coercion<sup>14</sup> lies upon the defence; but the standard of proof is not as high as that required of the prosecution to prove guilt<sup>15</sup>.

3 See PARA 19 post.

4 A valid consent is a defence in respect of many offences against the person (see PARA 115 post) and certain sexual offences (see PARA 163 post). See also PARA 298 post (taking a conveyance).

5 See PARAS 20-22 post. The 'defences' of self-defence, prevention of crime and related defences are different from the defences of duress by threats, duress of circumstances and marital coercion because, if successfully pleaded, they render the defendant's conduct lawful; they justify it, as opposed simply to excusing him from liability for conduct which is nevertheless unlawful. The 'defences' of consent and of necessity also have this effect.

17. Mistake or ignorance of law.

Ignorance or mistake of law is no defence to a criminal charge; mens rea does not involve knowledge on the part of a defendant that his acts or omissions were against the law and constituted a crime<sup>1</sup>.

Where a person acts under a mistake of civil law which precludes him from having the requisite mental element for a particular offence, he cannot be guilty of that offence<sup>2</sup>. This is the case whether or not it was reasonable to make the mistake<sup>3</sup>.

1 R v Bailey (1800) Russ & Ry 1, CCR; R v Esop (1836) 7 C & P 456; Re Barronet and Allain (1852) 1 E & B 1. If the defendant is aware of the factual situation which constitutes an element of the actus reus of the offence (eg the absence of a licence), it is irrelevant that because of his ignorance of the criminal law he does not realise its legal significance: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1995) [1996] 4 All ER 21, [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 320, CA. See also R v Derriviere (1969) 53 Cr App Rep 637, CA. A mistaken belief that a prosecution will not be instituted in respect of the offence is not a defence: R v Arrowsmith [1975] 1 All ER 463, 60 Cr App Rep 211, CA. Where erroneous legal advice has been given by an official in the organisation which subsequently prosecutes the defendant, a court can stay the prosecution as an abuse of process if in the light of the defendant's reliance on it the prosecution is unfair: Posternobile plc v Brent London Borough Council (1997) Times, 8 December, DC. Where a person is charged with contravening a statutory instrument, it is a defence if he proves that the instrument had not been issued by or under the authority of Her Majesty's Stationery Office at the date of the alleged contravention, unless it is proved by the prosecution that at that date reasonable steps had been taken for the purpose of bringing the purport of the instrument to the notice of the public, or of the persons likely to be affected by it, or of the person charged: see the Statutory Instruments Act 1946 s 3(2) (amended by the Statutory Instruments (Production and Sale) Act 1996 s 1(1)(a)); and STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1511. A continuing act or proceeding, not originally unlawful, commenced before the passing of a statute which prohibits it, cannot be treated as unlawful by reason of the passing of the statute until a reasonable time has been allowed for its discontinuance: Burns v Nowell (1880) 5 QBD 444 at 454, CA, per Baggallay LJ.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/18. Mistake of fact.

18. Mistake of fact.

Where an offence is so defined that proof of intention, recklessness, knowledge or other state of mind is necessary<sup>1</sup>, mistake of fact is a defence provided that, on the facts as the defendant believed them to be, he did not have the mens rea required to constitute the offence charged<sup>2</sup>. The defence is made out provided that the defendant's belief was honestly<sup>3</sup>, even if unreasonably, held<sup>4</sup>. Where, however, an offence is so defined that negligence<sup>5</sup> as to all, or some, elements of the actus reus constitutes sufficient mens rea, mistake of fact as to such an element affords a defence only if the mistaken belief was honestly held and there were reasonable grounds for holding it: a person who acts under an unreasonable mistake is necessarily negligent<sup>6</sup>.

Mistake of fact, however reasonable, does not afford a defence to crimes of strict liability<sup>7</sup>.

4 The reasonableness of the defendant's belief is material to the question of whether the belief was held by him at all; but, if it was in fact held, its unreasonableness is irrelevant: DPP v Morgan [1976] AC 182, 61 Cr App Rep 136, HL; R v Kimber [1983] 3 All ER 316, 77 Cr App Rep 225; R v Williams [1987] 3 All ER 411, 78 Cr App Rep 276, CA; Beckford v R [1988] AC 130, [1987] 3 All ER 425, PC.

5 See PARA 14 ante.

6 In manslaughter by gross negligence a material mistake which is not grossly negligent (ie grossly unreasonable) will excuse the defendant: R v Lamb [1967] 2 QB 981, 51 Cr App Rep 417, CA.

7 As to crimes of strict liability see PARA 15 ante.

19. Accident.

In offences for which an intent to produce a consequence is required, it is a defence that, although the defendant did the act which would be criminal if done with intent, it was done by accident so that the necessary intent was absent<sup>1</sup>. Where a prohibited consequence occurs by accident, a defendant can be convicted of an offence in which liability may be based on recklessness or negligence if he has been reckless or negligent as to that consequence<sup>2</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/20. Use of force in the prevention of crime or in effecting or assisting in lawful arrest.

20. Use of force in the prevention of crime or in effecting or assisting in lawful arrest.

A person may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances in the prevention of crime<sup>1</sup> or in effecting or assisting in the lawful arrest of offenders or persons unlawfully at large<sup>2</sup>. The use of reasonable force for such a purpose renders the defendant's conduct lawful<sup>3</sup>.

At common law the rules relating to the use of force in such circumstances were not altogether clear and appear to have varied according to the situation in which the force was used. Under the present law the same requirement, namely that the force used should be reasonable in the circumstances, is applicable to all cases where force is used in the prevention of crime or lawful arrest of another and the common law rules are to that extent superseded<sup>4</sup>. In determining whether the force used was reasonable account should be taken of all the circumstances of the case in which the defendant believed he was placed, including the nature and degree of force used on each side, the relative strength on each side, the seriousness of the evil to be prevented and the possibility of preventing it by other means<sup>5</sup>. This statutory provision is of general application<sup>6</sup>, but it would not be reasonable to use even slight force to prevent very trivial offences<sup>7</sup>. The circumstances in which it can be considered reasonable to kill another in the prevention of crime must be of an extreme kind; they could probably arise only in the case of an attack against the person which is likely to cause death or serious bodily injury and where killing the attacker is the only practicable means of preventing the harm.

The ordinary rules relating to mistake of fact are applicable so that where the force used is reasonable having regard to the facts as the defendant supposed them to have been, the defendant commits no offence although the force used is excessive having regard to the facts as they were<sup>8</sup>.

Where the force used is unreasonable and death results, the defendant is liable to be convicted of murder or manslaughter according to his mens rea; there is no special rule to the effect that death caused by the use of excessive force in the prevention of crime can only be manslaughter<sup>9</sup>.

1 'Crime' means a crime under English law; a crime against peace or a crime of aggression (which is only a crime under international law) is not a 'crime' for these purposes: R v Jones [2006] UKHL 16, [2006] 2 All ER 741, [2006] 2 WLR 772.

2 Criminal Law Act 1967 s 3(1). See PARA 926 post. 'Crime' in the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 3(1) refers to a crime under domestic law, and not to something which is a crime only under international law: R v Jones [2004] EWCA Crim 1981, [2005] QB 259, [2004] 4 All ER 955. 3 The defendant need not have used the force personally; the use of a dog in self-defence, the effecting of an arrest and so on is capable of amounting to the use of reasonable force: Pollard v Chief Constable of West Yorkshire [1999] PIQR P219, CA (use of properly trained and handled police dog to effect an arrest). Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/1. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/21. Self-defence or defence of another.

21. Self-defence or defence of another.

If the act alleged to constitute a crime is done in self-defence or defence of another, it is justified and the defendant's conduct is lawful provided that no more force is used than is necessary for mere defence<sup>1</sup>.

A person acting in self-defence is normally acting to prevent the commission of a crime, as is a person acting in defence of another. The test to be applied in cases of self-defence or defence of another is now established<sup>2</sup> to be the same as for cases of prevention of crime<sup>3</sup>, that is the force used in self-defence or in defence of another must be reasonable in the circumstances as the defendant believed them to be. Thus genuine belief in facts which would justify the defendant using force in self-defence may be relied upon even if there are no reasonable grounds for the belief and it results in the use of force which is in fact unreasonable<sup>4</sup>.

Provided the force used is reasonable, a person is entitled to defend not only himself or a member of his family, but even a complete stranger if the stranger is subject to unlawful attack by others<sup>5</sup>. Acts of self-defence are not limited to spontaneous acts done in response to actual violence, but the threatened danger must be reasonably imminent and must be of a nature which could not be met by more pacific means<sup>6</sup>.

In deciding whether the force used was reasonable, all the circumstances as the defendant believed them to be may be considered. In deciding whether the defendant used reasonable force account may be taken of his physical characteristics but not (except in 'exceptional circumstances' making the evidence specially probative) the fact that he was suffering from a psychiatric condition<sup>7</sup>. The matter is one of fact and not one of law, hence it cannot be ruled that a person who is attacked must retreat before retaliating. A person's opportunity to retreat with safety is a factor to be taken into account in deciding whether his conduct was reasonable, as is his willingness to temporise or disengage himself before resorting to force<sup>8</sup>. A man is not obliged to refrain from going where he may lawfully go because he has reason to believe that he may be attacked, and is not thereby deprived of his right of self-defence<sup>9</sup>. A person who kills someone in a quarrel which he has started is not thereby precluded from relying on self-defence if the retaliation by the victim is disproportionate<sup>10</sup>.

At the trial the judge need not leave the issue of self-defence to the jury if it is not raised by the defence and there is no evidence to support it<sup>11</sup>.

Where the force used is unreasonable and death results, the defendant is liable to be convicted of murder or manslaughter according to his mens rea; there is no special rule to the effect that death caused by the use of excessive force in self-defence can only be manslaughter<sup>12</sup>.

No defence is available if what the defendant is defending himself or another against is neither a criminal nor an unlawful act<sup>13</sup>.

22. Defence of property.

Where a person in defending his property is also acting in the prevention of crime, he may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances as he believes them to be<sup>1</sup>. Where no crime is involved, as where there is merely a trespass, the same rule of reasonable force in the circumstances as the defendant believed them to be is applicable<sup>2</sup>. No defence is available if what the defendant is defending property against is neither a criminal nor an unlawful act<sup>3</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/23. Duress by threats.

23. Duress by threats.

Duress by threats provides a defence to a charge of any offence<sup>1</sup> other than murder<sup>2</sup>, attempted murder<sup>3</sup> and possibly some forms of treason<sup>4</sup>. The defence is concerned with the case where the defendant commits the actus reus of an offence with the relevant mens rea but is induced to act by a threat made by another person (or a reasonable belief in such a threat) to the effect that, unless the defendant commits the offence charged<sup>5</sup>, harm will be done to him or a third person. The defence involves both a subjective and an objective test<sup>6</sup>. Where the defence is open to the defendant on his account of the facts, it should be left to the jury to determine:

- 10 (1) whether the defendant was, or might have been, impelled to act as he did because as a result of what he reasonably believed<sup>7</sup> another person had said or done he had good cause to fear that otherwise death or serious physical injury<sup>8</sup> would result to him or a person for whom he would reasonably regard himself as responsible<sup>9</sup>; and
- 11 (2) if so, whether a sober person of reasonable firmness, sharing the characteristics<sup>10</sup> of the defendant, would have responded to the situation by acting as the defendant did<sup>11</sup>.

Duress by threats is not available as a defence if it is proved that the defendant failed to take advantage of an opportunity to neutralise the effects of the threat which a reasonable person of a sort similar to the defendant in his position would have taken<sup>12</sup>.

The defence is available only where the threat was operative and effective at the time of the act or omission alleged to constitute the offence<sup>13</sup>, and is not available to a person when as a result of his voluntary association with others engaged in criminal activity he has foreseen or ought reasonably to have foreseen the risk of being subjected to any compulsion by acts of violence<sup>14</sup>.

Where it is sought to rely on duress as a defence, the defendant must show a proper foundation for the defence so that the issue is fit and proper to be considered by the jury; once this is done, it is for the prosecution to establish beyond reasonable doubt that the defence is not made out<sup>15</sup>.

1 R v Hudson, R v Taylor [1971] 2 QB 202 at 206, 56 Cr App Rep 1 at 4, CA, per Widgery LJ. See the following cases where the defence has been recognised as applicable: R v Shiartos (1961, unreported) (criminal damage, including arson); R v Gill [1963] 2 All ER 688, 47 Cr App Rep 166, CCA (theft); R v Hudson, R v Taylor supra (perjury); R v Baker [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 335, CA (robbery); R v K (1983) 78 Cr App Rep 82, CA (contempt of court); R v Ortiz (1986) 83 Cr App Rep 173, CA (possessing or supplying controlled drugs); R v Panton [2001] EWCA Crim 611, [2001] All ER (D) 134 (Mar) (possession of controlled drugs with intent to supply); R v Valderrama-Vega [1985] Crim LR 220, CA (being concerned in the importation of controlled drugs).

2 R v Howe [1987] AC 417, 85 Cr App Rep 32, HL (overruling DPP for Northern Ireland v Lynch [1975] AC 653, sub nom Lynch v DPP for Northern Ireland [1975] 1 All ER 913, HL). See also Abbott v R [1977] AC 755, 63 Cr App Rep 241, CA.

3 R v Gotts [1992] 2 AC 412, 94 Cr App Rep 312, HL.

4 There appears to be no decision which unequivocally denies the defence to the principal in treason (see M'Growther's Case (1746) 18 State Tr 391; R v Oldcastle (1419) 1 Hale PC 50) and, while there are dicta to this effect (see eg R v Hudson, R v Taylor [1971] 2 QB 202 at 206, 56 Cr App Rep 1 at 4, CA), the point may now be regarded as open; cf the observations in DPP for Northern Ireland v Lynch [1975] AC 653 at 672, sub nom Lynch v DPP for Northern Ireland [1975] 1 All ER 913 at 919, HL, per Lord Morris of Borth-y-Gest, and at 707-708 and 949 per Lord Edmund-Davies. It is submitted that duress is not a defence to treason involving the death of the Sovereign, but may be a defence to less serious forms of treason: see PARA 363 et seq post.

5 The defence applies only where the offence charged is 'the very offence' nominated by the person making the threat: R v Cole [1994] Crim LR 582, CA.

6 R v Graham [1982] 1 All ER 801, 74 Cr App Rep 235, CA; R v Howe [1987] AC 417, 85 Cr App Rep 32, HL.

7 In R v Z [2005] UKHL 22 at [23], [2005] 2 AC 467 at [23], sub nom R v Hasan [2005] 4 All ER 685 at [23], Lord Bingham of Cornhill rejected the suggestion that the defendant's belief was not reasonable.

8 A threat of serious psychological injury is insufficient (R v Baker [1997] Crim LR 497, CA) although in the light of R v Ireland, R v Burstow [1998] AC 147, [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 177, HL (in which it was held that recognisable psychiatric illness fell within the scope of 'bodily harm' for the purposes of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 ss 20, 47 and that, in the context of those provisions, 'inflict' included the inflicting of psychiatric injury) there is 'a great deal of force' in criticism of this decision (DPP v Rogers [1998] Crim LR 202, DC). A threat to property is also insufficient (M'Growther's Case (1746) Fost 13, 18 State Tr 391), and so is a threat of pain unaccompanied by serious injury (R v Quayle, A-G's Reference (No 2 of 2004) [2005] EWCA Crim 1415, [2006] 1 All ER 988, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 527).

9 R v Martin [1989] 1 All ER 652 at 653-654, 88 Cr App Rep 343 at 345-346, CA, per Simon Brown J; R v Shayler [2001] EWCA Crim 1977 at [49], [2001] 1 WLR 2206 at [49] per Lord Woolf CJ; R v Z [2005] UKHL 22 at [21], [2005] 2 AC 467 at [21], sub nom R v Hasan [2005] 4 All ER 685 at [21] per Lord Bingham. See also R v Ortiz (1986) 83 Cr App Rep 173, CA (threat to injure defendant's wife or family); R v Wright [2000] Crim LR 510, CA.

10 The ordinary person of reasonable firmness is not to be invested with a characteristic on the defendant's part such as pliancy, vulnerability to pressure, timidity, or emotional instability, since it would be a contradiction in terms to invest an ordinary person of reasonable firmness with these: R v Bowen [1996] 4 All ER 837, [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 157, CA; R v Hegarty [1994] Crim LR 353, CA; R v Horne [1994] Crim LR 584, CA; R v Hurst [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 82, CA. Characteristics due to self-induced abuse, eg addiction to drink or drugs, are also irrelevant: R v Flatt [1996] Crim LR 576, CA. On the other hand, if the defendant is in a category of persons whom the jury might think less able to resist pressure than those outside that category, the characteristic which puts him in that category may be a relevant one: examples are age, where a young person may well not be so robust as a mature one; pregnancy, where there is added fear for the unborn child; serious physical disability, which may inhibit self-protection; and recognised mental illness or psychiatric condition, such as post-traumatic stress disorder leading to learned helplessness: R v Bowen supra.

11 R v Martin [1989] 1 All ER 652 at 653-654, 88 Cr App Rep 343 at 345-346, CA, per Simon Brown J; R v Graham [1982] 1 All ER 801, 74 Cr App Rep 235, CA; R v Howe [1987] AC 417, 85 Cr App Rep 32, HL.

12 R v Baker [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 335, CA. See also R v Gill [1963] 2 All ER 688, 47 Cr App Rep 166, CCA; R v Hudson, R v Taylor [1971] 2 QB 202, [1971] 2 All ER 244, CA. It should be made clear to juries that if the retribution threatened against the defendant or his family or a person for whom he feels responsible is not such as he reasonably expects to follow immediately or almost immediately on his failure to comply with the threat, there may be little if any room for doubt that he could have taken evasive action, whether by going to the police or in some other way, to avoid committing the crime with which he is charged: R v Z [2005] UKHL 22 at [28], [2005] 2 AC 467 at [28], sub nom R v Hasan [2005] 4 All ER 685 at [28] per Lord Bingham of Cornhill.

23 Duress by threats

NOTE 2--See R v Wilson [2007] All ER (D) 228 (May), CA (duress no defence to murder no matter how susceptible defendant might be to the duress).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/1. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/24. Marital coercion.

24. Marital coercion.

Where a married woman<sup>1</sup> is charged with any offence other than treason or murder, it is a defence to prove that the offence was committed in the presence of<sup>2</sup>, and under the coercion of, her husband<sup>3</sup>.

The burden of proving coercion lies upon the defendant<sup>4</sup>. Proof of the defence requires proof that the offence was committed as a result of the wife's will being overborne by the husband, so that she was forced unwillingly to participate in the offence; simply persuading a wife to act out of loyalty will not do<sup>5</sup>.

1 'Married woman' is construed strictly and a belief, even on reasonable grounds, that the defendant was married when she was not, is not sufficient: R v Ditta [1988] Crim LR 43, CA.

2 See Hughes's Case (1813) 2 Lew CC 229; Connolly's Case (1829) 2 Lew CC 229.

3 Criminal Justice Act 1925 s 47. This provision replaced the presumption at common law, in relation to certain crimes, that, where such a crime was committed by a wife in the presence of her husband, the wife acted under the coercion of her husband: see s 47. The provision does not affect the common law defence of duress by threats (see PARA 23 ante) which is capable of application between husband and wife: see R v Bourne (1952) 36 Cr App Rep 125, CCA.

4 Although the defence of coercion is in this respect less favourable to the defendant than that of duress (see PARA 23 ante), coercion includes threats or intimidation less than threats of death or personal injury; 'moral threats' can suffice if they have the necessary effect: R v Shortland [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 116, CA; R v Cairns [2002] EWCA Crim 2838 at [55]-[57], [2003] 1 WLR 796 at [55]-[57].

As to the burden of proof, and as to whether the burden placed on the defendant is a persuasive or evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 et seq post. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

5 R v Shortland [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 116, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/1. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/25. Duress of circumstances.

25. Duress of circumstances.

The defence of duress of circumstances is concerned with the situation where the defendant acts to avert a threat of death or serious physical injury to himself (or to another person for whom he is, or for whom he is made by the situation, responsible<sup>1</sup>), whether from another person or from a natural cause<sup>2</sup>; unlike the defence of duress by threats<sup>3</sup> the threat does not have to be accompanied by the instruction to commit an offence 'or else'. Where such a defence is open to the defendant on his account of the facts, it should be left to the jury with a direction to determine: (1) whether the defendant was, or might have been, impelled to act as he did because, as a result of what he reasonably believed to be the situation, he had good cause to fear that otherwise death or serious physical injury would result<sup>4</sup>; and (2) if so, whether a sober person of reasonable firmness, sharing the characteristics of the defendant, would have responded to the situation by acting as the defendant did<sup>5</sup>. If both questions are answered affirmatively, the defence of duress of circumstances is established<sup>6</sup>.

The defence of duress of circumstances applies to offences in general<sup>7</sup>; three exceptions which have been recognised are murder, attempted murder and some forms of treason<sup>8</sup>.

1 R v Shayler [2001] EWCA Crim 1977 at [49], [2001] 1 WLR 2206 at [49] per Lord Woolf CJ.

2 R v Martin [1989] 1 All ER 652, 88 Cr App Rep 343, CA, applying R v Conway [1989] QB 290, 88 Cr App Rep 159, CA. In R v Jones [2004] EWCA Crim 1981, [2005] QB 259, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 154, the Court of Appeal held that the defence is limited to the case where the defendant is responding to a threat of an offence under domestic law. No authority was cited, and this decision is inconsistent with R v Martin supra, where the threat to which the defendant was responding was a threat of suicide, which is not an offence. The House of Lords did not refer to the point on appeal in R v Jones [2006] UKHL 16, [2006] 2 All ER 741, [2006] 2 WLR 772. The defence of duress of circumstances was not available to a person who committed a drugs offence (possession of cannabis resin) in order to alleviate the pain of an injury: moreover, the fact that in these circumstances the state provided that the only way in which a person could alleviate his pain was by breaking the criminal law and risking punishment up to and including imprisonment did not mean that the state was subjecting that person to inhuman or degrading treatment contrary to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 3 (prohibition of inhuman or degrading treatment): R v Altham [2006] EWCA Crim 7, (2006) Times, 1 February. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq. See also R v Quayle, A-G's Reference (No 2 of 2004) [2005] EWCA Crim 1415, [2006] 1 All ER 988, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 527.

3 The threat must be extraneous to the defendant, ie it must come from some external agency, and be capable of external scrutiny by judge and jury: R v Rodger [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 143, CA; R v Quayle, A-G's Reference (No 2 of 2004) [2005] EWCA Crim 1415, [2006] 1 All ER 988, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 527.

4 R v Martin [1989] 1 All ER 652, 88 Cr App Rep 343, CA. Although the peril of death or serious physical injury must be imminent, the execution of the threat need not be immediately in prospect: R v Abdul-Hussain [1999] Crim LR 570, CA. However, this is subject to the limitation that there must have been no evasive action which the defendant could reasonably have been expected to take: R v Z [2005] UKHL 22 at [21], [28], [2005] 2 AC 467 at [21], [28], sub nom R v Hasan [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 314 at [21], [28] per Lord Bingham of Cornhill. The defendant is unlikely to be able to avail himself of the defence where there has been a continuous and deliberate course of otherwise unlawful self-help: R v Quayle, A-G's Reference (No 2 of 2004) [2005] EWCA Crim 1415, [2006] 1 All ER 988, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 527. The threat must be operative at the time of the offence charged; where a person has embarked on committing an offence and the threat then becomes ineffective, he must stop committing the crime as soon as he reasonably can (regard being had to the circumstances in which he is placed): R v Pommell [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 607, CA. The aversion of serious psychological injury or of pain will not suffice: R v Baker [1997] Crim LR 497, CA; R v Quayle, A-G's Reference (No 2 of 2004) supra; R v Altham [2006] EWCA Crim 7, (2006) Times, 1 February.

7 The defence has been held applicable, for example, to dangerous driving (R v Symonds [1998] Crim LR 280, CA; R v Cairns [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 137, [2000] RTR 15, CA); careless driving (R v Symonds supra; R v Backshall [1999] 1 Cr App Rep 35, [1999] Crim LR 662, CA); driving while disqualified (R v Martin [1989] 1 All ER 652, 88 Cr App Rep 343, CA); driving with excess alcohol (DPP v Davis [1994] Crim LR 600, DC); possession of a prohibited weapon (R v Pommell [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 607, CA); causing grievous bodily harm with intent (R v Cairns supra); hijacking (R v Abdul-Hussain [1999] Crim LR 570, CA); and offences under the Official Secrets Act 1989 (R v Shayler [2001] EWCA Crim 1977, [2001] 1 WLR 2206 (on appeal [2002] UKHL 11, [2003] 1 AC 247, where the matter was not considered by the House of Lords on the ground that the facts of the case did not raise any question of duress of circumstances)).

8 R v Dudley, R v Stephens (1884) 14 QBD 273, CCR; R v Abdul-Hussain [1999] Crim LR 570, CA; R v Z [2005] UKHL 22 at [21], [2005] 2 AC 467 at [21], sub nom R v Hasan [2005] 4 All ER 685 at [21] per Lord Bingham of Cornhill. In addition, in a statutory offence, the policy and scheme of a piece of legislation may be interpreted as excluding the defence of duress of circumstances in a particular context: R v Quayle, A-G's Reference (No 2 of 2004) [2005] EWCA Crim 1415, [2006] 1 All ER 988, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 527 (one of the reasons for not allowing the defence in respect of drugs offences where cannabis had been taken to alleviate pain was that to allow the defence to apply in such a context would create a conflict with the purpose and effect of the legislative policy and scheme relating to cannabis).

25 Duress of circumstances

NOTE 2--Altham, cited, reported at [2006] 1 WLR 3287.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/1. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/26. Necessity.

26. Necessity.

Apart from the circumstances in which it is not criminal for a person to cause harm to the person or property of another<sup>1</sup>, the defence of necessity in extreme circumstances has been recognised in the context of medical treatment<sup>2</sup>. There are three requirements for the application of the defence of necessity to conduct by such persons: that the act must be necessary to avoid inevitable and irreparable evil; that no more should be done than is reasonably necessary for the purpose to be achieved; and that the evil inflicted must not be disproportionate to the evil avoided<sup>3</sup>. Where it applies, the defence of necessity justifies conduct which would otherwise be unlawful, that is it renders it lawful<sup>4</sup>.

Whether necessity can be a defence in cases other than those of medical necessity, and, if so, to what extent, remains uncertain.

1 These cases include self-defence and defence of another (see PARA 21 ante), defence of property (see PARA 22 ante), force used in the prevention of crime (see PARA 20 ante), duress by threats (see PARA 23 ante), marital coercion (see PARA 24 ante) and duress of circumstances (see PARA 25 ante).

27. Superior orders.

The mere fact that a person does a criminal act in obedience to the order of a duly constituted superior does not of itself excuse the person who does it from criminal liability<sup>1</sup>. A person acting under superior orders which he carries out in good faith may, however, lack the mental element required for criminal liability; the orders may have led the defendant to make a material mistake of fact<sup>2</sup>. Alternatively superior orders may lead a person to have a belief which is a statutory defence<sup>3</sup>.

Those subject to military law are amenable to the criminal law to the same extent as other subjects; obedience to superior orders is not in itself a defence to a criminal charge<sup>4</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/28. Effect of voluntary intoxication.

28. Effect of voluntary intoxication.

The voluntary taking of alcohol or drugs cannot of itself excuse the commission of a crime; and it is not a defence that a person's mind was so affected by alcohol that he acted in a way he would not have done had he been sober<sup>1</sup> or that he did not know that he was doing wrong<sup>2</sup>. Whether the alleged intoxication is induced through alcohol or through drugs, the principles to be applied are the same<sup>3</sup>. Voluntary (that is, self-induced) intoxication<sup>4</sup> is a factor relevant to criminal liability if a specific intent is an essential element of the offence charged and the defendant's intoxication affords evidence that he lacked the mens rea for that offence<sup>5</sup>; also, where a statute expressly provides that a particular belief is a defence to the offence charged, evidence of intoxication may be used to support a claim that the defendant had that belief<sup>6</sup>.

Where, on a charge of an offence of basic intent (that is, an offence which does not require a specific intent), a claim of lack of mens rea is supported by evidence of voluntary intoxication, that evidence cannot afford evidence that the defendant lacked the mens rea for that offence<sup>7</sup> and should be disregarded in deciding in the light of any other evidence whether or not the defendant had that mens rea<sup>8</sup>. The question for the tribunal of fact is whether the defendant had the mens rea for the basic intent offence, or would have had that mens rea if he had not been voluntarily intoxicated<sup>9</sup>. However, if the intoxication arises from the taking of a soporific or sedative drug, or a drug which has been lawfully prescribed or administered by a doctor, it can be taken into account as evidence of lack of the mens rea required for the basic intent offence, unless the defendant was reckless<sup>10</sup> in taking the drug in the circumstances or quantities in which he took it<sup>11</sup>.

Voluntary intoxication at the time of committing an offence causing death can at most operate to reduce the crime from murder to manslaughter<sup>12</sup>.

Intoxication which is self-induced with a view to committing crime, as where a person drinks to give himself courage to carry out an intention to kill, does not excuse even though at the time of committing the act the defendant could not, because of the drink taken, form the specific intent required for that crime<sup>13</sup>.

3 R v Lipman [1970] 1 QB 152, 53 Cr App Rep 600, CA; but see the text to notes 8, 10 infra.

4 Intoxication is voluntary where it results from the defendant knowingly taking alcohol or some other drug or intoxicating substance or a combination of these (see R v Lipman [1970] 1 QB 152, 53 Cr App Rep 600, CA; DPP v Majewski [1977] AC 443, 62 Cr App Rep 262, HL), even though he does not know its precise nature or strength (R v Allen [1988] Crim LR 698, CA).

5 DPP v Majewski [1977] AC 443, 62 Cr App Rep 262, HL. An offence is one of specific intent if intention and nothing less is required as to at least one element of the offence: this definition seems to have commanded the most support among their lordships in DPP v Majewski supra and avoids the difficulties inherent in other definitions propounded.

At a trial in the Crown Court, the judge must normally direct the jury on the relevant law if there is evidence, whatever its source and even though it is not relied on by counsel, on which a jury might conclude that there is a reasonable possibility that the defendant did not have the relevant mens rea, because of intoxication: R v

Bennett [1995] Crim LR 877, CA. However, if the defendant is not contending that he lacked the necessary mens rea, it is open to the judge to see whether defence counsel objects to such a direction: if defence counsel objects to the direction being given, the judge does not have to give it: R v Groark [1999] Crim LR 669, CA. In his direction in respect of an offence requiring specific intent, the judge must inform the jury that in deciding whether the defendant had the necessary mens rea it must take into account the evidence that he was intoxicated and that if it considers that because he was drunk he did not have the necessary mens rea or might not have had it, he is entitled to be acquitted: R v Brown [1998] Crim LR 485, CA. In other words, the judge must tell the jury that it can convict the defendant of a specific intent offence only if it is sure, having regard to all the evidence (including that of intoxication), that he had the necessary mens rea: R v Groark supra.

6 Jaggard v Dickinson [1981] QB 527, 72 Cr App Rep 33, DC. An honest belief in the need to act in self-defence which results from an intoxicated mistake may not be relied upon to excuse the defendant: R v O'Grady [1987] QB 995, 85 Cr App Rep 315, CA; R v Hatton [2005] EWCA Crim 2951, [2006] Crim LR 353.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/29. Involuntary intoxication.

29. Involuntary intoxication.

Involuntary intoxication refers to the case where intoxication is produced by others, as where a defendant's drink was 'laced' with alcohol without his knowledge. Evidence of such intoxication may be taken into account in deciding whether the defendant had the necessary mens rea for the offence (whether or not a specific intent is required)<sup>1</sup>; if it does not prevent the defendant having that mens rea, it is irrelevant to liability, but may well be a substantial mitigating factor<sup>2</sup>.

Once the issue of involuntary intoxication has been raised, the burden of proof is generally on the prosecution to show that the intoxication was voluntary<sup>3</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/30. Intoxication and insanity contrasted.

30. Intoxication and insanity contrasted.

The criminal law is concerned with the effect, not the origin, of disease of the mind<sup>1</sup>. If insanity supervenes as a result of alcoholic excess, it is as much a defence to a criminal charge as insanity from any other cause<sup>2</sup>: however, the defence of insanity and the rules relating to intoxication are otherwise in no way analogous.

1 See R v Kemp [1957] 1 QB 399, 40 Cr App Rep 121; and PARA 31 note 4 post.

2 DPP v Beard [1920] AC 479 at 500, 14 Cr App Rep 159 at 193, HL; R v Davis (1881) 14 Cox CC 563; R v Baines (1886) Times, 25 January.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/1. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/31. Insanity.

31. Insanity.

Where, on a criminal charge, it appears<sup>1</sup> that, at the time of the act or omission giving rise to the offence alleged<sup>2</sup>, the defendant was labouring under a defect of reason<sup>3</sup> owing to a disease of the mind<sup>4</sup> so as not to know the nature and quality of his act<sup>5</sup>, or, if he knew this, so as not to know that what he was doing was wrong<sup>6</sup>, he is not regarded in law as responsible for his act<sup>7</sup>.

The question whether, owing to a defect of reason due to disease of the mind, the defendant was not responsible for his act is a question of fact to be determined by the jury<sup>8</sup>. Where the jury finds insanity is made out in the Crown Court, the verdict takes the special form of not guilty by reason of insanity<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the burden and mode of proof of insanity see PARA 33 post.

2 The defendant's state of mind before or after that time is irrelevant except in so far as it tends to establish or negative insanity at the time of the act. Where a defect of reason is self-induced, as where a psychopath takes drink to give himself the courage to kill, he cannot rely on insanity at the time of the act if he was responsible when he formed the intent to kill: A-G for Northern Ireland v Gallagher [1963] AC 349 at 382, 45 Cr App Rep 316 at 344, HL, per Lord Denning.

3 The defence of insanity is not available to a person who retains the power of reasoning, but who in a moment of confusion or absentmindedness fails to use that power to the full: R v Clarke [1972] 1 All ER 219, 56 Cr App Rep 225, CA. As to uncontrollable impulse see also PARA 32 post.

4 The criminal law is not concerned with the origin of the disease but with its effect; it matters not whether the defect of reason is due to a degeneration of the brain cells, or to some other form of mental derangement, or to a physical disorder, such as arteriosclerosis, which, by cutting off the supply of blood to the brain, impairs the reasoning process; nor does it matter whether the disease is curable or incurable, temporary or permanent: R v Kemp [1957] 1 QB 399, 40 Cr App Rep 121; R v Sullivan [1984] AC 156, 77 Cr App Rep 176, HL (epileptic seizure held to be a disease of the mind); R v Hennessy [1989] 2 All ER 9, 89 Cr App Rep 10, CA (hyperglycaemia caused by inherent defect and not corrected by insulin is a disease capable of falling within the M'Naghten Rules); R v Burgess [1991] 2 QB 92, 93 Cr App Rep 41, CA (sleepwalking due to an internal factor); and see PARA 30 ante.

There must be a malfunctioning of the mind caused by disease; a malfunctioning caused by an external factor such as alcohol, drugs or injury does not constitute a disease of the mind: R v Quick, R v Paddison [1973] QB 910, [1973] 3 All ER 347, CA. Where an underlying mental condition which would not otherwise produce a disease of the mind sufficient to satisfy the other parts of the M'Naghten Rules is aggravated by external factors so that the defendant has a defect of reason such that he does not know the nature and quality of his act (or that it is wrong), this does not bring the M'Naghten Rules into play: see A-G for Northern Ireland v Gallagher [1963] AC 349, 45 Cr App Rep 316, HL; R v Roach [2001] EWCA Crim 2698, [2002] 3 Archbold News 1, CA.

5 The expression 'nature and quality' has always been held to refer to the physical nature and consequences of the act, and does not refer to its moral aspects: R v Codère (1916) 12 Cr App Rep 21, CCA.

6 For this purpose a person knows that an act is wrong if he knows that it is contrary to law: see the dicta in R v Windle [1952] 2 QB 826, 36 Cr App Rep 85, CCA; R v Holmes [1953] 2 All ER 324, 37 Cr App Rep 61, CCA. Cf the answers of the judges to questions 2 and 3 in M'Naghten's Case (1843) 10 Cl & Fin 200 at 210, HL and the view of Lord Reading CJ in R v Codère (1916) 12 Cr App Rep 21, CCA, that the test is whether the act is right or wrong according to the standard accepted by reasonable men.

7 M'Naghten's Case (1843) 10 Cl & Fin 200, HL; R v Layton (1849) 4 Cox CC 149; Pate's Case (1850) 8 State Tr NS 1; R v Richards (1858) 1 F & F 87; R v Davies (1858) 1 F & F 69; R v Law (1862) 2 F & F 836; R v Vyse (1862) 3 F & F 247; R v Townley (1863) 3 F & F 839; R v Southey (1865) 4 F & F 864; R v Leigh (1866) 4 F & F 915; R v Atherley (1909) 3 Cr App Rep 165, CCA; R v Smith (1910) 5 Cr App Rep 123, 26 TLR 614, CCA; R v True

The defence of insanity also applies where a person acts under an insane delusion as to existing facts. If he labours under a partial delusion only and is not in other respects insane, his responsibility must be determined as if the facts with regard to which the delusion exists were real: M'Naghten's Case supra. Cf R v Townley (1863) 3 F & F 839; Pate's Case supra at 47 per Alderson B.

The defence of insanity is available only in respect of offences requiring an element of mens rea: DPP v H [1997] 1 WLR 1406, DC. These principles apply only to insanity as a substantive defence; as to the raising of the issue of unfitness to plead see PARAS 1264-1265 post.

8 R v Rivett (1950) 34 Cr App Rep 87, CCA; R v Kemp [1957] 1 QB 399 at 406, 40 Cr App Rep 121 at 126 per Devlin J (approved by Lord Denning in Bratty v A-G for Northern Ireland [1963] AC 386, 46 Cr App Rep 1, HL). See also R v Sullivan [1984] AC 156, 77 Cr App Rep 176, HL; and PARA 97 note 4 post.

9 Trial of Lunatics Act 1883 s 2(1) (amended by the Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 s 1). The amendment by the Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 s 1 effects a replacement of the verdict of guilty but insane introduced by the Trial of Lunatics Act 1883 s 2(1) as originally drafted. The Trial of Lunatics Act 1883 s 2 (as amended) provides that where at the trial of a person for an offence 'it is given in evidence . . . that he was insane, so as not to be responsible, according to law, for his actions at the time when the act was done or omission made, then, if it appears to the jury . . . that he did the act or made the omission charged, but was insane as aforesaid at the time when he did or made the same, the jury shall return a special verdict that the accused is not guilty by reason of insanity'. The requirement that it should appear to the jury that the defendant 'did the act or made the omission charged' before he can be found not guilty by reason of insanity refers to the actus reus of the offence; the prosecution does not have to prove that the defendant acted or omitted to act with the requisite mens rea: A-G's Reference (No 3 of 1998) [2000] QB 401, [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 214, CA. If the prosecution is unable to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the defendant has committed the actus reus, he is entitled to a simple not guilty verdict whether or not he was insane at the material time: A-G's Reference (No 3 of 1998) supra.

The defence of insanity applies to cases tried in a magistrates' court (R v Horseferry Road Magistrates' Court, ex p K [1997] QB 23, [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 574, DC) but no provision is made for the equivalent of the special verdict. Consequently, if the defence succeeds at a summary trial the defendant must simply be found not guilty.

As to the orders which may be made by a court where a special verdict has been returned see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 332; as to appeal against a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity see PARA 1887 post; and as to appeal against an order made following such a verdict see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 332.

32. Uncontrollable impulse.

The defence of insanity<sup>1</sup> is not established by showing merely that the defendant suffers from a disease of the mind and because of that he more readily gives way to passion or is less able to control his reactions. It is no defence that a person is mentally defective<sup>2</sup> or may be regarded as morally defective or displays lack of moral judgment<sup>3</sup>, or that he cannot control his impulses owing to a disease of the mind<sup>4</sup>.

The defence of insanity as defined by the M'Naghten Rules does not apply to the case of a defendant who knew what he was doing and that it was wrong, but was unable, owing to disease of the mind, to prevent himself from doing what he did. In this class of case, in charges of murder, the defence of diminished responsibility is available: see the Homicide Act 1957 s 2; and PARAS 96-97 post.

33. Burden and mode of proof of insanity.

It is for the defence to raise the question of insanity<sup>1</sup>; and, if the prosecution has evidence of insanity, it must make that evidence available to the defence<sup>2</sup>. Where, however, the defence raises a plea of diminished responsibility<sup>3</sup>, the prosecution may adduce or elicit evidence of insanity by way of rebuttal<sup>4</sup>, and the burden of proving insanity in these circumstances rests on the prosecution<sup>5</sup>. Otherwise it is for the defence to prove insanity on the balance of probabilities<sup>6</sup>.

A jury may not return a special verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity<sup>7</sup> except on the written or oral evidence of two or more registered medical practitioners<sup>8</sup> at least one of whom is duly approved<sup>9</sup>.

Where the medical evidence is all to the effect that the defendant was insane so as not to be criminally responsible, and that evidence is uncontroverted by the facts or surrounding circumstances, a verdict of guilty will be set aside on the ground that no reasonable jury could have reached such a verdict<sup>10</sup>; but a conviction will not be quashed merely because the jury has chosen to disagree with expert medical opinion<sup>11</sup> or because the medical evidence tends to support the defence, if there is other evidence to the contrary<sup>12</sup>.

1 See, however, PARA 36 note 4 post. In certain exceptional circumstances, and provided that there is evidence of the factors to be taken into account under the M'Naghten Rules (see PARA 31 ante), the judge may raise the issue of insanity of his own volition and leave the issue to the jury: see R v Dickie [1984] 3 All ER 173, 79 Cr App Rep 213, CA; R v Thomas (1994) 29 BMLR 120, [1995] Crim LR 314, CA.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/34. Involuntary conduct.

34. Involuntary conduct.

In general<sup>1</sup>, no crime is committed if the prohibited act, omission or event on the part of the defendant is involuntary<sup>2</sup>. An act, omission or event on the part of the defendant is involuntary where it is beyond his control, as where an act is compelled by external physical force<sup>3</sup> or where he acts in a state of automatism<sup>4</sup>. An omission to act is involuntary where the defendant is incapable of doing the act which he has failed to do<sup>5</sup>; and a state of affairs is involuntary if it is brought about by external physical compulsion or is otherwise beyond the defendant's control.

An act is not involuntary merely because it is done in circumstances of constraint which affect the freedom of action of the person doing it, as where an act is done under threats<sup>6</sup> or on the command of a superior<sup>7</sup>. For an act to be regarded as involuntary, the person doing it must not only be deprived of a free choice as to what to do, he must also be divested of the ability to control what he does.

1 An offence involving an omission or a state of affairs may be so defined as apparently to require no proof that the omission or state of affairs, as the case may be, was voluntary on the part of the defendant: see Sparks v Worthington [1986] RTR 64, DC; Davey v Towle [1973] RTR 328, DC (omissions); R v Larsonneur (1933) 24 Cr App Rep 74, CCA; Winzar v Chief Constable of Kent (1983) Times, 28 March, DC (states of affairs).

Even though some conduct on the part of the defendant may have been involuntary, he may incur criminal liability in respect of voluntary conduct which took place before the involuntary conduct: see eg Kay v Butterworth (1945) 173 LT 191, DC (driver continuing to drive when overcome with drowsiness thereby committed careless driving). PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/35. Automatism.

35. Automatism.

A person does not incur criminal liability for acts done in a state of automatism, as where he causes harm to someone during a mental blackout induced by an external factor such as violence or drugs, including anaesthetics, alcohol and hypnotic influences<sup>1</sup>, or by forces outside his control<sup>2</sup>, because such an act is involuntary on his part. An act is done in a state of automatism if it is done by the muscles without any control by the mind (such as a reflex action, or a spasmodic or convulsive act) or if it is done during a state involving a loss of consciousness<sup>3</sup>. In law automatism is limited to cases where there is a total destruction of voluntary control; impaired or reduced awareness will not do<sup>4</sup>.

If, however, the defendant's state of automatism results from self-induced intoxication due to alcohol or drugs, it is not a defence to offences of 'basic intent'<sup>5</sup>, although it may negative mens rea in offences requiring a 'specific intent'<sup>6</sup>.

Automatism which is self-induced by other means is a defence even to an offence of 'basic intent', except that it is not a defence to an offence of 'basic intent' where it is proved that the defendant, before he became an automaton, was reckless (that is, appreciated the risk) that something which he did or failed to do was likely to make him aggressive, unpredictable or uncontrollable with the result that he might endanger others and he deliberately ran the risk or otherwise disregarded it<sup>7</sup>.

There is no burden upon the defence to establish automatism where insanity is not involved; the burden is upon the prosecution to exclude it<sup>8</sup>. Before the prosecution is required to negative the assertion that conduct on the part of the defendant was involuntary, the defence must, in the course of the evidence, lay a proper foundation for that assertion<sup>9</sup>. The defendant's own evidence will rarely be enough and should be supported by medical evidence<sup>10</sup>. The prosecution may call medical evidence to rebut a plea of automatism<sup>11</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(3) GENERAL DEFENCES TO CRIME/36. Automatism and insanity contrasted.

36. Automatism and insanity contrasted.

A person's conduct may be involuntary<sup>1</sup> where he commits the actus reus of an offence but, owing to a defect of reason arising from a disease of the mind within the rules relating to the defence of insanity<sup>2</sup>, does so without any awareness of the act, or without any rational control over his actions. In such a situation the defendant is entitled to an acquittal in relation to what would otherwise be a guilty act, and the proper verdict is one of not guilty by reason of insanity<sup>3</sup>. Where the sole cause assigned for involuntary conduct is insanity, it follows that the defence of automatism is inapt and inapplicable<sup>4</sup>. Where, however, on the evidence issues of both insanity and automatism arise, it is necessary for the trial judge to distinguish clearly between them as a matter of law<sup>5</sup>. Where there is more than one cause of automatism, the question is whether the immediate cause is an external or internal one; if it is the former, the verdict is not guilty by reason of insanity and, if it is the latter, the verdict is a complete acquittal<sup>6</sup>. Where the immediate cause of alleged automatism is disputed on the evidence (so that it indicates that it may be internal or external), the judge will have to leave the defence of insanity (that is, insane automatism) and the defence of non-insane automatism to the jury, directing it to consider which was the immediate cause. Because of the difference in the burden of proof, the judge's direction will unavoidably be complicated in such a case because he will have to explain that, while the defendant carries the burden of proving insanity, it is for the prosecution to negative the defence of automatism<sup>7</sup>.

3 See PARA 1345 post.

4 Bratty v A-G for Northern Ireland [1963] AC 386, 46 Cr App Rep 1, HL. Where the defence of insanity is raised, the evidence may be such that, while it fails to support a finding that the defendant was suffering from a disease of the mind, a jury may nevertheless be left in doubt whether the crime was the result of a conscious and deliberate act or omission on the part of the defendant. Insanity is an answer in the nature of confession and avoidance, and must in general be raised and proved by the defence: see PARA 33 ante. Where the evidence tendered by the defence is such as to show that the defendant was suffering from a defect of reason arising from a disease of the mind, the defendant cannot avoid a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity by seeking to rely exclusively upon a defence of automatism: see Bratty v A-G for Northern Ireland supra at 411 and 19 per Lord Denning. See also R v Sullivan [1984] AC 156, 77 Cr App Rep 176, HL (defendant who inflicted grievous bodily harm during an epileptic fit sought to rely on a defence of automatism; it was held that the proper verdict was one of not guilty by reason of insanity); R v Hennessy [1989] 2 All ER 9, 89 Cr App Rep 10, CA.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(4) CRIMINAL CAPACITY AND IMMUNITY/38. Corporations.

38. Corporations.

In general, a corporation is in the same position in relation to criminal liability as a natural person and may be convicted of common law<sup>1</sup> and statutory<sup>2</sup> offences including those requiring mens rea<sup>3</sup>. There are, however, crimes which a corporation is incapable of committing<sup>4</sup> or of which a corporation cannot be found guilty as a principal<sup>5</sup>; nor can a corporation be convicted of a crime for which imprisonment is the only punishment<sup>6</sup>.

Where an offence requires mens rea, a corporation is guilty of it if the offence is committed in the course of the corporation's business by a person in control of its affairs to such a degree that it may fairly be said to think and act through him so that his actions and intent are the actions and intent of the corporation; in such a case his acts and state of mind are regarded in law as the acts and state of mind of the company<sup>7</sup>. It is not enough that the person whose conduct it is sought to impute to the corporation is a manager or responsible agent or high executive<sup>8</sup>; whether persons are the 'directing mind and will' of a corporation, so that their conduct in its affairs becomes the conduct of the corporation, must depend on all the circumstances<sup>9</sup>. An important circumstance is the constitution of the corporation to the extent to which it identifies the natural persons who, by the memorandum and articles of association or as a result of action taken by the directors or by the corporation in general meeting pursuant to the articles, are entrusted with the exercise of the powers of the corporation<sup>10</sup>.

A corporation is vicariously liable for a crime committed by its servant or agent in the course of his employment or agency in the same circumstances as an employer or principal who is a natural person<sup>11</sup>.

Where a corporation is criminally liable for an offence, a natural person involved may also be convicted of it, as a joint principal (if he is the person who physically committed the offence) or as an accomplice (if he aided, abetted, counselled or procured its commission). In addition, many statutes now provide for the guilt of controlling officers of the corporation who would not be criminally liable under ordinary principles, or whose guilt it would otherwise be hard to prove. The common example of this type of provision is: 'Where an offence under this Act which has been committed by a body corporate is proved to have been committed with the consent<sup>12</sup> or connivance<sup>13</sup> of, or to be attributable to any neglect<sup>14</sup> on the part of, any director, manager<sup>15</sup>, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate, or any person who was purporting to act in that capacity, he, as well as the body corporate, shall be guilty of that offence<sup>16</sup>. Some provisions omit the words 'attributable to any neglect on the part of'<sup>17</sup>.

2 Unless the contrary intention appears, 'person' in any Act includes a body of persons corporate: see the Interpretation Act 1978 ss 5, 22(1), Sch 1; and STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1382. This definition, so far as it includes bodies corporate, applies to any provision of an Act whenever passed relating to an offence punishable on indictment or on summary conviction: s 22(1), Sch 2 para 4(5). 4 DPP v Kent and Sussex Contractors Ltd [1944] KB 146, [1944] 1 All ER 119, DC (treason). There is a conflict in the case law as to whether a corporation can commit perjury: cf R v ICR Haulage Ltd [1944] KB 551 at 554, 30 Cr App Rep 31 at 34, CCA (corporation cannot commit perjury or bigamy); Wych v Meal (1734) 3 P Wms 310 (corporation cannot commit perjury); Odyssey Re (London) Ltd (formerly Sphere Drake Insurance plc) v OIC Run-Off Ltd (formerly Orion Insurance Co plc) [2001] Lloyd's Rep IR 1, (2000) Times, 17 March, CA (corporation can commit perjury). A corporation cannot be convicted of conspiracy where the only other party to it is the sole director of the corporation: R v McDonnell [1966] 1 QB 233, 50 Cr App Rep 5. A corporation can commit manslaughter: R v P & O European Ferries (Dover) Ltd (1991) 93 Cr App Rep 72; R v HM Coroner for East Kent, ex p Spooner (1987) 88 Cr App Rep 10, 3 BCC 636, DC.

5 A corporation cannot be guilty as a principal of dangerous driving or of driving without due care and attention. In R v Robert Millar (Contractors) Ltd, R v Millar [1970] 2 QB 54, 54 Cr App Rep 158, CA, the corporation was convicted as a secondary party to the offence of causing death through dangerous driving (contrary to what is now the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 1 (as substituted): see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 963).

Except for crimes such as murder where the punishment is fixed by law, the courts generally have power to fine: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 139. Accordingly limitation on a corporation's criminal liability by reference to punitive sanctions is of little practical importance.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(4) CRIMINAL CAPACITY AND IMMUNITY/38A. Corporate manslaughter.

38A. Corporate manslaughter.

The Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 provides for a new offence of corporate manslaughter (to be called corporate homicide in Scotland).

Section 1, Sch 1 provide that a specified organisation is guilty of the offence of corporate manslaughter if the way in which its activities are managed or organised causes a person's death and amounts to a gross breach of a relevant duty of care owed by the organisation to the deceased, and provides that an organisation that is guilty of corporate manslaughter is liable on conviction on indictment to a fine. The organisations to which s 1 applies are corporations (other than corporations sole: see s 25), the government bodies and other bodies listed in Sch 1 (amended by Serious Crime Act 2007 Sch 8 para 178, Sch 14; SI 2008/396; and SI 2009/2748), police forces, and partnerships, trade unions and employer's associations, that are employers. The term 'relevant duty of care', in relation to an organisation, is defined by reference to specified duties owed under the law of negligence: Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 2 (in force in part: SI 2008/401). However, the following matters are excluded from the scope of the term 'relevant duty of care': (1) any duty of care owed by a public authority in respect of a decision as to matters of public policy (including in particular the allocation of public resources or the weighing of competing public interests), certain duties of care in respect of things done in the exercise of an intrinsically public function and certain duties of care owed by a public authority in respect of inspections carried out in the exercise of statutory functions (Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 3); (2) any duty of care owed by the Ministry of Defence in respect of certain activities performed by the armed forces (s 4); (3) certain duties of care owed by a public authority in respect of policing and law enforcement activities (s 5); (4) certain duties of care owed by various emergency services when responding to emergencies (s 6); and (5) certain duties of care owed by a local authority in relation to the exercise of specific functions to protect children from harm and in relation to the activities of probation services (s 7 (amended by SI 2008/912)). In assessing whether an organisation's breach of a relevant duty of care was gross, the jury is required to consider whether the organisation failed to comply with relevant health and safety legislation, the seriousness of such a failure, how much of a risk of death it posed, and the wider context of the failure: Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 8. A court has the power to order an organisation convicted of corporate manslaughter to take steps to remedy the breach, any matters which resulted from that breach and any deficiency as regards health and safety matters in the organisation's policies, systems or practices: s 9. A court may order an organisation convicted of corporate manslaughter to publicise the fact of its conviction, specified particulars of the offence, the amount of any fine imposed and the terms of any remedial order made: s 10. Provision is made to ensure that the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 applies to the Crown (s 11) and provision is also made as to its application to the armed forces (s 12) and to police forces (s 13). A partnership is to be treated as owing whatever duties of care it would owe if it were a body corporate; proceedings must be brought in the name of such a partnership and any fine imposed on it is to be paid out of the funds of the partnership: s 14. Procedural matters relating to the prosecution of organisations for corporate manslaughter are set out: s 15. Where the functions have been transferred between or out of government departments or other bodies listed in Sch 1, incorporated Crown bodies or police forces, it is provided that prosecutions are to be commenced, or continued, against the public body that currently has responsibility for the function: s 16. Proceedings for an offence of corporate manslaughter may not be instituted without the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 17. An individual cannot be guilty of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of an offence of corporate manslaughter: s 18 (amended by Serious Crime Act 2007 s 62). The fact that an organisation is charged with or has been convicted of corporate manslaughter does not preclude a further charge of a health and safety offence which arises out of the same set of circumstances: Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 19. The common law offence of manslaughter by gross negligence is abolished in its application to organisations to which s 1 applies: s 20. The Secretary of State may extend the categories of organisation to which the offence of corporate manslaughter applies (s 21) and may amend the list of government and other bodies set out in Sch 1 (s 22). The Secretary of State may extend the categories of person to whom a 'relevant duty of care' is owed: s 23. Orders under the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 are to be made by statutory instrument: s 24. For sentencing principles in relation to corporate manslaughter, see Sentencing Guidelines Council Guideline on Corporate Manslaughter and Health and Safety Offences Causing Death (2010); and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 638.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(4) CRIMINAL CAPACITY AND IMMUNITY/39. Unincorporated associations.

39. Unincorporated associations.

Criminal liability may be imposed by statute on unincorporated associations<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> See eg the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss 45, 131(1) (as amended), which make both trades unions and employers' associations liable for refusing or wilfully neglecting to perform certain statutory duties; and EMPLOYMENT vol 40 (2009) PARAS 905-907, 1038.

Unless a contrary intention appears, 'person' in any Act passed after 1889 includes a body of persons unincorporate: see the Interpretation Act 1978 ss 5, 22(1), Sch 1, Sch 2 para 4(1)(a); and STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1382. A statute may make special provision for criminal proceedings against unincorporated associations: see eg the Trade Marks Act 1994 s 101(1) (see TRADE MARKS AND TRADE NAMES vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARA 139); the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 403 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 574); and the Licensing Act 2003 s 188 (see LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARAS 158-159).

It is uncertain whether criminal proceedings may be instituted against an unincorporated body at common law; but see A-G v Able [1984] QB 795 at 810, 78 Cr App Rep 197 at 206 per Woolf J ('the society is an unincorporated body and there can be no question of the society committing an offence').

40. Members of Parliament.

Except in relation to anything said in debate<sup>1</sup>, a member of the House of Lords or of the House of Commons is subject to the ordinary course of criminal justice<sup>2</sup>; the privileges of Parliament<sup>3</sup> do not apply to criminal matters<sup>4</sup>.

1 Although members are probably subject to the jurisdiction of the courts in respect of other conduct in Parliament, they cannot be made criminally responsible in the courts for what is said by them in Parliament while it is sitting; see the Privilege of Parliament Act 1512 s 2. The freedom of speech and debates or proceedings in Parliament ought not to be impeached or questioned in any court or place out of Parliament: Bill of Rights (1688) s 1. Members of Parliament are not subject to the jurisdiction of the courts for a conspiracy to deceive Parliament by making false speeches in the House: Ex p Wason (1869) LR 4 QB 573.

42. Ambassadors, High Commissioners and diplomatic staff.

The person of a diplomatic agent<sup>1</sup> is inviolable; and he is not liable to any form of arrest or detention<sup>2</sup>. A diplomatic agent enjoys immunity from the criminal jurisdiction of the receiving state<sup>3</sup>. The same privileges and immunities extend to the members of the family of a diplomatic agent forming part of his household if they are not nationals of the receiving state<sup>4</sup> and to members of the administrative and technical staff of the mission, together with members of their families forming part of their respective households, if they are not nationals of or permanently resident in the receiving state; but members of the service staff enjoy such immunity only in respect of acts performed in the course of their duties<sup>5</sup>. The private servants of a member of a mission do not enjoy immunity from criminal jurisdiction<sup>6</sup>.

The immunities of a diplomat normally cease when he leaves the country, or on expiry of a reasonable period in which to do so, but with respect to acts performed in the course of his functions as a member of the mission immunity continues to subsist<sup>7</sup>.

The immunities are a privilege of the sending state<sup>8</sup>; as such they may be waived by that state, though not by the representative himself<sup>9</sup>.

4 See R v Guildhall Magistrates' Court, ex p Jarrett-Thorpe (1977) Times, 5 October, DC.

5 See the Diplomatic Privileges Act 1964 Sch 1 art 37; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 279-281. Other members of staff of the mission who are nationals of the receiving state or permanently resident in it enjoy immunity from criminal jurisdiction only to the extent admitted by the receiving state: see Sch 1 art 38; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 274. The diplomatic immunities of a particular mission may be restricted or withdrawn by Order in Council if it appears that corresponding immunities granted to British diplomats are similarly restricted or withdrawn: see s 3; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 288. Proceedings instituted against persons entitled to diplomatic immunity where the immunity is not waived (see the text and note 9 infra) are therefore null and void as being without jurisdiction: R v Madan [1961] 2 QB 1, 45 Cr App Rep 80, CCA. As to the immunity of a diplomatic agent who is not accredited to the mission see also R v Guildhall Magistrates' Court, ex p Jarrett-Thorpe (1977) Times, 5 October, DC.

6 See the Diplomatic Privileges Act 1964 Sch 1 art 37; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 281. This is subject to any extension of immunity admitted by the receiving state; no such admission has been made by the United Kingdom in respect of criminal jurisdiction.

7 See ibid Sch 1 art 39.2; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 285.

8 See, however, R v Governor of Pentonville Prison, ex p Teja [1971] 2 QB 274 at 282, [1971] 2 All ER 11 at 17, DC (acceptance of the representative by the host country is a condition precedent to his immunity).

The provisions relating to diplomatic immunity as respects criminal jurisdiction<sup>1</sup> apply<sup>2</sup> to a foreign sovereign or other head of state, his household and private servants, as they apply to a head of a diplomatic mission and to members of his household<sup>3</sup>. Like a former diplomat, a former head of state is entitled to immunity from prosecution only in respect of acts done by him (or on his orders) in connection with his former office during his tenure of it<sup>4</sup>.

In respect of an international organisation of which the United Kingdom is a member, certain 'quasi-diplomatic' immunities may be granted to its officers or representatives by Order in Council<sup>1</sup>. The precise terms of such immunities vary from one case to another<sup>2</sup>. Because the immunities are a privilege of the international organisation, they may be waived by the organisation, but not by the officer or representative himself<sup>3</sup>.

1 See the International Organisations Act 1968 s 1, Sch 1 (as amended); and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 309 et seq.

2 For example, the United Nations and International Court of Justice (Immunities and Privileges) Order 1974, SI 1974/1261, grants full immunity to judges of the International Court of Justice and to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, and immunity to other officers, counsel, assessors and experts in respect of acts done or omitted in the course of their duties (see INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 311); and the Commonwealth Secretariat Act 1966 s 1, Sch 1 (as amended) gives senior officers of the Commonwealth Secretariat the like privileges and immunities as are accorded by law to a diplomatic agent and the members of his family forming part of his household, and immunity to other officers or servants in respect of acts or omissions done in the course or performance of official duties (see COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 723).

45. Consular officers and other members of a consular post.

Career consular officers<sup>1</sup> are not liable to arrest or detention pending trial, except in the case of a grave crime and pursuant to a decision by the competent judicial authority; and, except in such a case, career consular officers may not be committed to prison or be made liable to any other form of restriction on their personal freedom save in execution of a judicial decision of final effect<sup>2</sup>. Career consular officers and consular employees employed in the administration or technical service of a consular post<sup>3</sup> are not amenable to the jurisdiction of United Kingdom courts in respect of acts performed in the exercise of consular functions<sup>4</sup>.

No provision is made for immunities for honorary consular officers.

1 For the meaning of 'consular officer' see the Consular Relations Act 1968 s 1, Sch 1 art 1(d); and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 292.

2 See ibid Sch 1 art 41; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 296. This immunity is not enjoyed by a consular officer who is a United Kingdom citizen or permanently resident in the United Kingdom: see Sch 1 art 71.1; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 297. 'United Kingdom' means Great Britain and Northern Ireland: Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1. 'Great Britain' means England, Scotland and Wales: Union with Scotland Act 1706 preamble, art 1; Interpretation Act 1978 s 22(1), Sch 2 para 5(a). Neither the Channel Islands nor the Isle of Man are within the United Kingdom.

4 See ibid Sch 1 arts 1(e), 43.1; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARAS 295-296. The immunities in Sch 1 arts 41, 43 may be reduced or supplemented by Order in Council in accordance with any agreement between the United Kingdom and the foreign state concerned: see s 3, Sch 2; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 301. The immunities of Commonwealth and Irish consular missions are governed by Orders in Council made under s 12 (as substituted): see INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 302.

These provisions do not affect any power of arrest, search etc with respect to offences believed to have been committed against English law: see the Visiting Forces Act 1952 s 5 (as amended); and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 66. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(4) CRIMINAL CAPACITY AND IMMUNITY/48. Immunity notices.

48. Immunity notices.

A specified prosecutor<sup>1</sup> who thinks that for the purposes of the investigation or prosecution of any offence it is appropriate to offer any person immunity from prosecution may give that person an immunity notice<sup>2</sup>. If a person is given such a notice, no proceedings for an offence of a description specified in the notice may be brought against that person in England and Wales except in circumstances specified in the notice<sup>3</sup>. An immunity notice ceases to have effect in relation to the person to whom it is given if the person fails to comply with any conditions specified in the notice<sup>4</sup>.

1 Each of the following is a specified prosecutor for these purposes in relation to proceedings in England and Wales: (1) the Director of Public Prosecutions; (2) the Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions; (3) the Director of the Serious Fraud Office; and (4) a prosecutor designated for these purposes by any such prosecutor: Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 71(4). The Director of Revenue and Customs Prosecutions is appointed under the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 34: see PARA 1068 post. As to the Director of Public Prosecutions see PARA 1066 post. As to the Director of the Serious Fraud Office see PARA 1067 post.

2 Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 71(1). An immunity notice is a written notice under s 71(1), and must not be given in relation to an offence under the Enterprise Act 2002 s 188 (cartel offences: see COMPETITION vol 18 (2009) PARA 319): Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 71(7). The Director of Public Prosecutions or a prosecutor designated by him (see note 1 supra) may not give an immunity notice in relation to proceedings in Northern Ireland: s 71(5). See also s 71(6).

(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME

(i) Complicity in Crime

49. Complicity in crime generally.

Provided that he has the necessary mens rea<sup>1</sup>, a person who participates in a crime may be convicted as a party to it if he is the perpetrator<sup>2</sup> of it, or if he assists or encourages the perpetrator at the time of its commission or before its commission (a secondary party)<sup>3</sup>.

Any person who aids, abets, counsels or procures the commission of any indictable offence<sup>4</sup>, whether an offence at common law or by statute, is liable to be tried and punished as a principal offender<sup>5</sup>. A person who aids, abets, counsels or procures the commission by another person of a summary offence<sup>6</sup> is guilty of the like offence and may be tried<sup>7</sup> (whether or not he is charged as a principal) either by a court having jurisdiction to try that other person or by a court having by virtue of his own offence jurisdiction to try him<sup>8</sup>; and any offence consisting in aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of an offence triable either way<sup>9</sup> is triable either way<sup>10</sup>.

Except in the case of treason<sup>11</sup>, a person who gives assistance after the commission of a crime does not become thereby a party to the crime<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to mens rea see PARA 8 et seq ante. As to the mens rea required to be a secondary party see PARA 52 post.

2 See PARA 50 post.

3 See Fost 341, 347. Hence, if the crime is committed in England, a secondary party commits that crime though the acts of abetting or counselling took place outside the jurisdiction: R v Robert Millar (Contractors) Ltd, R v Millar [1970] 2 QB 54, 54 Cr App Rep 158, CA; R v Wall [1974] 2 All ER 245 at 249, [1974] 1 WLR 930 at 935, CA. A person can be convicted as a secondary party to an offence of which he could not be convicted as principal, so that, for example, a woman can be convicted of rape as an accessory: see R v Ram (1893) 17 Cox CC 609. The mens rea required to be proved against a person who has assisted or encouraged the perpetrator is not identical to that required to be proved against the perpetrator; as to the mens rea to be proved against one who assists or encourages see PARA 52 post.

4 'Indictable offence' means an offence which, if committed by an adult, is triable on indictment, whether it is exclusively so triable or triable either way: Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1. As to proceedings on indictment see PARA 1232 et seq post.

5 Accessories and Abettors Act 1861 s 8 (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 65(4), Sch 12); and see PARAS 51-57 post. As this provision is essentially procedural, it does not affect the common law rule that a person can be convicted of abetting or counselling a crime only if the crime is thereafter committed (R v Gregory (1867) LR 1 CCR 77), although he may incur liability for incitement or conspiracy (see PARA 65 et seq post). See also R v De Marny [1907] 1 KB 388, CCR; R v Burton (1875) 13 Cox CC 71, CCR; R v Waudby [1895] 2 QB 482, CCR; Benford v Sims [1898] 2 QB 641, DC.

6 'Summary offence' means an offence which, if committed by an adult, is triable only summarily: Interpretation Act 1978 Sch 1. As to summary trial see PARA 1104 et seq post. At common law crimes were classified as treasons, felonies and misdemeanours, and a distinction was drawn in relation to felonies between the principal in the first degree, the principal in the second degree (the aider or abettor) and the accessory before the fact (the counsellor or procurer). In the case of felonies, the accessory after the fact was also guilty of an offence. All persons who incite, aid or abet treason are regarded as principals, as is any person who receives or assists the traitor, knowing him to be such: see Fost 431; 1 Hale PC 233. All distinctions between felony and misdemeanour have been abolished (see the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1(1)); and on all matters in which a distinction was formerly drawn the law and practice is assimilated to that formerly applicable to misdemeanours (see s 1(2)).

7     Is subject to the same time limit under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 127(1) as apply to a perpetrator: see Gould & Co v Houghton [1921] 1 KB 509, 85 JP 93, DC; Homolka v Osmond [1939] 1 All ER 154, DC; and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 589.

8     See the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 44(1); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 525.

9     Is other than an offence listed in ibid s 17(1), Sch 1: see PARA 1103 post. Aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of an offence so listed (except an offence under the Criminal Law Act 1967 ss 4(1), 5(1) (see PARAS 58, 734 post)), is triable either way by virtue of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 Sch 1 para 33: see PARA 1103 post.

10    See ibid s 44(2); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 525.

11    Any person who assists a traitor knowing him to be such is guilty of treason: see note 6 supra.

He may, however, be guilty of assisting an offender: see the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4 (as amended); and PARA 58 post.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(i) Complicity in Crime/50. Principal or perpetrator.

50. Principal or perpetrator.

A principal is a person who by his own act or omission directly brings about the actus reus<sup>1</sup>, or any part of the actus reus, of a crime<sup>2</sup>. A person may be a principal, notwithstanding the fact that he is not present when the crime is committed, if he causes the actus reus by some contrivance<sup>3</sup>, or by the use of an innocent agent<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to the actus reus see PARA 5 ante.

2 R v Sheppard (1839) 9 C & P 121; R v Kelly and M'Carthy (1847) 2 Car & Kir 379; and see R v Dyer and Disting (1801) 2 East PC 767. If several persons combine to forge an instrument, each of them who executes any part is a principal though he may not know by whom the other parts are executed: Bingley's Case (1821) Russ & Ry 446, CCR; Kirkwood's Case (1831) 1 Mood CC 304; Dade's Case (1831) 1 Mood CC 307, CCR.

There is no statutory definition of a principal. The Accessories and Abettors Act 1861 s 8 (as amended) (see PARA 49 ante) recognises the principal but does not define him. Notwithstanding the abolition of the distinctions between felonies and misdemeanours and the assimilation of the law to that applicable to misdemeanours (see the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1; and PARA 49 note 6 ante) it would seem that one who would formerly have been a principal in the first degree to felony will now be a principal or perpetrator whatever the offence. Cases decided under the former law accordingly remain authoritative in defining a principal.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(i) Complicity in Crime/51. Secondary parties; the actus reus.

51. Secondary parties; the actus reus.

A person who aids, abets, counsels or procures the commission of a crime and is liable to be tried and punished as a principal offender<sup>1</sup> may be termed a secondary party<sup>2</sup>.

The words 'aids, abets, counsels or procures' should be construed in their ordinary meaning and not in a technical sense<sup>3</sup>. To 'procure' the commission of an offence there must be a causal connection between the act constituting the procurement and the commission of the offence, but there need be no agreement or discussion as to the form which the offence should take<sup>4</sup>.

Although the commission of the principal offence must be proved, proof that the defendant's assisting or encouraging was a cause of its commission by the principal, in the sense that the principal would not have committed the offence but for that assistance or encouragement, is not required<sup>5</sup>, unless the allegation against the defendant is necessarily one of procuring, where such a causal link must be established<sup>6</sup>.

A person who is present abetting the principal when the crime is committed is liable as a secondary party even though he takes no part in the actual perpetration of the crime<sup>7</sup>. Mere presence at the commission of the crime is not enough to create criminal liability<sup>8</sup>, nor is it enough that a person is present with a secret intention to assist the principal should assistance be required<sup>9</sup>. Some encouragement or assistance must have been given to the principal either before or at the time of the commission of the crime with the intention of furthering its commission<sup>10</sup>.

Presence without more may, however, afford some evidence of assistance and encouragement<sup>11</sup>.

Knowledge that a crime is to be committed does not of itself make a person a secondary party. He must by his conduct have aided, abetted, counselled or procured the crime<sup>12</sup>. Thus it is enough if a person supplies materials in order that a crime of the particular kind may be committed but without knowing the details of the crime<sup>13</sup>, or supplies information to enable the crime to be carried out<sup>14</sup>. Rendering assistance knowing that one of several crimes is going to be committed, without knowing which crime, is enough<sup>15</sup>; but not if the only knowledge is of an intention to do something illegal<sup>16</sup>. Any assistance which enables the crime to be committed, given with knowledge of the relevant circumstances, will suffice<sup>17</sup>, unless the person was not in law entitled to withhold that assistance<sup>18</sup>.

Where assistance or encouragement is given a person may be a secondary party even though it cannot be shown that he conspired or was in direct communication with the principal<sup>19</sup>.

A person who renders assistance after the commission of the crime does not thereby become a party to it<sup>20</sup>.

1 See the Accessories and Abettors Act 1861 s 8 (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 65(4), Sch 12); the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 44(1); and PARAS 49 ante, 55, 57 post. Since the Accessories and Abettors Act 1861 s 8 (as amended) is essentially procedural and neither enlarges nor restricts the common law rules relating to participation in crime, any person who would formerly have been a principal in the second degree or an accessory before the fact to felony (see PARA 49 note 6 ante) continues to be a party to crime, but not otherwise.

2 All persons who incite, aid or abet treason are, however, themselves guilty of treason as principals and may be indicted accordingly: see PARA 49 note 6 ante.

Cf R v Bryce [2004] EWCA Crim 1231, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 592, which implies the need for a causal link between abetting and the commission of the offence.

6 A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1975) [1975] QB 773, [1975] 2 All ER 684, CA. It appears from the decision of the Court of Appeal in R v Bryce [2004] EWCA Crim 1231, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 592, that, although proof is not required that the defendant's aiding, abetting or counselling was a cause of the commission of the principal offence, in the sense that the offence might not otherwise have been committed by the perpetrator, there must be some causal link between such conduct and the commission of the principal offence.

9 1 Hale PC 439; R v Allan [1965] 1 QB 130, 47 Cr App Rep 243, CCA.

10 There must be an intent to aid and also an act or omission that amounts to an aiding or encouraging. Mere presence in pursuance of an agreement to commit the crime will suffice, but, where there is no prior counselling or procuring, mere presence will not suffice without some evidence of active assistance or encouragement given. An apparent exception to this rule is where a person has a right to control the actions of another, when his failure to take an opportunity to do so may afford evidence of encouragement by means of tacit approval of the other's actions: Du Cros v Lambourne [1907] 1 KB 40 DC; Rubie v Faulkner [1940] 1 KB 571, [1940] 1 All ER 285, DC; Tuck v Robson [1970] 1 All ER 1171, [1970] 1 WLR 741, DC; R v Webster (2006) Times, 15 March, CA.

See also R v Young (1838) 8 C & P 644. An intent to aid or encourage may be inferred from the fact that the parties were engaged in a joint unlawful enterprise (R v Baldessare (1930) 22 Cr App Rep 70, 144 LT 185, CCA); but a party is nevertheless criminally liable only if he has mens rea; cf R v Borthwick (1779) 1 Doug KB 207. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(i) Complicity in Crime/52. Secondary parties; the mental element.

52. Secondary parties; the mental element.

For the defendant to be convicted as a secondary party<sup>1</sup>, it must be proved that his act which constituted aiding, abetting etc was done:

- 12 (1) intentionally, in the sense that he did it deliberately (and not accidentally), knowing that his act was capable of encouraging the commission of the principal offence<sup>2</sup>; and
- 13 (2) with intent to assist or encourage the perpetrator (and not to obstruct or hinder him)<sup>3</sup>.

In addition, a person cannot be convicted as a secondary party unless he was aware of all the essential circumstances which make the act done a crime; but he need not have known that the act amounted in law to a crime<sup>4</sup>. Whether a defendant was aware of essential matters is to be decided on all the relevant evidence. He can be adjudged to have known if he deliberately closed his eyes to the circumstances<sup>5</sup>.

Lastly, a secondary party must be proved to have foreseen as a real possibility that the principal is acting, or may act, with the mens rea (if any) required for the principal offence<sup>6</sup>.

Criminal liability as a secondary party arises by virtue of the common law; hence mens rea is required of that party, even though the offence is one of strict liability as regards the principal<sup>7</sup>. It is not enough that the secondary party does acts which in fact aid or encourage the commission of the crime. Although it must be proved that the defendant had the mens rea set out above, it does not have to be proved that it was his purpose or desire that this crime be committed<sup>8</sup>. It is not necessary, however, to prove that there was a shared intention between the secondary party and the principal<sup>9</sup>. A person does not become a secondary party to a particular crime by rendering assistance to others knowing merely that the others have some criminal objective in view; but he need not know the details of the crime since it is enough if it is shown that he knew<sup>10</sup> that the crime contemplated was of the same kind or one of several kinds as that in fact committed<sup>11</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(i) Complicity in Crime/53. Commission of offence outside scope of joint criminal enterprise.

53. Commission of offence outside scope of joint criminal enterprise.

If several persons pursue a joint criminal enterprise, and one of them does an act in pursuance of the enterprise, all are responsible to the same extent for a consequence of that act which was unforeseen by them, for example because it resulted by accident or mistake<sup>1</sup>.

Cases of accidental departure from a joint criminal enterprise must be distinguished from those where, in carrying out a joint criminal enterprise with the defendant, the principal intentionally perpetrates an offence (the 'further offence') which the defendant has not assisted or encouraged him to commit.

Where one party to a joint enterprise to commit an offence foresees as a real possibility<sup>2</sup> that another party may, in the course of it, and with the necessary mens rea, do the act in question or an equally dangerous act, constituting the further offence (and the latter party does so), the former party is liable for that offence, even if he has not expressly or tacitly agreed to that offence, and even though he has expressly forbidden it<sup>3</sup>. Even if an alleged accomplice intended or foresaw that the principal would or might act with the mens rea for the further offence, he cannot be convicted as a party to that offence if the principal's act was fundamentally different from the acts intended or foreseen by the alleged accomplice<sup>4</sup>.

A defendant who is not guilty of being an accomplice to murder, because he did not contemplate that the principal might act with the mens rea for that offence in carrying out the joint enterprise, can nevertheless be convicted of manslaughter<sup>5</sup> if he contemplated that the principal might act with the mens rea for that offence and if the principal's act was the one foreseen as a real possibility by the defendant, or was no more dangerous than the one foreseen as a real possibility by the defendant<sup>6</sup>, but not if the act was fundamentally different from that so foreseen by the defendant<sup>7</sup>.

A person is not liable as a secondary party if he aids, abets, counsels or procures another to commit a particular offence against a particular person or property and that other knowingly commits a different offence or knowingly commits the particular offence against another person or property<sup>8</sup>; but if that other, although varying the manner, place or time of performance, does in substance that which he is procured to do, the instigator is liable as a secondary party<sup>9</sup>.

1 If two persons race one another on the highway both are guilty of manslaughter if one accidentally runs over a pedestrian and kills him: R v Swindall (1846) 2 Car & Kir 230; cf R v Baldessare (1930) 22 Cr App Rep 70, 144 LT 185, CCA.

2 The requisite degree of foresight, 'foresight of real possibility' means foresight of a risk which is not foreseen as so remote that the defendant 'dismissed it as altogether negligible': R v Powell, R v English [1999] 1 AC 1, [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 261, HL. See also Chan Wing-Siu v R [1985] AC 168, 80 Cr App Rep 117, PC; R v Ward (1986) 85 Cr App Rep 71, [1987] Crim LR 338, CA; R v Hyde [1991] 1 QB 134, 92 Cr App Rep 131, CA; R v Roberts [1993] 1 All ER 583, 96 Cr App Rep 291, CA.

The principles to which the text and notes 6, 7 infra refer are not limited to pre-planned criminal enterprise; they are equally applicable to a case where two or more people spontaneously combine together in an attack encouraging and assisting each other: R v Uddin [1999] QB 431, [1999] 1 Cr App Rep 319, CA.

Cf R v Wan [1995] Crim LR 296, CA, which is inconsistent with what appears in the text; it is submitted that this case cannot be good law in the light of the authorities cited above.

Views differ about whether the rules relating to joint criminal enterprise set out in the text are separate from those relating to accomplices in general. In R v Stewart, R v Schofield supra, the Court of Appeal distinguished between cases of joint enterprise where an accomplice was physically present when the offence was committed and those where the assistance or encouragement was given before its commission, stating that: 'If the principal has committed the crime of murder, the liability of the secondary party can only be a liability for aiding and abetting murder. In contrast, where the allegation is joint enterprise, the allegation is that one defendant participated in the criminal act of another. This is a different principle': see R v Stewart, R v Schofield supra at 165 and 447. No mention was made of the earlier decision of the Court of Appeal in R v Rook [1993] 2 All ER 955, 97 Cr App Rep 327, where it was held that the rules about joint criminal enterprise apply whether the person who has lent assistance or encouragement has done so before the commission of the offence or is present when it is committed.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(i) Complicity in Crime/54. Withdrawal from participation.

54. Withdrawal from participation.

A person may excuse himself from liability for an offence which he has assisted, encouraged, counselled or procured by voluntarily making an effective withdrawal from participation before the offence is committed. Mere repentance is not enough for this purpose<sup>1</sup>; nor is merely failing to turn up at the scene of the crime as arranged<sup>2</sup>; nor is merely running away from the scene of the crime<sup>3</sup>. What is required depends on the circumstances of each case but one essential element is that, where practicable and reasonable, there must be timely communication of the intention to abandon the common purpose from those who wish to dissociate themselves from the contemplated crime to those who desire to continue in it; what is 'timely communication' must be determined by the facts of each case but where practicable and reasonable it ought to be such communication, verbal or otherwise, that will serve unequivocal notice upon the other party to the common unlawful cause that if he proceeds upon it he does so without the further aid and assistance of those who withdraw<sup>4</sup>.

The mere fact that an accomplice is arrested before the principal offence is committed does not prevent him being convicted of it<sup>5</sup>.

Whether or not a person has done enough to demonstrate that he is withdrawing is ultimately a question of fact and degree for the jury. Account will be taken of, inter alia, the nature of the assistance and encouragement already given and how imminent the infliction of the fatal injury or injuries is, as well as the nature of the action said to constitute withdrawal. Those principles apply even in cases of spontaneous violence: R v Robinson [2000] EWCA Crim 8, explaining R v Mitchell, R v King (1999) 163 JP 75, CA. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(i) Complicity in Crime/55. Official collaboration in crime.

55. Official collaboration in crime.

There is no defence of entrapment in English law<sup>1</sup>. A person charged with crime is accordingly not entitled to an acquittal by reason only of the fact that the crime has been instigated by another<sup>2</sup>, whether he be a person holding an official position or not<sup>3</sup>; or by reason of the fact that the conduct of the police or their agents contributed to the commission of the crime<sup>4</sup>. It may, however, be lawful to take part in an offence which has already been planned and is going to be committed if the participation is for the purpose of trapping the offender<sup>5</sup>; and it makes no difference that police participation in these circumstances may have affected the time for the commission of the offence<sup>6</sup>.

It is doubtful whether a police officer, or a person acting under the directions of the police, who aids, abets, counsels or procures the commission of a crime for the purpose of detecting offenders and bringing them to justice thereby becomes a secondary party to the crime<sup>7</sup>.

1 R v Sang [1980] AC 402, 69 Cr App Rep 282, HL.

2 Such conduct may, however, amount to a defence where eg consent is in issue: see R v Macro [1969] Crim LR 205, CA (conviction for robbery quashed where owner of property, acting under police directions, was not put in fear).

3 It is, however, improper for the police (and, presumably, other persons holding official positions) to instigate crime: Brannan v Peek [1948] 1 KB 68, [1947] 2 All ER 572, DC; R v Birtles [1969] 2 All ER 1131n, 53 Cr App Rep 469, CA; R v McCann (1971) 56 Cr App Rep 359, CA. Infiltration of suspect societies by the police is lawful and proper in appropriate cases: R v Mealey, R v Sheridan (1974) 60 Cr App Rep 59, CA. See also R v Bickley (1909) 73 JP 239, CCA.

4 R v Sang [1980] AC 402, 69 Cr App Rep 282, HL. At common law there is no judicial discretion to rule that the prosecution may not lead evidence of offences so instigated, except possibly in the exceptional circumstances where the prosecution amounts to an abuse of the court; a trial judge has always a discretion to refuse to admit evidence if in his opinion its prejudicial effect outweighs its probative value, but, save with regard to admissions and confessions and generally with regard to evidence obtained from the defendant after commission of the offence, he has no discretion to refuse to admit relevant admissible evidence on the ground that it was obtained by improper or unfair means: R v Sang supra at 437 and 291 per Lord Diplock, explaining dicta in Kuruma Son of Kaniu v R [1955] AC 197, [1955] 1 All ER 236, PC. As to admissibility of evidence generally see PARA 1364 et seq post. As to the statutory discretion to exclude relevant prosecution evidence see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 78 (as amended); R v Christou, R v Wright [1992] QB 979, 95 Cr App Rep 264, CA; R v Morley, R v Hutton [1994] Crim LR 919, CA; R v Smurthwaite, R v Gill [1994] 1 All ER 898, 98 Cr App Rep 437, CA; R v Shannon [2001] 1 WLR 51, [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 168, CA; and PARA 1365 post.

In a case of entrapment by a law enforcement officer, or his agent, a court has power to stay the proceedings for abuse of process if it concludes that a fair trial is not possible or that, although a fair trial is possible, it would be contrary to the public interest in the integrity of the criminal justice system that a trial should take place: R v Latif, R v Shahzad [1996] 1 All ER 353, [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 92, HL; R v Looseley, A-G's Reference (No 3 of 2000) [2001] UKHL 53, [2001] 4 All ER 897, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 360. The main curb on excessive entrapment should be a stay of proceedings rather than ruling evidence inadmissible: R v Looseley, A-G's Reference (No 3 of 2000) supra. As to stay of proceedings in the Crown Court for abuse of process see PARA 1225 post.

In determining sentence, however, the court may have regard to the fact that the crime would not, or might not, have been committed but for official participation: R v Sang supra; and see also Browning v JH Watson (Rochester) Ltd [1953] 2 All ER 775 at 779, [1953] 1 WLR 1172 at 1177, DC, per Lord Goddard CJ; R v Birtles [1969] 2 All ER 1131n, 53 Cr App Rep 469, CA; R v McCann (1971) 56 Cr App Rep 359; R v Chapman, R v Denton [1989] Crim LR 846, 11 Cr App Rep (S) 242, CA; R v Perrin (1992) 13 Cr App Rep (S) 518, CA; R v Mackey [1992] Crim LR 602, CA; R v Bigley (1992) 14 Cr App Rep (S) 201, CA; R v Springer [1999] 1 Cr App Rep

6 R v McEvilly (1973) 60 Cr App Rep 150, CA.

7 A dishonest policeman who induces a third person to commit a crime in order to improve his detection record will himself incur criminal liability: see R v Sang [1980] AC 402 at 443, 69 Cr App Rep 282 at 296, HL, obiter per Lord Salmon. The use of 'dishonest' seems to be superfluous, and it seems that any police officer or his agent who incites the commission of an offence which is not already laid on becomes a secondary party to it (see Brannan v Peek [1948] 1 KB 68, [1947] 2 All ER 572, DC), despite earlier authority to the contrary (ie R v Mullins (1848) 3 Cox CC 526; R v Bickley (1909) 73 JP 239, CCA). A person acting in a purely private capacity in inciting an offence which is not already laid on is liable as a secondary party: R v Smith [1960] 2 QB 423, 44 Cr App Rep 55, CCA.

56. Victims as parties to crime.

Where conduct has been made criminal with a view to the protection of a particular class of persons particularly open to exploitation, such as children and young persons under 16, it would appear that, in general<sup>1</sup>, any member of that class of persons who is the victim of such a crime is not to be regarded as a party to it, although he was willing that it be committed or has in fact instigated its commission<sup>2</sup>.

Though in such a case a willing victim is not to be regarded as a party to an offence committed upon himself, he may, if of the age of criminal responsibility<sup>3</sup>, be criminally liable for abetting or counselling the commission of the offence upon another<sup>4</sup>.

1 It has not been settled whether the rule applies outside the field of sexual offences.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(i) Complicity in Crime/57. Indictment etc of secondary parties.

57. Indictment etc of secondary parties.

So that a defendant may know whether he is alleged to have been a principal or a secondary party, the particulars of the offence in the indictment should make it clear whether it is alleged that he was a principal or secondary party<sup>1</sup>. However, if the prosecution is advanced on the basis that the defendant was either the principal or secondary party this does not prevent the prosecution from alleging this in a single count alleging the different ways of participation; it is not necessary to have separate counts<sup>2</sup>.

In general, a secondary party may be tried and convicted whether or not the principal has been tried and whether or not the court has jurisdiction to try the principal<sup>3</sup>. The fact that the alleged principal has been acquitted, whether on a procedural point<sup>4</sup> or on the merits, is no bar to the conviction of a secondary party<sup>5</sup>; there may be cases where the conviction of a secondary party must be quashed as inconsistent<sup>6</sup> or unsafe<sup>7</sup> where the principal is acquitted; but, where the offence can be proved against the secondary party, he is not entitled to be acquitted because the offence is not proved against the alleged principal<sup>8</sup>. A secondary party cannot be convicted unless the crime to which he is alleged to have been a party is proved to have been committed<sup>9</sup>. However, if the actus reus of an offence requiring its perpetrator to be of a particular description, for example a person with a penis in rape or a married person in bigamy, is committed by a person of that description who lacks the necessary mens rea or who has a defence, a person not of that description who has aided, abetted, counselled or procured him to commit that offence can be convicted of it as a secondary party<sup>10</sup>. Where offences share a common actus reus, being distinguished by different requirements as to mens rea, it seems that a secondary party may be convicted of an offence of a more serious degree than that for which the principal has been convicted<sup>11</sup>.

58. Assisting offenders.

Where a person has committed a relevant offence<sup>1</sup>, any other person commits an offence who, knowing or believing him to be guilty of the offence<sup>2</sup> or of some other relevant offence<sup>3</sup>, does, without lawful authority or reasonable excuse<sup>4</sup>, any act<sup>5</sup> with intent to impede his apprehension or prosecution<sup>6</sup>.

This offence is punishable on indictment according to the gravity of the principal offence, as follows:

- 14 (1) if the principal offence is one for which the sentence is fixed by law, the offender is liable to imprisonment for not more than ten years<sup>7</sup>;
- 15 (2) if it is one for which a person, not previously convicted, may be sentenced to imprisonment for a term of 14 years, the offender is liable to imprisonment for not more than seven years<sup>8</sup>;
- 16 (3) if it is an offence, not included in heads (1) and (2) above, but for which a person, not previously convicted, may be sentenced to imprisonment for a term of ten years, the offender is liable to imprisonment for not more than five years<sup>9</sup>; and
- 17 (4) in any other case, the offender is liable to imprisonment for not more than three years<sup>10</sup>.

No proceedings may be instituted for such an offence except by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>11</sup>.

1 If an offence for which the sentence is fixed by law (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 15) (Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4(1A)(a) (s 4(1A) added by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 119(1), Sch 16 para 17; and substituted by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 111, Sch 7 para 40(1), (2))) or an offence for which a person of 18 years or over (not previously convicted) may be sentenced to imprisonment for a term of five years (or might be so sentenced but for the restrictions imposed by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 33 (as amended) (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 661)) (Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4(1A)(b) (as so added and substituted)).

2 The offence must be specified in the charge: R v Morgan [1972] 1 QB 436, 56 Cr App Rep 181, CA. A prior conviction of the principal offender is not a prerequisite to a conviction under the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4(1) (as amended): R v J Donald, R v L Donald (1986) 83 Cr App Rep 49, CA.

3 It is necessary only that the person charged should have known all the facts which constitute the offence; it is not necessary that he should have known that the facts constituted a relevant offence in law: see PARA 52 text and note 4 ante.

4 Whether given facts are capable of constituting lawful authority or reasonable excuse is a matter of law for the judge (R v Johnson (1873) LR 2 CCR 15; Dickins v Gill [1896] 2 QB 310, DC); whether they do is for the jury.

5 Some positive act is required but it is presumably enough that the act is done through an agent: see R v Jarvis (1837) 2 Mood & R 40.

6 See the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4(1) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 Sch 7 para 40(1), (2)). A person commits this offence only where his intent is to impede the arrest etc of another. It is presumably not enough that his intention is to impede his own arrest even though he realises that this incidentally impedes the arrest of another (cf R v Jones [1949] 1 KB 194, 33 Cr App Rep 33, CCA, decided on the former law relating to accessories after the fact); or that his intention is to make a profit for himself (R v Andrews, R v Craig [1962] 3 All ER 961n, 47 Cr App Rep 32, CCA). See also R v Woods [1969] 1 QB 447, 53 Cr App Rep 30, CA. It is not necessary to prove that the person charged knew the identity of the offender provided that he intended to impede the apprehension etc of that person: R v Brindley, R v Long [1971] 2 QB 300, 55 Cr App Rep 258, CA.

Where the prosecution desires to rely on the possibility of a conviction of assisting an offender, contrary to the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4(1) (as amended), there should be a specific count charging that offence; in the absence of such a count, the matter should be raised as early as possible during the trial: R v Vincent (1972) 56 Cr App Rep 281, CA, following R v Cross, R v Channon [1971] 3 All ER 641, 55 Cr App Rep 540, CA.

7 Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4(3)(a). As to the power to fine see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 139. The offence is triable either way where the offence to which it relates is triable either way: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17(1), Sch 1 para 26(a); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 655. As to offences triable either way see PARAS 1103, 1109 et seq post; and as to the circumstances in which a verdict of an offence under the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4(1) (as amended) (see text to notes 1-6 supra) may be returned on an indictment for a relevant offence see s 4(2) (as amended); and PARA 1337 post.

59. Vicarious liability: the general rule.

In general an employer or principal is not criminally liable for an offence committed by his employee or agent even though it is committed in the course of the employment or agency<sup>1</sup>. There is no presumption that a crime committed by an employee or agent in the course of his duties has been authorised by the employer or principal<sup>2</sup>.

To this general rule, however, there are exceptions both at common law<sup>3</sup> and under statute<sup>4</sup>.

60. Vicarious liability at common law.

Public nuisance constitutes an exception at common law to the general rule as to vicarious liability<sup>1</sup>. An employer is criminally liable where a nuisance is created in the ordinary course of his employee's employment<sup>2</sup> and he cannot escape liability on the ground that he was ignorant of the nuisance or that it was created contrary to his orders<sup>3</sup>.

Criminal libel constitutes the second exception at common law to the general rule as to vicarious liability. An employer is criminally liable for a criminal libel published by his employee<sup>4</sup> unless he proves that he did not authorise the publication and that the publication did not arise from want of due care on his part<sup>5</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(iii) Criminal Liability for the Acts of Others/61. Vicarious liability in relation to statutory offences.

61. Vicarious liability in relation to statutory offences.

Criminal liability may be imposed by statute on an employer or principal for the acts or omissions of his employee or agent either expressly or by implication<sup>1</sup>. The implication may arise either because a person has delegated to another the performance of his own statutory duties<sup>2</sup> or because the acts of another may be in law his own acts<sup>3</sup>. Such liability may arise where the offence is one requiring mens rea<sup>4</sup> or one imposing strict liability<sup>5</sup>.

1 To determine whether a statute impliedly imposes vicarious liability, regard must be had to 'the object of the statute, the words used, the nature of the duty laid down, the person upon whom it is imposed, the person by whom it would in ordinary circumstances be performed, and the person upon whom the penalty is imposed': Mousell Bros Ltd v London and North Eastern Rly Co [1917] 2 KB 836 at 845 per Atkin J. It is not to be lightly presumed that the legislature intended that one person is to be punished for the fault of another (see Chisholm v Doulton (1889) 22 QBD 736 at 741 per Cave J; and see also Reynolds v GH Austin & Sons Ltd [1951] 2 KB 135 at 149, [1951] 1 All ER 606 at 611 per Devlin J); and vicarious liability can be imposed only where from consideration of the terms of the statute and other relevant circumstances it appears clearly that that must have been the intention of Parliament (Vane v Yiannopoulos [1965] AC 486, [1964] 3 All ER 820, HL).

A partner can also be vicariously liable for the acts or omissions of his fellow partner, and a principal for his independent contractor, in the type of case described in PARA 63 post.

2 See Allen v Whitehead [1930] 1 KB 211; Vane v Yiannopoulos [1965] AC 486, [1964] 3 All ER 820, HL. In the latter case doubt was cast on the validity of the delegation principle; but the principle was reaffirmed in R v Winson [1969] 1 QB 371, [1968] 1 All ER 197, CA; Howker v Robinson [1973] QB 178, [1972] 2 All ER 786, DC.

3 Many examples are provided by cases arising under statutes dealing with the sale, use, keeping and possession of goods under statutes such as the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 and the Food Safety Act 1990. See Coppen v Moore (No 2) [1898] 2 QB 306 (selling goods with a false trade description contrary to the Merchandise Marks Act 1887 s 2(2) (repealed: see now the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 s 1; and SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 475)); James & Son Ltd v Smees, Green v Burnett [1955] 1 QB 78, [1954] 3 All ER 273 (using a motor vehicle in contravention of the Motor Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1951, SI 1951/2101 (revoked: see now the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986, SI 1986/1078 (as amended); and ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 267 et seq)). See also PARA 63 note 2 post.

4 See PARA 62 post. In Chisholm v Doulton (1889) 22 QBD 736 at 742, Cave J thought that vicarious liability could not be imposed where the crime was one of negligence (as to which see PARA 14 ante) but this view was doubted by Lord Parker CJ in G Newton Ltd v Smith [1962] 2 QB 278, [1962] 2 All ER 19 at 22. See also Niven v Greaves (1890) 54 JP 548, DC; Armitage Ltd v Nicholson (1913) 108 LT 993.

5 See PARA 63 post. The express imposition of strict liability is exceptional but see eg the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 s 64(5) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1108); and the Property Misdescriptions Act 1991 s 1(2) (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 791).

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(iii) Criminal Liability for the Acts of Others/62. Statutory offences involving mens rea.

62. Statutory offences involving mens rea.

Where a statutory offence is one involving mens rea, vicarious liability can arise only where there has been delegation<sup>1</sup>. Where the legislature places a duty upon one person and he delegates the performance of that duty to another, whether an employee or agent<sup>2</sup>, the delegator is criminally liable for the failure of his delegate to perform that duty, at least where the performance of the duty cannot be properly secured without the imposition of vicarious liability<sup>3</sup>. For vicarious liability to arise there must be a real and effective delegation<sup>4</sup>; to constitute such a delegation the activity delegated must be under the exclusive control of the delegate, free from the principal's supervision<sup>5</sup>. If the employer or principal remains in control of the activity he is liable for his own acts and omissions but not for those acts of his employee or agent which he does not actually counsel or abet<sup>6</sup>.

1 See Vane v Yiannopoulos [1965] AC 486 at 503, [1964] 3 All ER 820 at 827, HL, per Lord Evershed ('In my judgment, it can and should now fairly be taken as established by the authorities that, where by the terms of the relevant statutory provision 'knowledge' is required as a condition of liability, none of the decided cases has accepted or imposed liability in the absence of the knowledge on the licensee's part or in the absence on the licensee's part of real 'delegation' of his powers and duties'). See also R v Winson [1969] 1 QB 371 at 382, [1968] 1 All ER 197 at 202, CA, per Lord Parker CJ ('The principle of delegation comes into play, and only comes into play, in cases where, though the statute uses words which import knowledge or intent . . . nevertheless it has been held that a man cannot get out of the responsibilities which have been put on him by delegating those responsibilities to another'). 3 Allen v Whitehead [1930] 1 KB 211, DC (where, if the owner of the premises had not been liable for the conduct of his manager in knowingly allowing prostitutes to remain on the premises, the statute would have been rendered ineffective). See also Police Comrs v Cartman [1896] 1 QB 655 at 658, DC, per Lord Russell CJ; R v Winson [1969] 1 QB 371, [1968] 1 All ER 197, CA.

4 Vane v Yiannopoulos [1965] AC 486, [1964] 3 All ER 820, HL (no delegation where licensee retained overall control of the premises though he was in the basement at the time when his employee did the prohibited act on the ground floor). PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(iii) Criminal Liability for the Acts of Others/63. Statutory offences of strict liability.

63. Statutory offences of strict liability.

Even where an offence is one of strict liability<sup>1</sup>, vicarious liability can arise only where this appears clearly to have been the intention of the legislature. Where the offence is so defined as to impose a strict duty upon a person, that person may be liable in respect of the performance of that duty by his employee or agent, whether there has been a delegation or not<sup>2</sup>, if to hold otherwise would be to render the statutory provision ineffective<sup>3</sup>. Where an employer or principal is thus made vicariously liable, he cannot (unless the statute provides a defence to this effect) escape his liability by showing that he took all reasonable care that the law should not be contravened, and he is liable notwithstanding that his employee or agent may have disobeyed his instructions, so long as the conduct of the employee or agent remains in the course of his employment or agency<sup>4</sup>.

These principles also apply so as to render a partner criminally liable for the acts of a fellow partner<sup>5</sup> or a principal criminally liable for the acts of an independent contractor, in the same way as if that contractor had been his employee or agent<sup>6</sup> but not for the acts of an employee of an employment agency which has supplied that person to work for him<sup>7</sup>. They do not apply so as to render a member of the board of directors, or governing committee, of a body corporate vicariously liable for the acts of an employee or agent of that body corporate<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to offences of strict liability see PARA 15 ante.

2 'When an absolute offence has been created by Parliament, then the person on whom a duty is thrown is responsible, whether he has delegated or whether he has acted through a servant; he is absolutely liable regardless of any intent or knowledge or mens rea': R v Winson [1969] 1 QB 371 at 382, [1968] 1 All ER 197 at 202, CA, per Lord Parker CJ. In determining whether such a duty is created, a factor of importance appears to be whether the expression used is capable in its context of describing both the activity of the employer or principal, and that of the employee or agent. Such expressions include 'sells' (Coppen v Moore (No 2) [1898] 2 QB 306, DC); 'keeps' (Strutt v Clift [1911] 1 KB 1, DC); 'possesses' (Melias Ltd v Preston [1957] 2 QB 380, [1957] 2 All ER 449, DC); and 'uses' (James & Son Ltd v Smee, Green v Burnett [1955] 1 QB 78, [1954] 3 All ER 273, DC); but not 'drives' (Richmond upon Thames London Borough Council v Pinn & Wheeler Ltd [1989] RTR 354, DC).

4 Coppen v Moore (No 2) [1898] 2 QB 306, DC; Police Comrs v Cartman [1896] 1 QB 655, DC. The employer is not liable where the employee acts outside the course of his employment; while the employer may be liable where the employee does what he is employed to do albeit in an unauthorised manner (Police Comrs v Cartman supra), he is not liable where the employee does something which he is not employed to do at all (Boyle v Smith [1906] 1 KB 432, DC; Phelon and Moore Ltd v Keel [1914] 3 KB 165, DC).

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(5) PARTICIPATION IN CRIME/(iii) Criminal Liability for the Acts of Others/64. No vicarious liability in relation to abetment or attempt.

64. No vicarious liability in relation to abetment or attempt.

There can be no vicarious liability for an attempt to commit a crime, even in cases where the employer or principal would incur criminal liability for that crime if it were completed<sup>1</sup>; nor can there be vicarious liability for the aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring of a crime and this is so even where the employer or principal would be liable had the crime been perpetrated by the employee<sup>2</sup>. This rule applies in the case both of crimes at common law<sup>3</sup> and statutory offences. As criminal liability both for an attempt and for aiding and abetting, although statutory, derives from the common law, both require mens rea<sup>4</sup> and this is equally applicable where the substantive offence is one of strict liability<sup>5</sup>.

1 Cf Gardner v Akeroyd [1952] 2 QB 743 at 751, [1952] 2 All ER 306 at 311, DC, per Lord Goddard CJ.

2 Ferguson v Weaving [1951] 1 KB 814, [1951] 1 All ER 412, DC.

3 Except in the case of public nuisance and criminal libel, there is no vicarious liability at common law for a substantive offence: see PARA 60 ante.

4 As to the mental element in aiding and abetting and in attempt see PARAS 52 ante, 81 post.

5 In the case of attempt, a further ground of exclusion of vicarious liability is that the employer or principal might otherwise be liable for his employee or agent's attempt even though he intervened to prevent the completion of the employee's offence: Gardner v Akeroyd [1952] 2 QB 743 at 751, [1952] 2 All ER 306 at 311, DC, per Lord Goddard CJ.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(i) Incitement/65. Incitement.

(6) INCHOATE CRIMES

(i) Incitement

65. Incitement.

It is an indictable offence at common law for a person to incite or solicit another to commit an offence<sup>1</sup>, even though no such offence is either committed or attempted<sup>2</sup>. The penalty for incitement is imprisonment or a fine or both at the discretion of the court<sup>3</sup>.

For an incitement to be complete there must be some form of actual communication with a person whom it is intended to incite; where, however, a communication is sent with a view to incite, but does not reach the intended recipient, the sender may be guilty of an attempt to incite<sup>4</sup>. Incitement is complete though the mind of the person incited is unaffected and notwithstanding that the person incited intends to inform on the inciter<sup>5</sup>.

In order to prove incitement it is necessary to show that the defendant sought to persuade or encourage<sup>6</sup>, or compel by threats or other pressure<sup>7</sup>, another to commit an act that would constitute a crime if done by that other<sup>8</sup>. It is irrelevant that the initiative is taken by the person alleged to have been incited, who invites the alleged inciter to incite him<sup>9</sup>. It must be proved that the defendant intended that the crime incited should be carried out; it is irrelevant whether or not the person incited had the mens rea for that crime<sup>10</sup>. It is no defence that, at the time of the incitement, the offence incited could not have been committed if it was envisaged that it would be capable of commission on the occurrence of some future event<sup>11</sup>.

If the person who incites believes that the crime can be accomplished by the means suggested, he commits an offence although the crime incited cannot be accomplished by those means; but there is no offence of incitement where he does not believe that the crime can be thus accomplished even if the person incited believes that it can<sup>12</sup>.

Incitement to commit an offence cannot be committed where it is absolutely impossible to commit the offence alleged to have been incited<sup>13</sup>.

1 R v Higgins (1801) 2 East 5; R v Gregory (1867) LR 1 CCR 77. For statutory forms of the offence of incitement see the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 4 (as amended) (incitement to murder: see PARA 104 post); the Perjury Act 1911 s 7(2) (see PARA 721 post); and the Official Secrets Act 1920 s 7 (see PARA 497 post). Such statutory forms of incitement appear to add nothing to the substantive law of incitement at common law. For a consideration of the meaning of the word 'incite' see Invicta Plastics Ltd v Clare [1976] RTR 251, DC (company which advertised a device which could detect police radar traps properly convicted of the common law offence of inciting people who read the advertisement to use unlicensed apparatus for wireless telegraphy contrary to the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1949 s 1(1) (as amended) (see TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND BROADCASTING vol 45(1) (2005 Reissue) PARAS 228-229)).

Incitement to commit the offence of conspiracy, whether the conspiracy incited would be an offence at common law or under the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 67 post) or any other enactment is no longer an offence: see the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 5(7) (amended by the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 10, Schedule Pt I). However, it is submitted that an incitement to incite is an offence except perhaps where it amounts to an incitement to conspire: see R v Sirat (1985) 83 Cr App Rep 41 at 44 ('Lest there be any doubt, we do not intend to indicate that the common law offence of inciting to incite no longer exists').

An incitement in England and Wales to commit an offence abroad is not an offence under English law unless the incited offence, if committed, would be triable in England and Wales, because otherwise the conduct is not an offence for the purposes of English law: see PARA 1054 et seq post. For an exception to this see the Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 5(4) (a person may be convicted of incitement to commit a specified offence of dishonesty if the incitement takes place in England and Wales and would be triable in England but for what the person charged had in view not being an offence triable in England and Wales). It is immaterial whether or not the defendant was a British citizen at any material time or was in England at any such time: see s 3(1); and PARA 362 post. A person is guilty of an offence triable by virtue of s 5(4) only if what he had in view would involve the commission of an offence under the law in force where the whole or any part of it was intended to take place: s 6(2). Conduct punishable under the law in force in any place is an offence under that law for the purpose of s 6, however it is described in that law: s 6(3). A condition specified in s 6(2) is to be taken to be satisfied unless, not later than rules of court may provide, the defence serves on the prosecution a notice:

- 1 (1) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to what the defendant had in view, the condition is not in its opinion satisfied (s 6(4)(a), (5)(b));
- 2 (2) showing the grounds for that opinion (s 6(4)(b)); and
- 3 (3) requiring the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied (s 6(4)(c)).

The court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied without the prior service of a notice under s 6(4): s 6(6). In the Crown Court, the question whether the condition is satisfied is to be decided by the judge alone: s 6(7).

'Rules of court', in relation to any court, means rules made by the authority having power to make rules or orders regulating the practice and procedure of that court; and the power of the authority to make rules of court includes power to make such rules for the purpose of any Act which directs or authorises anything to be done by rules of court: Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1.

3 As to penalties see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 31, 139. Without prejudice to any other enactment by virtue of which any offence is triable only summarily, any offence consisting in the incitement to commit a summary offence is triable only summarily: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 45(1), (2); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 653. On conviction of an offence consisting in the incitement to commit a summary offence, a person is liable to the same penalties as he would be liable to on conviction of such offence: see s 45(3); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 656. See also R v Curr [1968] 2 QB 944, 51 Cr App Rep 113, CA (decided under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1952 s 19(1), Sch 1 para 20 (repealed)).

Any offence consisting in the incitement to commit an offence triable either way, except an offence mentioned in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17(1), Sch 1 para 33 (ie an offence of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring particular offences: see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 655) is triable either way: see Sch 1 para 35 (amended by the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 10, Schedule Pt I); para 1103 post; and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 655. On summary conviction of an offence consisting in the incitement to commit an offence triable either way, a person is not liable to any greater penalty than he would be liable to on summary conviction of such offence: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1)(b). PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(i) Incitement/65A. Encouraging or assisting crime.

65A. Encouraging or assisting crime.

The Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 2 (ss 44-67) creates offences in respect of the encouragement or assistance of crime. For transitional and transitory provisions and savings see Sch 13.

1. Inchoate offences

A person commits an offence if he does an act capable of encouraging or assisting the commission of an offence; and he intends to encourage or assist its commission: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 44(1). But he is not to be taken to have intended to encourage or assist the commission of an offence merely because such encouragement or assistance was a foreseeable consequence of his act: s 44(2).

A person commits an offence if (1) he does an act capable of encouraging or assisting the commission of an offence; and (2) he believes that the offence will be committed; and that his act will encourage or assist its commission: s 45.

A person commits an offence if (a) he does an act capable of encouraging or assisting the commission of one or more of a number of offences; and (b) he believes (i) that one or more of those offences will be committed (but has no belief as to which); and (ii) that his act will encourage or assist the commission of one or more of them: s 46(1). It is immaterial for the purposes of head (ii) whether the person has any belief as to which offence will be encouraged or assisted: s 46(2). If a person is charged with an offence under s 46(1) (A) the indictment must specify the offences alleged to be the 'number of offences' mentioned in head (a); but (B) nothing in head (A) requires all the offences potentially comprised in that number to be specified: s 46(3). In relation to an offence under s 46, reference in Pt 2 (ss 44-67) to the offences specified in the indictment is to the offences specified by virtue of head (A): s 46(4).

Provision is made relating to how an offence under ss 44-46 may be proved (s 47) and further rules are provided in relation to what needs to be proved to establish guilt for an offence under s 46 (s 48). Supplemental provision is made: s 49, Sch 3.

2. Reasonableness defence

A person is not guilty of an offence under the Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 2 (ss 44-67) if he proves (1) that he knew certain circumstances existed; and (2) that it was reasonable for him to act as he did in those circumstances: s 50(1). A person is not guilty of an offence under Pt 2 if he proves (a) that he believed certain circumstances to exist; (b) that his belief was reasonable; and (c) that it was reasonable for him to act as he did in the circumstances as he believed them to be: s 50(2). Factors to be considered in determining whether it was reasonable for a person to act as he did include (i) the seriousness of the anticipated offence (or, in the case of an offence under s 46 (see PARA 65A.1), the offences specified in the indictment); (ii) any purpose for which he claims to have been acting; (iii) any authority by which he claims to have been acting: s 50(3).

3. Limitation on liability

In the case of protective offences, a person does not commit an offence under the Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 2 (ss 44-67) by reference to such an offence if (1) he falls within the protected category; and (2) he is the person in respect of whom the protective offence was committed or would have been if it had been committed: s 51(1). 'Protective offence' means an offence that exists (wholly or in part) for the protection of a particular category of persons ('the protected category'): s 51(2).

4. Jurisdiction and procedure

The rules that will govern jurisdiction over the offences in the Serious Crime Act 2007 Pt 2 (ss 44-67) are set out: s 52, Sch 4. No proceedings for an offence triable by reason of any provision of Sch 4 may be instituted in England and Wales, except by, or with the consent of, the Attorney General: s 53. Any powers that apply to a substantive offence will apply to an offence of encouraging and assisting that substantive offence: s 54. An offence under s 44 or 45 (see PARA 65A.1) is triable in the same way as the anticipated offence; and an offence under s 46 (see PARA 65A.1) is triable on indictment: s 55.

In proceedings for an offence under Pt 2 ('the inchoate offence') the defendant may be convicted if (1) it is proved that he must have committed the inchoate offence or the anticipated offence; but (2) it is not proved which of those offences he committed; and for these purposes, a person is not to be treated as having committed the anticipated offence merely because he aided, abetted, counselled or procured its commission: s 56.

The offences in relation to which a person may be found guilty as an alternative where he has been prosecuted on indictment for an offence under ss 44, 45 and 46 are set out: s 57. Provision is made as to the penalties that will apply to the offences created in Pt 2: s 58. References in existing legislation to the common law offence of incitement are to be read as references to the offences in ss 44-46: s 63, Sch 6 Pt 1. Provision is also made with respect to interpretation (ss 64-67).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/1. PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(ii) Conspiracy/A. IN GENERAL/66. Matters common to all conspiracies.

(ii) Conspiracy

A. IN GENERAL

66. Matters common to all conspiracies.

There are statutory<sup>1</sup> and common law<sup>2</sup> offences of conspiracy. The essence of the offences of both statutory and common law conspiracy is the fact of combination by agreement. The agreement may be express or implied, or in part express and in part implied. The conspiracy arises and the offence is committed as soon as the agreement is made<sup>3</sup>; and the offence continues to be committed so long as the combination persists, that is until the conspiratorial agreement is terminated by completion of its performance or by abandonment or frustration or however it may be<sup>4</sup>. The actus reus<sup>5</sup> in a conspiracy is therefore the agreement for the execution of the unlawful conduct, not the execution of it<sup>6</sup>. It is not enough that two or more persons pursued the same unlawful object at the same time or in the same place; it is necessary to show a meeting of minds, a consensus to effect an unlawful purpose<sup>7</sup>. It is not, however, necessary that each conspirator should have been in communication with every other<sup>8</sup>.

A director of a company who is solely responsible for the conduct of the company's business cannot be convicted of conspiring with the company, since only one mind is involved despite the fact that the company has a separate legal personality<sup>9</sup>. Where, however, a director conspires in the course of the company's activities with other persons, the company may be indicted as a party to the conspiracy<sup>10</sup>.

The fact that the person or persons who, so far as appears from the indictment on which any person has been convicted of conspiracy, was or were the only other party or parties to the agreement on which his conviction was based have been acquitted of conspiracy by reference to that agreement, whether after being tried with the person convicted or separately, is not a ground for quashing his conviction unless under all the circumstances of the case his conviction is inconsistent with the acquittal of the other person or persons in question<sup>11</sup>.

2 See PARAS 72-75 post.

3 Mere negotiations are insufficient: R v Jones (1832) 4 B & Ad 345 at 349 per Denman CJ. A person cannot be party to an agreement by virtue of an uncommunicated intention to enter into that agreement: R v Scott (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 164, CA.

4 See DPP v Doot [1973] AC 807, 57 Cr App Rep 600, HL; R v Reilly [1982] QB 1208, 75 Cr App Rep 266, CA (the offence of conspiracy continues to exist while the planned acts are carried out even though the offence of conspiracy was committed and completed when the conspirators made their agreement). See also R v Khalil [2003] EWCA Crim 3467, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 121 (defendant became involved after a contract killer (an undercover police officer) had apparently committed the murder; held he could not be convicted of conspiracy to murder).

5 As to the actus reus of a crime see PARA 5 ante.

6 See Poulterers' Case (1610) 9 Co Rep 55b; and see Kamara v DPP [1974] AC 104, 57 Cr App Rep 880, HL. The offence is completely constituted when the agreement is made; it matters not that it is never carried out: R v Doot [1973] QB 73 at 81, 57 Cr App Rep 13 at 20, CA; revsd on other grounds sub nom DPP v Doot [1973] AC 807, 57 Cr App Rep 600, HL. Where the conduct agreed upon could not possibly result in the commission of an offence, there may nevertheless be a statutory conspiracy: see the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1(1)(b) (as substituted); and PARA 67 post.

As to 'wheel conspiracies' see R v Griffiths [1966] 1 QB 589, 49 Cr App Rep 279, CCA (a conspiracy between B and C is not to be inferred from the fact that A has conspired with B in the same terms as A has conspired with C; nor do B and C conspire with one another because each knows of the other's agreement with A; to constitute a conspiracy between B and C each must know that, through the medium of A, there is a common plan which goes beyond the unlawful act he has agreed to do with A).

11 Criminal Law Act 1977 s 5(8). Any rule of law or practice inconsistent with the provisions of s 5(8) has been abolished: see s 5(9). See also R v Holmes [1980] 2 All ER 458, sub nom R v Holmes, R v Merrick, R v Thornton, R v Wood (1980) 71 Cr App Rep 130, CA; R v Longman (1980) 72 Cr App Rep 121, CA; R v Roberts (1983) 78 Cr App Rep 41, CA; R v Testouri [2003] EWCA Crim 3735, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 26. The Criminal Law Act 1977 s 5(8) abolished the former common law rule of law whereby, if two persons were tried together for conspiring with each other, and there was no allegation of conspiring with any other person, they had both to be convicted or acquitted: see R v Grimes (1688) 3 Mod Rep 220; R v Nichols (1742) 13 East 412n; R v Cooke (1826) 5 B & C 538, CCR; and see also DPP v Shannon [1975] AC 717 at 754, 59 Cr App Rep 250 at 262, HL, per Lord Morris of Borth-y-Gest.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(ii) Conspiracy/B. STATUTORY CONSPIRACY/67. Statutory conspiracy.

B. STATUTORY CONSPIRACY

67. Statutory conspiracy.

If a person agrees with any other person or persons that a course of conduct is to be pursued which, if the agreement is carried out in accordance with their intentions, either:

- 18 (1) will necessarily<sup>1</sup> amount to, or involve the commission of, any offence<sup>2</sup> or offences<sup>3</sup> by one or more of the parties<sup>4</sup> to the agreement<sup>5</sup>; or
- 19 (2) would do so but for the existence of facts which render the commission of the offence or any of the offences impossible<sup>6</sup>, he is guilty of conspiracy to commit the offence or offences in question<sup>7</sup>. A person is not, however, so guilty of conspiracy to commit any offence if he is an intended victim of that offence<sup>8</sup>.

Where, in pursuance of any agreement, the acts in question in relation to any offence are to be done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute<sup>9</sup> that offence is to be disregarded<sup>10</sup> provided that it is a summary offence which is not punishable with imprisonment<sup>11</sup>.

A person is not guilty of statutory conspiracy<sup>12</sup> to commit any offence or offences if the only other person or persons with whom he agrees are (both initially and at all times during the currency of the agreement) persons of any one or more of the following descriptions, that is to say his spouse or civil partner<sup>13</sup>, a person under the age of criminal responsibility<sup>14</sup>, or an intended victim of that offence or of each of those offences<sup>15</sup>.

Where a statute exempts a particular person or a particular class of persons from liability for an offence, whether as principal or as a secondary party, it does not necessarily follow that that person, or a person belonging to that class, cannot be convicted of conspiring with another to commit that offence. In such a case, the question must be determined by considering the purpose of the statute, whether it would be defeated by holding that such a person may be party to such a conspiracy or whether the immunity was not intended to extend to the case where he agrees with others to commit the offence<sup>16</sup>.

Where a person is immune from liability whether in respect of the crime itself or in respect of conspiracy to commit the crime, another who agrees with him to commit that crime may be convicted of conspiracy notwithstanding the immunity of the former<sup>17</sup>.

A conspiracy between a person in England or Wales and a person abroad to commit a crime in England or Wales is a conspiracy which is indictable in England and Wales<sup>18</sup>. Where a conspiracy is formed outside the jurisdiction to commit a crime in England or Wales, it is indictable in England and Wales even though no act in furtherance of that agreement is committed in England or Wales<sup>19</sup>.

1 'Necessarily' for these purposes does not mean that there must inevitably be the carrying out of an offence; it means, if the agreement is carried out in accordance with the plan, there must be the commission of the offence referred to in the conspiracy count: R v Jackson [1985] Crim LR 442, CA. See also R v O'Hadhmaill [1996] Crim LR 509, CA; R v Reed [1982] Crim LR 819, CA; R v Bolton (1991) 94 Cr App Rep 74, CA.

2 For the purposes of the Criminal Law Act 1977 Pt I (ss 1-5) (as amended), 'offence' means an offence triable in England and Wales: s 1(4) (amended by the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 s 9(3)(a), Sch 1 para 4(b), Sch 2 Pt II). The doing of something with the appropriate mens rea for an offence would not amount to or involve an offence for these purposes if the actus reus of that offence would not be committed: R v Harmer [2005] EWCA Crim 1, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 23.

3 There is no compelling reason why 'offence or offences' should be construed exclusively conjunctively: R v Hussain, R v Bhatti, R v Bhatti [2002] EWCA Crim 6, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 363.

4 As to parties to the agreement see the text and notes 12-15 infra; and PARA 66 ante.

6 Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 5 supra).

7 Ibid s 1(1) (as substituted: see note 5 supra). The statement in R v Anderson [1986] AC 27, 81 Cr App Rep 253, HL, that a person is guilty of conspiracy if, and only if, it is shown that, when he entered into the agreement, he intended to play some part in the agreed course of conduct in furtherance of the criminal purpose which the agreed course of conduct was intended to achieve, was explained in R v Siracusa (1989) 90 Cr App Rep 340 at 347-350, CA, per O'Connor LJ, on the basis that a person can 'play a part' merely by continuing to concur in the criminal activity of another or others. As to the mental element in conspiracy see PARA 69 post.

The rules laid down by the Criminal Law Act 1977 ss 1, 2 (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-6 supra) apply for determining whether a person is guilty of an offence of conspiracy under any enactment other than s 1 (as amended); but conduct which is an offence under any such other enactment is not also an offence under s 1 (as amended): s 5(6).

13 Ibid s 2(2)(a) (amended by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 261(1), Sch 27 para 56). A husband and wife (or civil partners) may, however, be guilty as co-conspirators where others are involved (see 1 Hawk PC c 27 s 8; R v Whitehouse (1852) 6 Cox CC 38 (conspiracy of husband, wife and daughter)) but only if knowledge that there are other conspirators is proved (R v Chrastrny [1992] 1 All ER 189, 94 Cr App Rep 283, CA). A husband and wife (or, presumably, both members of a civil partnership) may also be guilty of a conspiracy entered into before their marriage or before their civil partnership was entered into: Robinson's Case (1746) 1 Leach 37.

14 Criminal Law Act 1977 s 2(2)(b). A person is under the age of criminal responsibility for these purposes so long as it is conclusively presumed, by virtue of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 50 (as amended) (see PARA 37 ante; and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 29) that he cannot be guilty of any offence: Criminal Law Act 1977 s 2(3).

Statutory conspiracy to commit offences outside the United Kingdom which would not be triable in England and Wales.

68. Statutory conspiracy to commit offences outside the United Kingdom which would not be triable in England and Wales.

The statutory provisions relating to conspiracy<sup>1</sup> also have effect<sup>2</sup> in relation to an agreement<sup>3</sup> where:

- 20 (1) the pursuit of the agreed course of conduct would at some stage involve an act by one or more of the parties<sup>4</sup>, or the happening of some other event<sup>5</sup>, intended to take place in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom<sup>6</sup>;
- 21 (2) that act or other event constitutes an offence under the law in force in that country or territory<sup>7</sup>;
- 22 (3) the agreement would fall within the statutory requirements for establishing conspiracy<sup>8</sup> as an agreement relating to the commission of an offence<sup>9</sup> but for the fact that the offence would not be an offence triable in England and Wales if committed in accordance with the parties' intentions<sup>10</sup>; and
- 23 (4) a party to the agreement, or a party's agent, did anything in England and Wales<sup>11</sup> in relation to the agreement before its formation<sup>12</sup>; or a party to the agreement became a party in England and Wales (by joining it either in person or through an agent)<sup>13</sup>; or a party to the agreement, or a party's agent, did or omitted anything in England and Wales in pursuance of the agreement<sup>14</sup>.

In any proceedings in respect of an offence triable by virtue of these provisions it is immaterial to guilt whether or not the defendant was a British citizen at the time of any act or other event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence<sup>15</sup>.

1 Ie the Criminal Law Act 1977 Pt 1 (ss 1-5) (as amended).

2 Ie as they have effect in relation to an agreement falling within ibid s 1(1) (as substituted) (see PARA 67 ante).

3 Nothing in these provisions applies to an agreement entered into before 4 September 1998 (which is the day on which the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 was passed, ie received the Royal Assent) (Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1A(14)(a) (s 1A added by the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 s 5(1))) or imposes criminal liability on any person acting on behalf of, or holding office under, the Crown (Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1A(14)(b) (as so added)).

4 Ibid s 1A(1), (2)(a), (13) (as added: see note 3 supra).

5 Ibid s 1A(2)(b) (as added: see note 3 supra).

6 Ibid s 1A(2) (as added: see note 3 supra). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

7 Ibid s 1A(3) (as added: see note 3 supra). Conduct punishable under the law in force in any country or territory is an offence under that law for these purposes however it is described in that law: s 1A(7) (as so added). In general, this requirement is to be taken to be satisfied unless, not later than rules of court may provide, the defence serves on the prosecution a notice: (1) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the agreed course of conduct, the condition is not in its opinion satisfied (s 1A(8)(a) (as so added)); (2) showing the grounds for that opinion (s 1A(8)(b) (as so added)); and (3) requiring the prosecution to show that it is satisfied (s 1A(8)(c) (as so added)), although the court may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that this requirement is satisfied without the prior service of such a notice (s 1A(9) (as so added)). In the Crown Court, the question whether this requirement is satisfied is decided by the judge alone, and must be treated as a question of law for the purposes of the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 9(3) (as amended) (preparatory hearing in fraud cases: see PARA 1253 post) (Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1A(10)(a) (as so added)) and the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 31(3) (as amended) (preparatory hearing in other cases: see PARA 1253 post) (Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1A(10)(a) (as so added)). As to rules of court see PARA 65 note 1 ante.

9     For the meaning of 'offence' see PARA 67 note 2 ante. In the application of ibid Pt 1 (ss 1-5) (as amended) to an agreement in the case of which each of the conditions set out in the text is satisfied, a reference to an offence is to be read as a reference to what would be the offence in question but for the fact that it is not an offence triable in England and Wales: s 1A(6) (as added: see note 3 supra).

10    Ibid s 1A(4) (as added: see note 3 supra).

11    Any act done by means of a message (however communicated) is to be treated for these purposes as done in England and Wales if the message is sent or received in England and Wales: ibid s 1A(11) (as added: see note 3 supra).

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(ii) Conspiracy/B. STATUTORY CONSPIRACY/69. The mental element in statutory conspiracy.

69. The mental element in statutory conspiracy.

A person cannot be convicted of statutory conspiracy unless he and at least one other party to the agreement satisfy certain requirements<sup>1</sup>. Mens rea for statutory conspiracy<sup>2</sup> requires proof of an intention that the requisite course of conduct be pursued and that the substantive offence or offences which their agreed course of conduct will (or would) necessarily involve, or which it will (or would) involve, will be committed<sup>3</sup>. It follows that it is no defence for the defendant to plead that the intended course of conduct could not in fact have been pursued.

In addition, where a substantive offence which it is alleged that the defendant conspired to commit depends on the existence of a specified fact or circumstance, it must be proved that the defendant intended or knew that circumstance must or will exist when the conduct constituting the offence is to take place<sup>4</sup>. Where liability for any offence<sup>5</sup> may be incurred without knowledge on the part of the person committing it of any particular fact or circumstance necessary for the commission of the offence, a person is nevertheless not guilty of conspiracy to commit that offence unless he and at least one other party to the agreement intend or know that that fact or circumstance must or will exist at the time when the conduct constituting the offence is to take place<sup>6</sup>.

1 This is implicit in the wording of the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1(1) (as substituted) (see PARA 67 ante) and explicit in s 1(2) (see the text and notes 5-6 infra).

2 See under ibid s 1(1) (as substituted) (see PARA 67 ante) and s 1A (as added) (see PARA 68 ante).

3 See ibid s 1(1) (as substituted); and PARA 67 ante. In R v Anderson [1986] AC 27, 81 Cr App Rep 253, HL, it was held that such an intention need not be proved against an individual defendant. However, this decision has been overlooked or ignored in a number of subsequent decisions where it has been held that an intention that an agreement be carried out is required on the part of a conspirator: R v Edwards [1991] Crim LR 45, CA; R v Ashton [1992] Crim LR 667, CA; R v Harvey, R v Williams [1999] Crim LR 70, CA. See also R v McPhillips [1989] NI 360, NI CA; Yip Chiu-cheung v R [1995] 1 AC 111, 99 Cr App Rep 406, PC. Note R v Siracusa (1989) 90 Cr App Rep 340 at 350, CA, per O'Connor LJ ('the mens rea sufficient to support the commission of a substantive offence will not necessarily be sufficient to support a charge of conspiracy to commit that offence. An intent to cause grievous bodily harm is sufficient to support the charge of murder, but is not sufficient to support a charge of conspiracy to murder or of attempt to murder').

4 For the application of the present requirement in respect of conspiracies relating to the importation of various types of prohibited goods see R v Siracusa (1989) 90 Cr App Rep 340, CA; R v Broad [1997] Crim LR 666, CA; R v Taylor [2001] EWCA Crim 1044, [2002] Crim LR 205. It has been held that a defendant could not be convicted of a statutory conspiracy to contravene money-laundering legislation if he entered into an agreement to convert property in respect of which he had reasonable grounds to suspect and did in fact suspect but did not actually know was the proceeds of crime: R v Saik [2006] UKHL 18, [2006] 2 WLR 993; and see R v Ramzan; R v Israel; R v Vaikilipour [2006] All ER (D) 318 (Jul), CA.

A person guilty<sup>1</sup> of conspiracy to commit any offence<sup>2</sup> or offences is liable on conviction on indictment:

- 24 (1) where the relevant offence or any of the relevant offences<sup>3</sup> is murder or any other offence for which the sentence is fixed by law<sup>4</sup>, or an offence for which a sentence extending to imprisonment for life is provided<sup>5</sup>, or an indictable offence punishable with imprisonment for which no maximum term of imprisonment is provided<sup>6</sup>, to imprisonment for life<sup>7</sup>;
- 25 (2) where in a case other than one to which head (1) above applies the relevant offence or any of the relevant offences is punishable with imprisonment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding the maximum term<sup>8</sup> provided for that offence or (where more than one such offence is in question)<sup>9</sup> for any of those offences<sup>10</sup>; or
- 26 (3) in any other case, to a fine<sup>11</sup>.

5 Ibid s 3(2)(b).

6 Ibid s 3(2)(c). An indictable offence at common law not subject to any specific penalty is punishable by fine and imprisonment and the term of imprisonment is not fixed; but in the case of statutory offences, where the sentence is not limited to a specified term or expressed to extend to imprisonment for life, it is fixed at two years by virtue of the Powers of Criminal Courts Act (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 7(3) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 17). Such offences do not therefore fall within the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 3(2) (c).

7 Ibid s 3(1)(a), (2). In a case falling within s 3(2), (3) (ie within heads (1), (2) in the text) a person is liable to imprisonment for a term related in accordance with those provisions to the gravity of the offence or offences in question: s 3(1)(a). See also R v Ashbee [1989] 1 WLR 509, 88 Cr App Rep 357, CA.

8 In the case of an offence triable either way the references in head (2) in the text to the maximum term provided for that offence are references to the maximum term so provided on indictment: Criminal Law Act 1977 s 3(3).

9 Ie taking the longer or the longest term as the limit for these purposes where the terms provided differ.

10 Criminal Law Act 1977 s 3(1)(a), (3). See note 7 supra.

11 Ibid s 3(1)(b). Section 3(1)(b) is not to be taken as prejudicing the application of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 163 (general power of the court to fine offenders convicted on indictment: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 139) in a case falling within the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 3(2) or (3) (see heads (1), (2) in the text): s 3(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 304, Sch 32 para 24). The maximum punishment in respect of 'small value criminal damage', which is lower than for criminal damage in general (see

C. COMMON LAW CONSPIRACY

72. In general.

A person who enters into an agreement with any other person or persons to defraud<sup>1</sup>, to corrupt public morals<sup>2</sup> or to outrage public decency<sup>3</sup> is guilty of an offence at common law<sup>4</sup>; but an agreement to corrupt public morals or outrage public decency is a common law conspiracy only where it would not amount to or involve the commission of an offence if carried out by a single person otherwise than in pursuance of such an agreement<sup>5</sup>. Subject to these exceptions, the offence of conspiracy at common law has been abolished<sup>6</sup>.

A person is not guilty of conspiracy at common law where the only parties to the agreement are husband and wife (or, presumably, civil partners)<sup>7</sup>; but a husband and wife (or civil partners) may be guilty as co-conspirators where others are involved<sup>8</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(ii) Conspiracy/C. COMMON LAW CONSPIRACY/73. Conspiracy to defraud.

73. Conspiracy to defraud.

A person who agrees with one or more other persons by dishonesty<sup>1</sup> either to deprive a person of something which is his or to which he would be or might be entitled or to injure some proprietary right of a person<sup>2</sup> is guilty of conspiracy to defraud<sup>3</sup> at common law<sup>4</sup>. Causing economic loss or prejudice need not be the purpose of the parties, but a defendant must have foreseen that such loss or prejudice would or might result<sup>5</sup>.

In addition, where a person agrees with one or more other persons to bring about a situation which would or might deceive a public official performing public duties<sup>6</sup> to act contrary to such a duty, there is a conspiracy to defraud at common law, even though there is no risk of causing economic loss to anyone or of prejudicing his economic interests<sup>7</sup>.

A person may be guilty of conspiracy to defraud if:

- 27 (1) a party to the agreement constituting the conspiracy, or a party's agent, did anything in England and Wales in relation to the agreement before its formation<sup>8</sup>;
- 28 (2) a party to it became a party in England and Wales (by joining it either in person or through an agent)<sup>9</sup>; or
- 29 (3) a party to it, or a party's agent, did or omitted anything in England and Wales in pursuance of it<sup>10</sup>, and the conspiracy would be triable in England and Wales but for the fraud which the parties to it had in view not being intended to take place in England and Wales<sup>11</sup>. A person is, however, guilty of an offence triable by virtue of this provision only if the pursuit of the agreed course of conduct would at some stage involve either an act or omission by one or more of the parties<sup>12</sup> or the happening of some other event<sup>13</sup>, constituting an offence under the law in force where the act, omission or other event was intended to take place<sup>14</sup>.

If a person agrees with any other person or persons that a course of conduct is to be pursued<sup>15</sup> and that course will necessarily amount to or involve the commission of any offence or offences by one or more of the parties to the agreement if the agreement is carried out in accordance with their intentions<sup>16</sup>, the fact that it will do so does not preclude a charge of conspiracy to defraud being brought against any of them in respect of the agreement<sup>17</sup>.

1 'Dishonesty' in conspiracy to defraud bears the same meaning as under the Theft Acts 1968 and 1978 (see PARA 283 post): see R v Ghosh [1982] QB 1053, 75 Cr App Rep 154, CA.

2 As to whether the victim may be a stranger outside the contemplation of the parties to the conspiracy see R v Hollinshead [1985] AC 975, 81 Cr App Rep 365, HL.

3 For the meaning of 'defraud' see Welham v DPP [1961] AC 103 at 123-124, 44 Cr App Rep 124 at 141-142, HL, per Lord Radcliffe, and at 133 and 155 per Lord Denning. See also Scott v Metropolitan Police Comr [1975] AC 819, 60 Cr App Rep 124, HL; R v Terry [1984] AC 374, 78 Cr App Rep 101, HL. It is not duplicious for a single count of conspiracy to defraud to be founded on many similar fraudulent transactions; and furthermore so long as there is a single agreement to defraud, the conspirators need not all be involved in every transaction: see R v Mba [2006] All ER (D) 73 (Jan), CA.

4 Scott v Metropolitan Police Comr [1975] AC 819, 60 Cr App Rep 124, HL. The Criminal Law Act 1977 s 5(1) (abolition of offence of conspiracy at common law: see PARA 72 ante) does not affect the offence of conspiracy to defraud: s 5(2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1987 s 12(2)).

See also R v Clucas [1949] 2 KB 226, 33 Cr App Rep 136, CCA; R v Sinclair [1968] 3 All ER 241, 52 Cr App Rep 618, CA; R v Allsop (1976) 64 Cr App Rep 29, CA; Tarling v Government of the Republic of Singapore (1978) 70 Cr App Rep 77, HL; R v Hollinshead [1985] AC 975, 80 Cr App Rep 285, HL; Wai Yu-tsang v R [1992] 1 AC 269, 94 Cr App Rep 264, PC; Adams v R [1995] 1 WLR 52, [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 295, PC. It was decided in R v Zempel, R v Melik (1985) 81 Cr App Rep 279, CA, that an agreement dishonestly and temporarily to delay payment of a debt is not a conspiracy to defraud, but such an agreement clearly falls within the ambit of Scott v Metropolitan Police Comr supra and the decision in R v Zempel, R v Melik must therefore be regarded as wrong. As to conspiracies to defraud by officers of companies see COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 314.

5 R v Allsop (1976) 64 Cr App Rep 29, CA; Wai-Yu-tsang v R [1992] 1 AC 269, 94 Cr App Rep 264, PC. Contrast A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1982) [1983] QB 751, [1983] 2 All ER 721, CA (causing of economic loss or prejudice must be defendant's purpose).

7 Board of Trade v Owen [1957] AC 602 at 622, 41 Cr App Rep 11 at 40 per Lord Tucker; Welham v DPP [1961] AC 103, 44 Cr App Rep 124; DPP v Withers [1975] AC 842 at 872-873, 60 Cr App Rep 85 at 102-103 per Lord Simon of Glaisdale, and at 877 and 106-107 per Lord Kilbrandon; Wai Yu-tsang v R [1992] 1 AC 269, 94 Cr App Rep 264, PC. The cases concerned with persons performing public duties, in which it is not necessary to show an intention on the part of the deceiver to inflict pecuniary or economic harm to convict a person of intention to defraud, are not to be regarded as a special category, but rather as exemplifying the general principle that conspiracies to defraud are not restricted to cases of intention to cause the victim economic loss: Wai Yu-tsang v R supra at 270 and 279 (disapproving dictum of Lord Diplock in Scott v Metropolitan Police Comr [1975] AC 819 at 840-841, 60 Cr App Rep 124 at 131, HL; and approving dictum of Lord Radcliffe in Welham v DPP [1961] AC 103 at 124, 44 Cr App Rep 124 at 141-142, HL); applied in Adams v R [1995] 1 WLR 52, [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 295, PC.

On a charge of conspiracy to defraud the defendant may be guilty of the offence whether or not he became a party to the conspiracy in England and Wales, and whether or not any act or omission or other event in relation to the conspiracy occurred in England and Wales: see the Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 3(2); and PARA 362 post. For these purposes, a person may be so guilty whether or not he was a British citizen at any material time, or was in England and Wales at any such time: see s 3(1); and PARA 362 post.

14 Ibid s 6(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 s 9(1), (2), Sch 1 para 7(2), Sch 2 Pt II). A person may be so guilty whether or not he was a British citizen at any material time, or was in England and Wales at any such time: Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 3(1). Conduct punishable under the law in force in any place is an offence under that law for these purposes however it is described in that law: s 6(3). In general, a condition specified in s 6(1) is to be taken to be satisfied unless, not later than rules of court may provide, the defence serves on the prosecution a notice: (1) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the relevant conduct, the condition is not in its opinion satisfied (s 6(4)(a)); (2) showing the grounds for that opinion (s 6(4)(b)); and (3) requiring the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied (s 6(4)(c)). However, the court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied without the prior service of such a notice: s 6(6). In the Crown Court, the question whether the condition is satisfied must be decided by the judge alone: s 6(7). 'The relevant conduct' means, where the condition in s 6(1) (as amended) is in question, the agreed course of conduct: s 6(5)(a). As to rules of court see PARA 65 note 1 ante.

74. Conspiracy to corrupt public morals.

A person who enters into an agreement with any other person or persons to engage in conduct<sup>1</sup> which tends to corrupt public morals<sup>2</sup>, but which would not amount to or involve the commission of an offence<sup>3</sup> if carried out by a single person otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement, is guilty of conspiracy at common law<sup>4</sup>.

No person may, however, be proceeded against for an offence at common law of conspiring to corrupt public morals in respect of an agreement to present or give a performance of a play, or to cause anything to be said or done in the course of such a performance<sup>5</sup>.

1 See eg Shaw v DPP [1962] AC 220, 45 Cr App Rep 113, HL (publication of magazine containing advertisements by prostitutes). Other examples of such conduct might be publicly advocating and encouraging, by pamphlet and advertisement, homosexual practices not in themselves illegal, encouraging and promoting lesbianism, or encouraging 'fornication and adultery': Shaw v DPP supra at 268 and 149 per Viscount Simonds, at 285 and at 169 per Lord Tucker and at 294 and at 179, 180 per Lord Hodson. See also Kneller (Publishing, Printing and Promotions) Ltd v DPP [1973] AC 435, [1972] 2 All ER 898, HL (publication of advertisements inducing readers to meet advertisers for the purpose of homosexual practices and encouraging readers to indulge in such practices). 'Corrupt' is a strong word and 'corrupt public morals' means more than 'lead morally astray': Kneller (Publishing, Printing and Promotions) Ltd v DPP [1973] AC 435 at 456, 490-491, [1972] 2 All ER 898 at 904, 932, HL, per Lord Reid, and at 490-491 and 932 per Lord Simon of Glaisdale. 'Corrupt' is synonymous with 'deprave' (Kneller (Publishing, Printing and Promotions) Ltd v DPP supra at 456 and 904 per Lord Reid), and what is required is conduct which 'a jury might find to be destructive of the very fabric of society' (at 490-491 and 932 per Lord Simon of Glaisdale). Conspiracy to corrupt public morals is something of a misnomer: 'It really means to corrupt the morals of such members of the public as may be influenced by the matter published by the accused': Kneller (Publishing, Printing and Promotions) Ltd v DPP supra at 456 and 904 per Lord Reid. It is doubtful whether a jury would find that there was a conspiracy to corrupt public morals if a case similar to Shaw v DPP supra or Kneller (Publishing, Printing and Promotions) Ltd v DPP supra came before it today.

2 Whether or not conduct 'tends to corrupt public morals' is a question of fact for the jury: Shaw v DPP [1962] AC 220 at 269, 45 Cr App Rep 113 at 150, HL, per Viscount Simonds, at 289 and 173-174 per Lord Tucker, at 292 and 177-178 per Lord Morris of Borth-y-Gest, and at 294 and 180 per Lord Hodson.

3 Is an agreement which would not constitute a statutory conspiracy: see PARA 67 ante.

4 Criminal Law Act 1977 s 5(3). Section 5(1) (abolition of offence of conspiracy at common law: see PARA 72 ante) does not affect the offence of conspiracy to corrupt public morals: s 5(3). See also Shaw v DPP [1962] AC 220, 45 Cr App Rep 113, HL; Kneller (Publishing, Printing and Promotions) Ltd v DPP [1973] AC 435, 56 Cr App Rep 633, HL. As to parties to the agreement see PARA 66 ante; and as to the penalty see PARA 77 post.

5 See the Theatres Act 1968 s 2(4); and LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 246. A similar restriction applies in the case of an agreement to give a film exhibition (see PARA 747 note 8 post) or to cause a programme to be included in a programme service or to cause anything to be said or done in the course of a programme which is so included (see PARA 747 note 2 post).

75. Conspiracy to outrage public decency.

A person who enters into an agreement with any other person or persons to engage in conduct<sup>1</sup> which tends to outrage public decency<sup>2</sup>, but which would not amount to or involve the commission of an offence<sup>3</sup> if carried out by a single person otherwise than in pursuance of an agreement, is guilty of conspiracy at common law<sup>4</sup>. No person may, however, be proceeded against for an offence at common law of conspiring to do any act contrary to public morals or decency in respect of an agreement to present or give a performance of a play, or to cause anything to be said or done in the course of such a performance<sup>5</sup>.

1 The insertion of outrageously indecent matter on the inside pages of a book or magazine which is sold in public or is capable of being seen by more than one person may constitute such conduct: Kneller (Publishing, Printing and Promotions) Ltd v DPP [1973] AC 435, 56 Cr App Rep 633, HL, per Lord Kilbrandon, Lord Morris of Borth-y-Gest and Lord Simon of Glaisdale (Lord Diplock and Lord Reid dissenting).

2 "Outrage" is a very strong word: and 'outraging public decency' goes considerably beyond offending the susceptibilities of, or even shocking, reasonable people . . . Recognised minimum standards of decency . . . are likely to vary from time to time . . . Public decency must be viewed as a whole . . . the jury should be invited, where appropriate, to remember that they live in a plural society, with a tradition of tolerance towards minorities, and this atmosphere of toleration is itself part of public decency': Kneller (Publishing, Printing and Promotions) Ltd v DPP [1973] AC 435 at 495, 56 Cr App Rep 633 at 698, HL, per Lord Simon of Glaisdale.

3 Is an agreement which would not constitute a statutory conspiracy: see PARA 67 ante. As to the offence of outraging public decency see PARA 764 post.

4 Criminal Law Act 1977 s 5(3). Section 5(1) (abolition of offence of conspiracy at common law: see PARA 72 ante) does not affect the offence of conspiracy to outrage public decency (see PARA 764 post): s 5(3). There can be no real doubt that the offence of outraging public decency is coterminous with outraging public decency as the object of a conspiracy, in which case a conspiracy to outrage public decency will always be a statutory conspiracy and the effect of s 5(3) is to abolish the common law offence of conspiracy to outrage public decency. As to parties to the agreement see PARA 66 ante; and as to the penalty see PARA 77 post.

5 See the Theatres Act 1968 s 2(4); and LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 246. ## 76. Impossibility in common law conspiracy.

Where the object of the agreement is at the time of the agreement capable of being achieved but cannot actually be achieved because of some supervening event or because the proposed means are insufficient, there can be a conviction for conspiracy: however, in any other case of impossibility, whether physical or legal, there cannot be a conviction for common law conspiracy<sup>1</sup>.

D. INDICTMENT IN CONSPIRACY

78. Indictment in conspiracy.

Where an indictment contains substantive counts and a related conspiracy count, the judge should require the prosecution to justify the joinder, or, failing justification, to elect whether to proceed on the substantive or on the conspiracy counts; joinder is justified if the judge considers that the interests of justice demand it<sup>1</sup>.

There are no rigid rules governing the inclusion of a conspiracy count in an indictment with other charges<sup>2</sup>. The guiding principles are:

- 30 (1) a conspiracy charge should not be included where it adds nothing to an effective and sufficient charge of a substantive offence<sup>3</sup>;
- 31 (2) all offences charged should not only be supported by the evidence but should also represent the criminality disclosed by the evidence<sup>4</sup>;
- 32 (3) only those charges should be included which make for simplification of the issues and avoid complexity<sup>5</sup>; and
- 33 (4) a count for conspiracy should not be included if it will lead to unfairness to the defence<sup>6</sup>.

A single count which charges what are distinct though overlapping conspiracies is bad for duplicity<sup>7</sup>.

In an indictment for conspiracy to defraud it is unnecessary to specify the particular overt acts of the conspiracy so long as the defendants understand the allegations against them<sup>8</sup>; but the particulars should be such as to enable the defendants and the judge to know precisely the prosecution's case<sup>9</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(iii) Attempt/79. Attempting to commit an offence.

(iii) Attempt

79. Attempting to commit an offence.

A person is guilty of attempting to commit an offence if, with intent<sup>1</sup> to commit any offence which, if it were completed, would be triable in England and Wales as an indictable offence<sup>2</sup>, he does an act which is more than merely preparatory to the commission of the offence<sup>3</sup>.

A person may be guilty of attempting to commit such an offence even though the facts are such that the commission of the offence is impossible<sup>4</sup>.

A person is guilty of an attempt under a special statutory provision<sup>5</sup> if, with intent<sup>6</sup> to commit the relevant full offence, he does an act which is more than merely preparatory to the commission of that offence<sup>7</sup>; and a person may be guilty of an attempt under a special statutory provision even though the facts are such that the commission of the relevant full offence is impossible<sup>8</sup>.

1 A person is regarded as having had an intent to commit a particular offence for these purposes in any case where: (1) apart from these provisions his intention would not be regarded as having amounted to an intent to commit an offence (Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(3)(a)); but (2) if the facts of the case had been as he believed them to be, his intention would be so regarded (s 1(3)(b)). As to the mental element in attempt see PARA 81 post.

2 I.e. an offence to which ibid s 1 (as amended) applies: s 1(1), (4). As to the meaning of 'indictable offence' see PARA 1102 note 1 post. Excluded from the offences to which s 1 applies are: (1) conspiracy at common law (see PARA 72 et seq ante) or under the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 67 ante) or any other enactment (Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(4)(a)); (2) aiding, abetting, counselling, procuring or suborning the commission of an offence (s 1(4)(b)); and (3) offences under the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 4(1) (as amended) (assisting offenders: see PARA 58 ante) or s 5(1) (as amended) (accepting or agreeing to accept consideration for not disclosing information about a relevant offence: see PARA 734 post) (Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(4)(c)). Thus the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 prevented the creation of the separate offence of attempting to aid and abet the commission of a crime; but did not remove from criminal responsibility the offence of aiding and abetting an attempt to commit a crime: R v Dunnington [1984] QB 472, 78 Cr App Rep 171, CA. An offence of criminal damage where the value of the property destroyed or of the damage done is less than £5,000 is an 'indictable offence', notwithstanding that it has to be proceeded with as if it was a summary offence (see PARA 334 post): R v Bristol Magistrates' Court, ex p E [1998] 3 All ER 798, [1999] 1 WLR 390, DC.

Where a substantive offence consists of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring an activity, such as aiding and abetting suicide (see PARA 106 post), a person who attempts to perpetrate such an offence can be convicted of an attempt to commit it: R v McShane (1977) 66 Cr App Rep 97, CA; Chief Constable of Hampshire v Mace (1986) 84 Cr App Rep 40, DC.

Where an act is done in England and Wales, and it would fall within the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1) as more than merely preparatory to the commission of an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3 (see PARA 360 post) but for the fact that the offence, if completed, would not be an offence triable in England and Wales, then, subject to s 8 (as amended) (relevance of external law: see PARA 360 post), what the person doing it had in view is treated as an offence to which the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1 (as amended) applies: s 1(1A), (1B) (added by the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 7(3)).

3 Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1). On a charge of attempting to commit a specified offence of dishonesty, the defendant may be guilty of the offence whether or not the attempt was made in England and Wales, and whether or not it had an effect in England and Wales: see the Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 3(3); and PARA 362 post. A person may be guilty of attempting to commit such an offence whether or not he was a British citizen at the material time, and whether or not he was in England and Wales at any such time: see s 3(1); and PARA 362 post.

Where an act is done in England and Wales, and it would fall within the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1) as more than merely preparatory to the commission of a Group A offence (as to the meaning of which see the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 1(2); and PARA 362 post) but for the fact that the offence, if completed, would not be an offence triable in England and Wales, the offence which that person had in view is treated as an offence to which the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1) applies: s 1A(1)-(3) (s 1A added by the Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 5(2)). A person is guilty of an offence triable by virtue of the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1A (as added) only if what he had in view would involve the commission of an offence under the law in force where the whole or any part of it was intended to take place: s 1A(4) (as so added); Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 6(2). Conduct punishable under the law in force in any place is an offence under that law for the purpose of s 6, however it is described in that law: s 6(3). A condition specified in s 6(2) is to be taken to be satisfied unless, not later than rules of court may provide, the defence serves on the prosecution a notice:

- 4     (1)   stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to what the defendant had in view, the condition is not in its opinion satisfied (s 6(4)(a), (5)(b));
- 5     (2)   showing the grounds for that opinion (s 6(4)(b)); and
- 6     (3)   requiring the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied (s 6(4)(c)).

The court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied without the prior service of a notice under s 6(4): s 6(6). In the Crown Court, the question whether the condition is satisfied is to be decided by the judge alone: s 6(7). As to rules of court see PARA 65 note 1 ante.

Where a person does an act to which the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1A (as added) applies, the offence which he commits is for all purposes treated as the offence of attempting to commit the relevant Group A offence: s 1A(5) (as so added).

Where, in proceedings against a person for an offence under s 1 (as amended), there is evidence sufficient in law to support a finding that he did an act falling within s 1(1), the question whether or not his act so fell is a question of fact: s 4(3). In any case in which a court may proceed to summary trial of an information charging a person with an offence and an information charging him with an offence under s 1 (as amended) of attempting to commit it or an attempt under a special statutory provision (see note 5 infra), the court may, without his consent, try the informations together: s 4(2). As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 post. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

The offence of attempt at common law and any offence at common law of procuring materials for crime are abolished (s 6(1)); and references in any enactment passed before the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 which fall to be construed as references to the offence of attempt at common law are to be construed as references to the offence under s 1 (as amended) (s 6(2)). The Criminal Attempts Act 1981 was passed (ie received the Royal Assent) on 27 July 1981.

A court in England or Wales has jurisdiction over an attempt committed abroad provided that it was intended to result in the commission of an offence in England and Wales, even though no overt act takes place in England and Wales: see R v Baxter [1972] 1 QB 1, 55 Cr App Rep 214, CA; DPP v Stonehouse [1978] AC 55, 65 Cr App Rep 192, HL.

Provisions of any of the following descriptions made by or under any enactment (whenever passed) have effect with respect to an offence under the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1 (as amended) of attempting to commit an offence as they have effect with respect to the offence attempted:

- 7     (a)   provisions whereby proceedings may not be instituted or carried on otherwise than by, or on behalf or with the consent of, any person, including any provisions which also make other exceptions to the prohibition (s 2(1), (2)(a));
- 8     (b)   provisions conferring power to institute proceedings (s 2(2)(b));
- 9     (c)   provisions as to the venue of proceedings (s 2(2)(c));
- 10    (d)   provisions whereby proceedings may not be instituted after the expiration of a time limit (s 2(2)(d));
- 11    (e)   provisions conferring a power of arrest or search (s 2(2)(e));
- 12    (f)   provisions conferring a power of seizure and detention of property (s 2(2)(f));

- 13 (g) provisions whereby a person may not be convicted or committed for trial on the uncorroborated evidence of one witness (including any provision requiring the evidence of not less than two credible witnesses) (s 2(2)(g));
- 14 (h) provisions conferring a power of forfeiture, including any power to deal with anything liable to be forfeited (s 2(2)(h)); and
- 15 (i) provisions whereby, if an offence committed by a body corporate is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of another person, that person is also guilty of an offence (s 2(2)(i)).

As from a day to be appointed head (g) supra is amended so as not to refer to committal for trial: see s 2(2)(g) (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 41, 332, Sch 3 para 52, Sch 37 Pt 4). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4 Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(2). See R v Shivpuri [1987] AC 1, 83 Cr App Rep 178, HL (a person is guilty of an attempt if he did an act which was more than merely preparatory to the commission of the offence which he intended to commit, even if the facts were such that the actual offence was impossible), overruling Anderton v Ryan [1985] AC 560, 81 Cr App Rep 166, HL.

5 For these purposes, an attempt under a special statutory provision is an offence which: (1) is created by an enactment other than the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1 (as amended), including an enactment passed after 27 July 1981 (s 3(2)(a)); and (2) is expressed as an offence of attempting to commit another offence ('the relevant full offence') (s 3(2)(b)). Where the full offence and the attempt are expressed in the very same provision, it depends on the exact wording of the statutory provision in question whether the attempt is 'expressed as an act of attempting to commit another offence': see R v Bolton Justices, ex p Khan [1999] Crim LR 912, DC. Even if it is not, so that the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 3 is inapplicable, the court is likely to adopt the terms of s 1 (as amended) as the basis for the approach to the attempt alleged: R v Qadir, R v Khan [1997] 9 Archbold News 1, CA.

6 A person is regarded as having had an intent to commit a particular offence for these purposes in any case where: (1) apart from these provisions his intention would not be regarded as having amounted to an intent to commit the relevant full offence (Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 3(5)(a)); but (2) if the facts of the case had been as he believed them to be, his intention would be so regarded (s 3(5)(b)).

7 Ibid s 3(1), (3). Where, in proceedings against a person for an attempt under a special statutory provision, there is evidence sufficient in law to support a finding that he did an act falling within s 3(3), the question whether or not his act so fell is a question of fact: s 4(4).

Section 3(3)-(5) (see the text and notes 5-6 supra, 8 infra) have effect subject to any inconsistent provision in any other enactment: s 3(1).

8 Ibid s 3(4).

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(iii) Attempt/80. The actus reus of attempt.

80. The actus reus of attempt.

A person is guilty of an attempt if he does an act which is more than merely preparatory to the commission of the offence which he intended to commit, even if the facts were such that commission of the actual offence was impossible<sup>1</sup>. Whether the act relied on is capable of being more than merely preparatory so as to be capable of amounting to an attempt is a question of law; and whether the act was actually more than merely preparatory is a matter of fact for the jury<sup>2</sup>.

1 See the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1), (2); and PARA 79 ante. As to the actus reus of an offence generally see PARA 5 ante. The requirement of an act that is more than merely preparatory to the commission of the offence intended must be applied according to the plain and natural meaning of those words, and not by reference to the case law on the abolished common law offence of attempt: R v Jones [1990] 3 All ER 886, 91 Cr App Rep 351, CA; R v Campbell (1990) 93 Cr App Rep 350, CA. See also R v Gullefer [1990] 3 All ER 882, 91 Cr App Rep 356n, CA.

If the defendant can be said to have got as far as having embarked on the commission of the offence, there is sufficient evidence of an act more than merely preparatory to the commission of the intended offence: R v Gullefer supra; R v Jones supra; R v Geddes (1996) 160 JP 697, CA ('It is, we think, an accurate paraphrase of the statutory test and not an illegitimate gloss upon it to ask whether the available evidence, if accepted, could show that a defendant has done an act which shows that he has actually tried to commit the offence in question, or whether he has only got ready or put himself in a position or equipped himself to do so': per Lord Bingham CJ at 705); R v Qadir, R v Khan [1997] 9 Archbold News 1, CA. Contrast R v Campbell (1990) 93 Cr App Rep 350, CA (defendant arrested, armed with imitation firearm, as he approached within a yard of the door of a post office where he intended to commit a robbery; charged with attempted robbery; insufficient evidence to leave to the jury that the defendant's acts were more than merely preparatory) and R v Geddes supra (defendant found in boys toilet at a school; his rucksack contained lengths of string, masking tape and a knife; he was charged with attempted false imprisonment; but there was insufficient evidence to support a finding that the defendant had moved beyond mere preparation) with R v Jones supra (defendant pointed loaded firearm at P who managed to disarm him; defendant charged with attempted murder; sufficient evidence of more than merely preparatory act, despite fact that the safety catch was on and the defendant had not yet put his finger on the trigger and pulled it) and R v Tosti [1997] Crim LR 746, CA (defendants approached barn door and examined lock, having concealed oxyacetylene equipment in a nearby hedge; charged with attempted burglary; facts proved in evidence sufficient for judge to leave to the jury the question of whether the defendants' acts were or were not more than merely preparatory). See also A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1992) [1993] 2 All ER 190, 96 Cr App Rep 298, CA (attempted physical penetration by defendant's penis of the victim not necessary for case of attempted rape to be left to jury); R v Patnaik [2000] 3 Archbold News 2, CA (not a necessary threshold for attempted rape to be left to the jury that defendant, who was engaged in violently subduing victim with intent to rape her, should have gone as far as starting to undo or remove her (or his) clothing or to do some other unequivocal sexual act). In making a ruling on whether or not an act was capable of being more than merely preparatory the judge must keep in mind the essential nature of the offence attempted, ie the essential act or transaction on which it hinges and any consequence required to complete it: R v Qadir, R v Khan supra.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(iii) Attempt/81. The mental element in attempt.

81. The mental element in attempt.

In order to support a charge of attempting to commit a crime, it must be shown that the defendant intended to commit the completed crime to which the charge relates<sup>1</sup>. However, although this means that it must be proved that the defendant intended to commit an act or to continue with a series of acts which, when completed, will amount to the offence allegedly attempted (assuming the other elements of the offence are satisfied)<sup>2</sup> and that the defendant intended any requisite consequence of that offence to result from his intended act or acts<sup>3</sup>, intention does not have to be proved as to any circumstance of the actus reus of the offence allegedly attempted or any ulterior element of it if recklessness, negligence or even blameless inadvertence suffices for the completed offence because proof of recklessness as to these elements suffices instead on a charge of attempt<sup>4</sup>.

In any case where a person's intention would not be regarded<sup>5</sup> as having amounted to an intent to commit an offence but, if the facts of the case had been as he believed them to be, his intention would be so regarded, he is to be regarded<sup>6</sup> as having had an intent to commit that offence<sup>7</sup>.

Provided that the defendant has formed a firm intention to commit the substantive offence if a particular condition is satisfied, and that he has gone beyond mere preparation, he can be convicted of an attempt to commit that offence<sup>8</sup>. Thus, provided that the attempted theft of some or all of the contents of a handbag is alleged (rather than the attempted theft of a specific object), a person who is arrested as he opens a handbag, intending to look inside it, to examine its contents and, if there is anything worth stealing, to steal that thing, can be convicted of attempted theft<sup>9</sup>.

PRINCIPLES OF CRIMINAL LIABILITY/(6) INCHOATE CRIMES/(iii) Attempt/82. Conviction for attempt on charge of full offence.

82. Conviction for attempt on charge of full offence.

Where, on a person's trial on indictment for any offence except treason or murder, the jury finds him not guilty of the offence specifically charged in the indictment, but the allegations in the indictment amount to or include, expressly or by implication, an allegation of another offence falling within the jurisdiction of the court of trial, the jury may find him guilty of that other offence or of an offence of which he could be found guilty on an indictment specifically charging that other offence<sup>1</sup>; and for these purposes any allegation of an offence is to be taken as including an allegation of attempting to commit that offence<sup>2</sup>. On an indictment for murder a person found not guilty of murder may be found guilty of, inter alia, an attempt to commit murder<sup>3</sup>. If the case is tried summarily, however, the magistrates may not convict of an attempt if the completed offence is charged<sup>4</sup>.

Where a person is charged on indictment with attempting to commit an offence, or with any assault or other act preliminary to an offence, but not with the completed offence, then, subject to the court's discretion to discharge the jury or otherwise act with a view to preferring an indictment for the completed offence, he may be convicted of the offence charged notwithstanding that he is shown to be guilty of the completed offence<sup>5</sup>.

Where on summary trial for an attempted offence the commission of the completed offence is proved, the attempted offence does not merge with the completed offence and the magistrates' court may convict of the attempt<sup>6</sup>.

A person guilty<sup>1</sup> of attempting to commit an offence:

- 34 (1) if the offence attempted is murder or any other offence the sentence for which is fixed by law<sup>2</sup>, is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>3</sup>;
- 35 (2) if the offence attempted is indictable but does not fall within head (1) above, is liable on conviction on indictment to any penalty to which he would have been liable on conviction on indictment of that offence<sup>4</sup>; and
- 36 (3) if the offence is triable either way<sup>5</sup>, is liable on summary conviction to any penalty to which he would have been liable on summary conviction for that offence<sup>6</sup>.

1 He by virtue of the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1 (as amended): see PARA 79 ante.

(1) HOMICIDE

(i) In General

84. Classification of homicide.

The term 'homicide' is used to describe the case where a person<sup>1</sup> kills<sup>2</sup> a human being. Such a killing may be lawful<sup>3</sup> or it may be unlawful and criminal.

Unlawful homicide includes murder<sup>4</sup>, manslaughter<sup>5</sup>, causing death by dangerous driving<sup>6</sup>, causing death by careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs<sup>7</sup>, and infanticide<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the liability of a corporation for unlawful homicide see PARA 38 ante.

2 As to the rules of causation see PARA 7 ante.

3 Formerly 'lawful homicide' was classified as either justifiable (eg a killing in pursuance of a sentence of a court) or excusable (eg a killing by accident) but the distinction is now without substance: in either case no offence is committed.

4 As to murder see PARAS 89-91 post. Where the killing is done with intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnical, racial or religious group as such, the offence may be charged as genocide: see the International Criminal Court Act 2001 s 50(6), Sch 8; and INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 454.

5 See PARAS 92-102 post.

6 See ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 963.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(i) In General/85. Restrictions on prosecutions.

85. Restrictions on prosecutions.

The common law rule known as the 'year and a day rule' (that is, the rule that, for the purposes of offences involving death and of suicide, an act or omission is irrebuttably presumed not to have caused a person's death if more than a year and a day elapsed before he died<sup>1</sup>) has been abolished for all purposes<sup>2</sup>, except in relation to a case where the act or omission (or the last of the acts or omissions) which caused the death occurred before June 17 1996<sup>3</sup>.

In relation to deaths occurring on or after that date, proceedings for a fatal offence<sup>4</sup> may be instituted by or with the consent of the Attorney General<sup>5</sup> and may be instituted only if:

- 37 (1) the injury alleged to have caused the death was sustained more than three years before the death occurred<sup>6</sup>; or
- 38 (2) the person has previously been convicted of an offence committed in circumstances alleged to be connected with the death<sup>7</sup>.

3 Ibid s 3(2). The date mentioned in the text is the day on which the Law Reform (Year and a Day Rule) Act 1996 was passed (ie received the Royal Assent).

4 For these purposes, 'fatal offence' means: (1) murder, manslaughter, infanticide or any other offence of which one of the elements is causing a person's death (ibid s 2(3)(a)); (2) the offence of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring a person's suicide (s 2(3)(b)); or (3) an offence under the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 5 (causing or allowing the death of a vulnerable adult: see PARA 107 post) (Law Reform (Year and a Day Rule) Act 1996 s 2(3)(c) (added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 58(1), Sch 10 para 33)).

5 Law Reform (Year and a Day Rule) Act 1996 s 2(1). For the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post. No provision that proceedings may be instituted only by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions applies to proceedings to which the Law Reform (Year and a Day Rule) Act 1996 s 2 (as amended) applies: s 2(4).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(i) In General/86. Murder and manslaughter.

86. Murder and manslaughter.

It is murder for a person of sound memory<sup>1</sup> and of the age of discretion<sup>2</sup>, unlawfully to kill any human creature<sup>3</sup> in being and under the Queen's peace, with malice aforethought, either express or implied by law<sup>4</sup>.

There are two types of manslaughter: voluntary manslaughter, where the liability of a defendant otherwise liable for murder is reduced to manslaughter by virtue of one of three special defences available on a charge of murder; and involuntary manslaughter, which differs from murder in relation to the mental element which is necessary to support the charge<sup>5</sup>. On a charge of murder or manslaughter of a child, the jury may alternatively convict the defendant of child destruction<sup>6</sup>.

Where a subject of Her Majesty<sup>7</sup> commits a murder or manslaughter on land out of the United Kingdom<sup>8</sup>, whether within the Queen's territories or without, and whether the person killed was a subject of Her Majesty or not, he may be tried in England and Wales<sup>9</sup>.

If a person is criminally stricken, poisoned or otherwise hurt upon the sea or at any place out of England and Wales or Northern Ireland, and dies of such hurt in England and Wales or Northern Ireland, or, being so stricken, poisoned or otherwise hurt, in any place in England and Wales or Northern Ireland, dies of such hurt upon the sea or at any place out of England and Wales or Northern Ireland, the offence, whether it amounts to murder or manslaughter, may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined and punished, in England and Wales or Northern Ireland<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the liability of persons of unsound mind see PARAS 31-33 ante.

2 This is a reference to the age of criminal responsibility: see PARA 37 ante.

3 Any human being is included, however deformed or disabled: see Re A (Children) (Conjoined Twins: Surgical Separation) [2000] 4 All ER 961, [2001] Fam 147, CA (conjoined twins, each with a brain (although one was so undeveloped as to be practically useless) and nearly complete bodies, were regarded as separate persons). Where no body or part of a body has been found, the death of the victim may be proved by circumstantial evidence; and the jury is entitled to convict where the evidence is consistent with no other rational conclusion than that the victim is dead and that his death was caused by the defendant: R v Onufrejczyk [1955] 1 QB 388, 39 Cr App Rep 1, CCA. However, where no body or part of a body has been found, it has long been considered that a jury should use caution before convicting, particularly in those cases in which death is relied upon from the fact of the disappearance of the deceased: see Upington v Saul Solomon & Co (1879) Buch 240 at 276, Cape SC. Where the victim has been killed by one of two or more acts of the defendant, each of which is sufficient to establish manslaughter, there is no need to establish which act caused the death and the absence of a body is therefore immaterial: A-G's Reference (No 4 of 1980) [1981] 2 All ER 617, 73 Cr App Rep 40, CA.

The name of the deceased must, if it is known or can be ascertained with reasonable diligence, be stated in the indictment; if it cannot be so ascertained, the deceased must be described as 'a person unknown': R v Hicks (1840) 2 Mood & R 302; and see R v Campbell (1843) 1 Car & Kir 82.

The Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 10 (as amended) does not apply to a foreigner who causes the death of another person by an act committed outside the jurisdiction of the Queen: R v Lewis (1857) Dears & B 182, CCR.

Proceedings for murder or manslaughter may, subject to certain restrictions, be brought against a person in the United Kingdom irrespective of his nationality in respect of an alleged offence which was committed during the period beginning with 1 September 1939 and ending with 5 June 1945 in a place which at the time was part of Germany or under German occupation, and which constituted a violation of the laws and customs of war: see the War Crimes Act 1991 s 1(1)-(3); and WAR AND ARMED CONFLICT vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 465.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(i) In General/87. Person in being.

87. Person in being.

On a charge of murder or manslaughter it must be shown that the person killed was one who was in being. It is neither murder nor manslaughter to kill an unborn child while still in its mother's womb<sup>1</sup> although it may constitute the statutory offences of child destruction or abortion<sup>2</sup>. If, however, the child is born alive and afterwards dies by reason of an unlawful act done to it in the mother's womb or in the process of birth, the person who committed that act cannot be convicted of murder but he may be convicted of manslaughter<sup>3</sup>.

A child is not considered in law to be in being, so as to be the subject of a charge of murder or manslaughter, until the whole body of the child is extruded from the womb<sup>4</sup> and has an existence independent of the mother. Whether the child has an independent existence generally turns upon whether it has an independent circulation<sup>5</sup>, and has breathed independently of its mother<sup>6</sup>. However, a child may have an independent existence, even though it has not drawn breath and even though the umbilical cord is not severed<sup>7</sup>.

In relation to the law of homicide a person continues in being until his being is extinguished by death<sup>8</sup>.

88. Person under the Queen's peace.

On a charge of murder or manslaughter it must be shown that the person killed was under the Queen's peace. The effect of this is to exclude from those offences killings of enemy aliens in the actual heat and exercise of war<sup>1</sup> and, possibly, rebels in the course of a rebellion<sup>2</sup>; otherwise, everyone is under the Queen's peace<sup>3</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(ii) Murder/89. The elements.

(ii) Murder

89. The elements.

To establish a case of murder the prosecution must prove: (1) that the unlawful death of the victim was caused<sup>1</sup> by an act or omission<sup>2</sup> of the defendant; and (2) that the defendant did that act or omitted to act with malice aforethought, express or implied<sup>3</sup>. The burden of proof remains throughout on the prosecution and, apart from the special defences of insanity and diminished responsibility and the anomalous case of suicide pacts, it is at no time incumbent upon the defendant to establish any defence, or partial defence, to the charge<sup>4</sup>.

The mental element of murder, traditionally called malice aforethought, may take the form of an intention unlawfully<sup>5</sup> to kill (express malice) or an intention unlawfully to cause grievous bodily harm<sup>6</sup> (implied malice)<sup>7</sup>. Intent is the essential element in both forms of malice aforethought<sup>8</sup>. When directing juries, judges should not elaborate on what intent means but should rely upon the good sense of juries to decide whether the defendant acted with intent, unless, on the facts and in the light of the way that the case has been presented to the jury, further explanation in terms of foresight of virtual certainty<sup>9</sup> is necessary to avoid misunderstanding<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to causation see PARA 7 ante.

2 See R v Gibbins, R v Proctor (1918) 13 Cr App Rep 134, CCA; and see also PARA 6 ante. If death is caused by one act in a series of acts, it is irrelevant that the defendant lacked the necessary intent for murder when that act was done, if he had that intent when an earlier act in the series was done: Thabo Meli v R [1954] 1 All ER 373, [1954] 1 WLR 228, PC. The same principle also applies mutatis mutandis to involuntary manslaughter: R v Church [1966] 1 QB 59, [1965] 2 All ER 72, CCA. See also R v Moore, R v Dorn [1975] Crim LR 229, CA; R v Le Brun [1992] QB 61, 94 Cr App Rep 101, CA.

Where there are two routes by which a murder may have been committed, the jury either must be unanimous on which act caused death (R v Boreman, R v Byrne, R v Byrne [2000] 1 All ER 307, [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 17, CA) or must be unanimous that it was either act A or act B which caused the death, albeit some believe it was act A (and if not act B) and others believe that it was act B (and if not act A): R v Giannetto [1997] 1 Cr App Rep 1, CA.

3 Woolmington v DPP [1935] AC 462, 25 Cr App Rep 72, HL; Mancini v DPP [1942] AC 1, 28 Cr App Rep 65, HL.

There is no statutory definition of 'express malice' or 'implied malice' in the Homicide Act 1957 s 1, which abolished the doctrine of 'constructive malice'; at common law 'express malice' and 'implied malice' have the meanings set out in the text: R v Moloney [1985] AC 905 at 921, 81 Cr App Rep 93 at 102, HL (approving R v Vickers [1957] 2 QB 664, 41 Cr App Rep 189, CCA).

4 Chan Kau v R [1955] AC 206, [1955] 1 All ER 266, PC. See also R v Wheeler [1967] 3 All ER 829, 52 Cr App Rep 28, CA; R v Abraham [1973] 3 All ER 694, [1973] 1 WLR 1270, CA.

The public interest in the administration of justice is best served if in any trial on indictment the trial judge leaves to the jury, subject to any appropriate caution or warning but irrespective of the wishes of trial counsel, any obvious alternative offence which there was evidence to support: thus on a charge of murder it is in the interests of justice that a judge direct a jury as to manslaughter, as an alternative to murder: R v Coutts [2006] UKHL 39, [2006] 1 WLR 2154, [2006] All ER (D) 253 (Jul). The judge should not leave manslaughter as an alternative to murder when this is inconsistent with the defence case: Fazel Mohammed v The State (Trinidad and Tobago) [1990] 2 AC 320, 91 Cr App Rep 256, PC.

5 As to the requirement that the defendant must intend unlawfully to kill or do grievous bodily harm see Beckford v R [1988] AC 130, [1987] 3 All ER 425, PC (a person cannot be convicted of murder, even if he intentionally killed someone, if he did so in a mistaken belief in facts which if true would justify him in using reasonable force in self-defence and he had not exceeded such force, because he would not have intended unlawfully to kill his victim).

6 'Grievous bodily harm' means really serious bodily harm: DPP v Smith [1961] AC 290, 44 Cr App Rep 261, HL; R v Metharam [1961] 3 All ER 200, 45 Cr App Rep 304, CCA; R v Cunningham [1982] AC 566, 73 Cr App Rep 253, HL. See further PARA 120 post.

7 R v Cunningham [1982] AC 566, 73 Cr App Rep 253, HL. This form of malice aforethought is 'implied' in the sense that it is not necessary to prove that the defendant either intended or foresaw the death of the victim. It must, however, be proved that the defendant intended to cause grievous bodily harm (cf the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 8: see PARA 1366 post), and to that extent use of the expression 'implied malice' may be misleading.

The doctrine of transferred fault (see PARA 12 ante) applies to both types of intent referred to in the text: see Bract, De Corona, c 36; Fost 261; R v Saunders, R v Archer (1573) 2 Plowd 473; R v Hunt (1825) 1 Mood CC 93, CCR; R v Bernard (1858) 1 F & F 240 per Campbell CJ. For an exception see A-G's Reference (No 3 of 1994) [1998] AC 245, [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 91, HL (an assailant who directs violence at a pregnant woman with the intent of causing her grievous bodily harm, will be guilty of manslaughter but not murder, if the child is subsequently born alive, enjoys an existence independent of his mother and thereafter dies with the injuries having caused or made a substantial contribution to his death). It would seem that the same would be true if the assailant had intended to kill the mother.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(ii) Murder/90. Penalty for murder.

90. Penalty for murder.

The penalty for murder is fixed by law; it is imprisonment for life<sup>1</sup>. Where a court<sup>2</sup> passes a life sentence<sup>3</sup> in circumstances where the sentence is fixed by law it must order that the early release provisions<sup>4</sup> are to apply to the offender as soon as he has served the part of his sentence which is specified in the order<sup>5</sup>, unless the offender was aged 21 or over when he committed the offence and the court is of the opinion that, because of the seriousness of the offence<sup>6</sup>, or of the combination of the offence and one or more offences associated with it, no such order should be made, in which case the court must order that the early release provisions are not to apply to the offender<sup>7</sup>. Where a court makes an order that the early release provisions are to apply as soon as the offender has served the part of his sentence which is specified<sup>8</sup>, or makes an order that those provisions are not to apply<sup>9</sup>, it must state in open court<sup>10</sup>, in ordinary language, its reasons for deciding on the order made<sup>11</sup>.

1 Murder (Abolition of Death Penalty) Act 1965 s 1(1). As to sentences on persons under the age of 18 (detention during Her Majesty's pleasure) see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 81. As to murder committed in connection with the hijacking of aircraft see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 625.

The sentence is fixed by law and cannot be appealed against under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 9 (as amended); see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 46. However, an appeal against sentence may be brought against an order made under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 269(2) or (4) (see notes 5, 7 infra); see the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 9(1A) (as added); and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 46. In addition, the Attorney General may apply for a review of such an order: see the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 36(3A) (as added); and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 57. The mandatory life sentence for murder has been held by the House of Lords not to be incompatible with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 3 (prohibition of inhuman or degrading treatment) or art 5(1) (right to liberty) on the ground that the operation in practice of an indeterminate sentence for murder does not constitute an arbitrary and disproportionate punishment: R v Lichniak, R v Pyrah [2002] UKHL 47, [2003] 1 AC 903, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep 560. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

Provision is made for the assessment and management of the risks posed by persons who have been convicted and sentenced for, or (in certain circumstances) found to be not guilty and been made the subject of a hospital or guardianship order in consequence of, the offence of murder, and other persons who, by reason of offences committed by them, are considered by the responsible authority to be persons who may cause serious harm to the public: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 325, 326, 327(1), (3), (4).

2 'Court' includes a court-martial: ibid s 277.

3 'Life sentence' in this context means a sentence of imprisonment for life, a sentence of detention during Her Majesty's pleasure, or a sentence of custody for life passed before the commencement of the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 61(1) (which abolishes that sentence): Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 277.

4 Ie the provisions of the Crime (Sentences) Act 1997 s 28(5)-(8) (as amended): see PRISONS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 621.

5 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 269(1), (2). The part of the offender's sentence so specified is to be such as the court considers appropriate taking into account the seriousness of the offence, or of the combination of the offence and any one or more offences associated with it (see note 6 infra) (s 269(3)(a)) and the effect of any direction which it could have given under s 240 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 36) crediting periods of remand in custody if it had sentenced him to a term of imprisonment (s 269(3)(b)).

In relation to persons sentenced to a fixed life sentence on or after 18 December 2003 (ie the date on which s 269 was brought into force by virtue of s 336(2)) for an offence committed before that date, the court may not specify a part of the sentence which in its opinion is greater than the part which would have been likely to have been specified by the Secretary of State under the practice followed by him before December 2002: s 276, Sch 22 paras 9, 10(a); and see also Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at IV.49, CA; Practice Direction (Crime: Mandatory Life Sentences) (No 2) [2004] 1 WLR 2551 at IV.49; R v Sullivan, R v Gibbs, R v Barry Elener, R v Derek Elener [2004] EWCA Crim 1762, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 23.

6 In considering under these provisions the seriousness of an offence (or of the combination of an offence and one or more offences associated with it), the court must have regard to the general principles set out in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 (s 269(5)(a)) and any guidelines relating to offences in general which are relevant to the case and are not incompatible with the provisions of Sch 21 (s 269(5)(b)). For the meaning of 'guidelines' see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 635; definition applied by s 277. The guidance given by Sch 21 provided to assist the judge to determine the appropriate sentence. The judge must have regard to that guidance, but each case depends critically on its particular facts. If the judge concludes that it is appropriate to follow a course that does not appear to reflect that guidance, the judge should explain the reason for this: R v Jones [2005] EWCA Crim 3115, [2006] Crim LR 262.

If the court considers that the seriousness of the offence (or the combination of the offence and one or more offences associated with it) is exceptionally high (Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 para 4(1)(a)) and the offender was aged 21 or over when he committed the offence (Sch 21 para 4(1)(b)), the appropriate starting point is a whole life order (ie an order under s 269(4): see the text and note 7 infra) that the early release provisions are not to apply (Sch 21 para 1)). The court will normally consider that the seriousness of the offence (or the combination of the offence and one or more offences associated with it) is exceptionally high in cases involving: (1) the murder of two or more persons, where each murder involves a substantial degree of premeditation or planning (Sch 21 para 4(2)(a)(i)), the abduction of the victim (Sch 21 para 4(2)(a)(iii)), or sexual or sadistic conduct (Sch 21 para 4(2)(a)(iii)); (2) the murder of a child (ie a person under 18 (Sch 21 para 1)) if involving the abduction of the child or sexual or sadistic motivation (Sch 21 para 4(2)(b)); (3) a murder done for the purpose of advancing a political, religious or ideological cause (Sch 21 para 4(2)(c)); or (4) a murder by an offender previously convicted of murder (Sch 21 para 4(2)(d)). As to the whole life starting point see R v Jones supra.

If the case does not fall within these requirements but the court considers that the seriousness of the offence (or the combination of the offence and one or more offences associated with it) is particularly high (Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 para 5(1)(a)), and the offender was aged 18 or over when he committed the offence (Sch 21 para 5(1)(b)), the appropriate starting point in determining the minimum term is 30 years. 'Minimum term' means the part of the sentence to be specified in an order under s 269(2); and 'mandatory life sentence' means a life sentence passed in circumstances where the sentence is fixed by law: Sch 21 para 1. Cases in this category would normally include: (a) the murder of a police officer or prison officer in the course of his duty (Sch 21 para 5(2)(a)); (b) a murder involving the use of a firearm or explosive (Sch 21 para 5(2)(b)); (c) a murder done for gain (such as a murder done in the course or furtherance of robbery or burglary, or done for payment, or done in the expectation of gain as a result of the death) (Sch 21 para 5(2)(c)); (d) a murder intended to obstruct or interfere with the course of justice (Sch 21 para 5(2)(d)); (e) a murder involving sexual or sadistic conduct (Sch 21 para 5(2)(e)); (f) the murder of two or more persons (Sch 21 para 5(2)(f)); (g) a murder that is racially or religiously aggravated or aggravated by sexual orientation (Sch 21 para 5(2)(g)); or (h) a murder falling within Sch 21 para 4(2) (see heads (1)-(4) supra) committed by an offender who was aged under 21 when he committed the offence (Sch 21 para 5(2)(h)). Note that in the context of head (e) supra the word 'sadistic' does not require a sexual element: see A-G's References (Nos 108 and 109 of 2005), R v Swindon [2006] EWCA Crim 513, [2006] All ER (D) 210 (Feb). As to the meaning of 'racially or religiously aggravated' for these purposes see the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28 (as amended); and PARA 155 post (definition applied by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 para 2). For these purposes an offence is aggravated by sexual orientation if it is committed in circumstances falling within s 146(2)(a)(i) or s 146(2)(b)(i) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 621): Sch 21 para 3.

If the offender was aged 18 or over when he committed the offence and the case does not fall within any of the descriptions of offence set out above, the appropriate starting point in determining the minimum term is 15 years: Sch 21 para 6. Where the 15-year starting point has been chosen, judges should have in mind that this starting point encompasses a very broad range of murders, and it should not be assumed that Parliament intended to raise all minimum terms that would previously have had a lower starting point to 15 years: R v Sullivan, R v Gibbs, R v Barry Elener, R v Derek Elener [2004] EWCA Crim 1762, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 23; Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at IV.49, CA; Practice Direction (Crime: Mandatory Life Sentences) (No 2) [2004] 1 WLR 2551 at IV.49. If the offender was aged under 18 when he committed the offence, the appropriate starting point in determining the minimum term is 12 years: Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 para 7.

Having chosen a starting point, the court should take into account any aggravating or mitigating factors, to the extent that it has not allowed for them in its choice of starting point: Sch 21 para 8. Aggravating factors (additional to those mentioned in Sch 2 para 4(2) (see heads (1)-(4) supra) and Sch 2 para 5(2) (see heads (a)-(h) supra)) that may be relevant to the offence of murder include a significant degree of planning or premeditation (Sch 21 para 10(a)), the fact that the victim was particularly vulnerable because of age or disability (Sch 21 para 10(b)), mental or physical suffering inflicted on the victim before death (Sch 21 para

10(c)), the abuse of a position of trust (Sch 21 para 10(d)), the use of duress or threats against another person to facilitate the commission of the offence (Sch 21 para 10(e)), the fact that the victim was providing a public service or performing a public duty (Sch 21 para 10(f)), and concealment, destruction or dismemberment of the body (Sch 21 para 10(g)). Mitigating factors that may be relevant to the offence of murder include an intention to cause serious bodily harm rather than to kill (Sch 21 para 11(a)), lack of premeditation (Sch 21 para 11(b)), the fact that the offender suffered from any mental disorder or mental disability which (although not falling within the Homicide Act 1957 s 2(1) (see PARA 96 post)) lowered his degree of culpability (Sch 21 para 11(c)), the fact that the offender was provoked (for example, by prolonged stress) in a way not amounting to a defence of provocation (see PARA 94 post) (Sch 21 para 11(d)), the fact that the offender acted to any extent in self-defence (Sch 21 para 11(e)), a belief by the offender that the murder was an act of mercy (Sch 21 para 11(f)), and the age of the offender (Sch 21 para 11(g)). These lists are illustrative and not exhaustive: R v Peters, R v Palmer, R v Campbell [2005] EWCA Crim 605, [2005] Cr App Rep (S) 607. Thus, for example, a judge is entitled to regard the unlawful carrying of an offensive weapon in a public place as an aggravating factor (R v Richardson [2005] EWCA Crim 1408, [2005] Crim LR 804) or the defendant's remorse, previous good character or lack of previous convictions as a mitigating factor (R v Simmons [2006] All ER (D) 187 (May)). Detailed consideration of aggravating or mitigating factors may result in a minimum term of any length (whatever the starting point), or in the making of a whole life order: Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 para 9.

Where aggravating factors have led the judge to adopt the higher of two potential starting points, or mitigating factors had led him to adopt the lower, the judge must be careful not to apply those factors a second time round in making any adjustment to that starting point that may be appropriate to reflect the other material facts: R v Jones supra.

Nothing in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 restricts the application of s 143(2) (previous convictions: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 618), s 143(3) (offences committed on bail: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 618) and s 144 (guilty plea: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 623): Sch 21 para 12.

The Secretary of State may by order amend Sch 21: s 269(6). Any power to make orders or rules under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 must be exercised by statutory instrument: s 330(1), (2). Any such power may be exercised so as to make different provision for different purposes or different areas (s 330(3)(a)), and may be exercised either for all the purposes to which the power extends, or for those purposes subject to specified exceptions, or only for specified purposes (s 330(3)(b)); and it includes the power to make any supplementary, incidental or consequential provision, and any transitory, transitional or saving provision (s 330(4)(a), (b)), which the minister making the instrument considers necessary or expedient. In general, a statutory instrument made pursuant to these powers is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament (s 330(6)), although this is not the case in relation to a statutory instrument containing only an order made under one or more of s 202(3)(b) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 273), s 215(3) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 284), s 253(5) (see PRISONS), s 325(6)(i) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 557) or s 336 (s 330(7)). A statutory instrument containing an order under any of s 25(5) (see PARA 1044 post), s 103 (see PARA 1507 post), s 161(7) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 629), s 178 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 175), s 197(3) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 104), s 223 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS), s 246(5) (see PRISONS), s 260 (see PRISONS), s 267 (alteration by order of relevant proportion of sentence), s 269(6) (see note 6 supra), s 281(2) (alteration of penalties for summary offences), s 283(1) (see PARA 1121 post), s 291 (see PARA 662 post), s 301(5) (see ROAD TRAFFIC), s 325(7) (see PARA 244; SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 70), Sch 31 para 5, an order under s 336(3) bringing s 43 into force (see PARA 1284 post), an order making any provision by virtue of s 333(2)(b) which adds to, replaces or omits any part of the text of an Act, or rules under s 240(4)(a) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 36), may only be made if a draft of the statutory instrument has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, each House of Parliament: s 330(5). Before making an order under s 269(6), the Secretary of State must consult the Sentencing Guidelines Council: s 269(7).

In relation to pleas of guilty the Sentencing Guidelines Council has issued definitive sentencing guidelines on reducing sentences for guilty pleas of murder. Where a court determines that there should be a whole life minimum term, there will be no reduction for a guilty plea. In other circumstances:

- 16 (i) the court will weigh carefully the overall length of the minimum term taking into account other reductions for which offenders may be eligible so as to avoid a combination leading to an inappropriately short sentence;
- 17 (ii) where it is appropriate to reduce the minimum term having regard to a plea of guilty, the maximum reduction will be one-sixth;
- 18 (iii) however, even where a minimum term of over 30 years (but not whole life) is fixed, the reduction should never exceed five years;
- 19 (iv) the sliding scale will apply so that, where it is appropriate to reduce the minimum term on account of a guilty plea, the maximum reduction is available only where there has been an indication of willingness to plead guilty at the first reasonable opportunity (as to which see R v

Peters, R v Palmer, R v Campbell [2005] EWCA Crim 605, [2005] Crim LR 492), with a maximum of 5% for a late guilty plea;

- 20 (v) the court should then review the sentence to ensure that the minimum term accurately reflects the seriousness of the offence taking account of the statutory starting point, all aggravating and mitigating factors and any guilty plea entered.

These guidelines should be applied to offences committed before they came into force (ie 10 January 2005): R v Last, R v Holbrook, R v Crane, R v Quillan [2005] EWCA Crim 106, [2005] Crim LR 407. Although the court must have regard to these guidelines, they do not remove the judge's discretion, and as long as he gives a valid reason for doing so the judge is free to depart from them: R v Last, R v Holbrook, R v Crane, R v Quillan supra. See also Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at IV.49, CA; Practice Direction (Crime: Mandatory Life Sentences) (No 2) [2004] 1 WLR 2551 at IV.49; R v Peters, R v Palmer, R v Campbell [2005] EWCA Crim 605, [2005] Crim LR 492.

In relation to whole life terms, the single judge should consider the fact that the defendant had pleaded guilty to murder when deciding whether it is appropriate to make such an order. However, a case calling for the imposition of a whole life term is unlikely to be a borderline cases. Where it is not there may be no need for the judge to spell out why, although he has had regard to the plea, this has not affected the sentence: R v Jones [2005] EWCA Crim 3115, [2006] Crim LR 262.

7 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 269(4). In relation to persons sentenced to a fixed life sentence on or after 18 December 2003 (see note 5 supra) for an offence committed before that date, the court may not make an order under s 269(4) unless it is of the opinion that, under the practice followed by the Secretary of State before December 2002, he would have been likely to give the offender a notification of an intention that he should never be released on licence: Sch 22 para 10(b).

8 Ie an order under ibid s 269(2) (see the text and notes 1-5 supra).

9 Ie an order under ibid s 269(4) (see the text and notes 6-7 supra).

10 In R v Denbigh Justices, ex p Williams [1974] QB 759, [1974] 2 All ER 1052, DC, Lord Widgery CJ stated, in the context of a submission that a hearing had not been in open court: 'The trial should be 'public' in the ordinary common-sense acceptation of that term. The doors of the courtroom are expected to be kept open, the public are entitled to be admitted, and the trial is to be public in all respects . . . with due regard to the size of the courtroom, the convenience of the court, the right to exclude objectionable characters and youth of tender years, and to do other things which may facilitate the proper conduct of the trial.'

11 Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 270(1). In stating its reasons the court must, in particular, state which of the starting points in Sch 21 (see note 6 supra) it has chosen and its reasons for doing so (s 270(2)(a)), and state its reasons for any departure from that starting point (s 270(2)(b)). Section 270 does not apply to the extent that the explanation will disclose that a sentence has been discounted in pursuance of the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 73 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 625) but this has not been stated in open court by virtue of s 73(4) (ie on the ground that to do so would not be in the public interest: s 73(7)). As to the procedure for announcing the minimum term in open court see Practice Direction (Criminal Proceedings: Consolidation) [2002] 3 All ER 904, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 533 at IV.49, CA; Practice Direction (Crime: Mandatory Life Sentences) (No 2) [2004] 1 WLR 2551 at IV.49.

90 Penalty for murder

NOTE 1--Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 325, 326 amended: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 26 paras 74, 75.

NOTE 2--Definition of 'court' amended to refer to the renamed Court Martial: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 230.

NOTE 5--The effect of prohibition on heavier retrospective penalties by virtue of the European Convention on Human Rights art 7 is that the court has to ask itself what minimum term the Secretary of State would have set on any different factual basis adopted by the court and limit the minimum term it set accordingly, even though the 2003 Act Sch 22 contains no transitional provisions to that effect: see Re Bingham (application under para 3 of Sch 22 to the Criminal Justice Act 2003) [2006] EWHC 2591 (QB), [2006] All ER (D) 262 (Oct). See also R v Caines; R v Roberts [2006] EWCA

Crim 2915, [2007] 1 WLR 1109 (guidance on transitional mandatory life sentences cases determined under 2003 Act Sch 22); Re Taylor [2006] EWHC 2944 (QB), [2007] 3 All ER 441; R v Sampson [2006] EWCA Crim 2669, [2006] All ER (D) 284 (Oct); and Re Cole (application pursuant to para 3 of Sch 22 to the Criminal Justice Act 2003) [2006] EWHC 3036 (QB), [2006] All ER (D) 274 (Dec).

Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 269(3)(b) amended: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 22(3).

NOTE 6--Now, where the case does not fall within the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 para 4(1) or 5 (1), and the offender took a knife or other weapon to the scene intending to commit any offence, or have it available to use as a weapon, and used that knife or other weapon in committing the murder, and the offender was aged 18 or over when the offender committed the offence, the offence is normally to be regarded as sufficiently serious for the appropriate starting point, in determining the minimum term, to be 25 years: Sch 21 para 5A(1), (2) (added by SI 2010/197). Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 paras 6, 10 amended: SI 2010/197. Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 para 12 amended: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 236.

It is open to a judge, when assessing the culpability of an offender, to have regard not only to the gravity of the offence but also to antecedent behaviour not all of which is necessarily evidenced by previous convictions: R v Thomas [2009] EWCA Crim 904, [2009] All ER (D) 16 (May). See C v HM Advocate [2009] HCJAC 44, 2009 SLT 707 (account taken of offender's abnormality of mind which was insufficient to establish plea of diminished responsibility).

Head (3) now refers to a political, religious, racial or ideological cause: Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21 para 4(2)(c) (amended by Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 75(1), (2)(c)).

Head (c). A murder done for gain includes a domestic murder done to solve debt problems: Re Bingham (application under para 3 of Sch 22 to the Criminal Justice Act 2003) [2006] EWHC 2591 (QB), [2006] All ER (D) 262 (Oct). See R v Bouhaddaou [2006] EWCA Crim 3190, [2007] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 122 (murder committed to effect escape in course of burglary constituted murder for gain).

A-G's References (Nos 108 and 109 of 2005), cited, reported at [2006] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 531. See A-G's Reference (No 127 of 2006); R v H; A-G's Reference (No 126 of 2006); R v H [2007] EWCA Crim 53, [2007] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 362 (appropriate sentence remained fact-specific despite defined starting point); A-G's References (Nos 143 and 144 of 2006); R v Brown [2007] All ER (D) 202 (May), CA (where two offenders, one aged just under, and other just over, 18, equally culpable for murder, small disparity in their ages could not properly be reflected by more than one years' difference in minimum terms); R v Barot [2007] EWCA Crim 1119, [2007] All ER (D) 246 (May) (mass murder by fanatical terrorists and associated conspiracies and attempts); R v McGrady [2007] EWCA Crim 192, [2007] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 347 (whole life order appropriate for murder and dismemberment, with sexual motivation, of 15-year-old girl); R v Jalil [2008] EWCA Crim 2910, [2009] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 276, [2008] All ER (D) 51 (Dec) (see further PARA 128). It is proper to have regard to the offender's state of health when setting the minimum term: Re Walker (application under para 3 of Sch 22 to the Criminal Justice Act 2003) [2007] EWHC 156 (QB), [2007] All ER (D) 284 (Feb).

Head (e). See Re Allitt (reference under para 6 of Sch 22 to the Criminal Justice Act 2003) [2007] EWHC 2845 (QB), [2007] All ER (D) 77 (Dec) (sadistic element to personality of offender suffering from Munchausen's Syndrome by Proxy); and R v Davis [2008] All ER (D) 284 (Apr) (speculation murder sexually motivated insufficient to increase minimum term to 30 years). The features to be borne in mind under the 2003 Act Sch 21 in fixing a minimum term of a life sentence for murder also apply to appropriate cases of conspiracy to murder where the objective is fulfilled and criminal culpability is extremely high: R v McNee [2007] All ER (D) 73 (May), CA. As to the setting of a minimum term where two offenders are tried for the same offence in separate trials see Re Lambe (reference under para 6 of Sch 22 to the Criminal Justice Act 2003) [2007] EWHC 1864 (QB), [2007] All ER (D) 126 (Aug). See also R v Bonellie [2008] EWCA Crim 1417, [2009] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 297, [2008] All ER (D) 213 (Jul) (for murder to involve sadistic conduct it had to involve a significant degree of awareness of pleasure in the infliction of pain, suffering or humiliation). The sexual conduct must be connected to the offence; sexual intercourse with the victim is not sufficient for this purpose: R v Walker [2007] EWCA Crim 2631, [2008] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 38, [2007] All ER (D) 354 (Oct). See also R v Height [2008] EWCA Crim 2500, [2009] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 656, [2008] All ER (D) 297 (Oct) (motive for first defendant, desire to rid himself of wife; motive for second defendant, financial gain). The sentencing judge has no discretion to disapply the statutory starting point: A-G's Reference (No 24 of 2008); R v Sanchez [2008] EWCA Crim 2936, [2009] 3 All ER 839. A reduction in the minimum term may be appropriate where there has been exceptional progress in custody, even if the offence was particularly serious: R v Pitchfork [2009] EWCA Crim 963, [2009] All ER (D) 132 (May). While not expressly dealt with in the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 21, desecration of the deceased's body after death and cannibalism will normally be identified as profoundly serious features which fall within the 'particularly high level of seriousness' category: R v Morley [2009] EWCA Crim 1302, [2010] Cr App Rep (S) 275, [2009] All ER (D) 85 (Jun), CA.

The Sentencing Guidelines Council has issued revised definitive sentencing guidelines on Reduction in Sentence for a Guilty Plea (2007). The guidelines apply to all cases sentenced on or after 23 July 2007.

A draft statutory instrument is also required in the case of an order under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 22(3C) (see PARA 1044) or rules under s 240A(4)(a) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 37), and in the case of an order under s 23A(4) which makes provision increasing the fraction in s 23A(3)(a), or increasing the figure in s 23A(3)(b) by more than is necessary to reflect changes in the value of money: s 330(5) (amended by Police and Justice Act 2006 s 17(5); and Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 21(7), Sch 26 para 76 (not yet in force)).

Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 330(5) further amended: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 4 para 95, Sch 28 Pt 1.

As to guidance relating to the appropriate sentence where a knife is used to kill, see R v Maina; R v Kika; R v Saddique [2009] All ER (D) 157 (Nov), CA.

NOTE 7--A whole life sentence does not violate an offender's rights under the European Convention on Human Rights art 3 provided that he is not detained beyond a period that is justified on the grounds of punishment and deterrence: R v Bieber [2008] EWCA Crim 1601, [2009] 1 All ER 295.

91. Joint enterprise.

The normal principles of criminal liability in a joint enterprise apply in cases of homicide so that a person who participates in a joint enterprise which results in the unlawful killing of the victim by another participant is guilty of either murder or manslaughter if the relevant principles are satisfied<sup>1</sup>.

(iii) Manslaughter

A. IN GENERAL

92. In general.

Manslaughter may be classified as voluntary or involuntary<sup>1</sup>, the distinction being that in cases of voluntary manslaughter a person may be convicted of the offence, notwithstanding that he has the malice aforethought of murder, if he kills under provocation<sup>2</sup>, or suffering from diminished responsibility by reason of abnormality of mind<sup>3</sup>, or in pursuance of a suicide pact<sup>4</sup>. Involuntary manslaughter is committed where the defendant does not intend to kill or cause grievous bodily harm<sup>5</sup> but where death results from an unlawful act which any reasonable person would recognise as likely to expose another to the risk of injury<sup>6</sup> or is caused by a grossly negligent act or omission<sup>7</sup>, or where the person who causes death is reckless as to the risk of serious injury<sup>8</sup>.

93 Penalty for manslaughter

TEXT AND NOTE 1--The value of authorities on unlawful act manslaughter involving violence prior to the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 143(1), which requires the court to consider harm that the offence caused, was intended to cause or might foreseeably have caused in considering the seriousness of any offence, is doubtful. The court must increase its focus on the fact that a victim has died in consequence of an unlawful act of violence: A-G's Reference (No 60 of 2009); R v Appleby; R v Bryan; R v Cowles [2009] EWCA Crim 2693, [2009] All ER (D) 182 (Dec). ## B. VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER

94. Provocation as defence to murder charge.

Provocation may reduce a charge of murder<sup>1</sup> to one of manslaughter<sup>2</sup>. The test of whether the defence of provocation is entitled to succeed is a dual one. The alleged provocative conduct<sup>3</sup> must be such as:

- 39 (1) actually causes in the defendant a sudden and temporary loss of self-control<sup>4</sup>, making him so subject to passion that he is not the master of his mind (the subjective test)<sup>5</sup>; and
- 40 (2) was enough to make a reasonable man do as the defendant did (the objective test)<sup>6</sup>.

Where on a charge of murder there is evidence on which the jury can find that the person charged was provoked<sup>7</sup>, whether by things done or by things said<sup>8</sup>, or by both together, to lose his self-control, the question whether the provocation was enough to make a reasonable man do as he did must be left to be determined by the jury<sup>9</sup>. In determining that question the jury must take into account everything both done and said according to the effect which, in the jury's opinion, it would have on a reasonable man<sup>10</sup>.

1 Provocation is a defence only to a charge of murder: R v Cunningham [1959] 1 QB 288, 43 Cr App Rep 79, CCA (provocation not a defence to a charge of unlawful wounding); R v Bruzas [1972] Crim LR 367, Crown Ct (provocation not a defence to a charge of attempted murder). The defence of provocation is available to an accomplice to murder: R v Marks [1998] Crim LR 676, CA.

2 The defence of provocation is available where it is proved or admitted that the defendant has committed the actus reus of murder with the mens rea for murder: see A-G of Ceylon v Kumarasinghe Don John Perera [1953] AC 200 at 206, [1953] 2 WLR 238 at 243, PC; Lee Chun-Chuen v R [1963] AC 220, [1963] 1 All ER 73, PC; Parker v R [1964] AC 1369, [1964] 2 All ER 641, PC; R v Martindale [1966] 3 All ER 305, 50 Cr App Rep 273, C-MAC; Smith v R [2001] UKPC 27, [2001] 1 WLR 1532, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 92.

3 Conduct constituting provocation may include spoken words: see note 8 infra. It is not essential that the conduct be directed at the defendant himself. At common law, however, the conduct had to be directed at the defendant or a near relative: see eg R v Harrington (1866) 10 Cox CC 370 (defendant provoked by an assault on a member of his family). This rule has by implication been changed by the Homicide Act 1957 s 3 (see the text and notes 7-10 infra); now the conduct need not be directed at the defendant or a near relative: see R v Pearson [1992] Crim LR 193, CA. In general provocation is a defence when it causes the defendant to kill the person giving the provocation (see R v Simpson (1915) 84 LJB 1893, 11 Cr App Rep 218, CCA), but it may provide a defence even where it causes him to kill a third person (see R v Davies [1975] QB 691, 60 Cr App Rep 253, CA; and see also the Homicide Act 1957 s 3; and the text and notes 7-10 infra). A person may rely on self-induced provocation where his own conduct causes a reaction in another which in turn causes him to lose his own self-control: R v Johnson [1989] 2 All ER 839, 89 Cr App Rep 148, CA (the mere fact that the defendant caused a reaction in others which in turn led him to lose his self-control does not result in the issue of provocation being kept outside the jury's consideration); Edwards v R [1973] AC 648, 57 Cr App Rep 157, PC (blackmailer not generally entitled to rely on predictable reaction of person blackmailed as constituting provocation, but may do so where the victim's reaction goes to extreme lengths; explained in R v Johnson supra).

4 This requirement of the common law was not changed by the Homicide Act 1957 s 3 (see the text and notes 7-10 infra): see R v Thornton [1992] 1 All ER 306, 96 Cr App Rep 112, CA; R v Ahluwalia [1992] 4 All ER

889, 96 Cr App Rep 133, CA. 'Sudden' does not mean 'immediate'; a delayed reaction to the alleged provocative conduct (or the last piece of provocative conduct) can fall within the defence provided that when it occurs the loss of self-control is abrupt: R v Ahluwalia supra. It is essential to the defence that the defendant should in fact have lost his self-control at the time of the killing. In considering whether there was such a genuine loss of self-control the jury may have regard to the whole factual situation, including the time elapsing between the provocation and the killing (R v Hayward (1833) 6 C & P 157; Kwaku Mensah v R [1946] AC 83, PC; R v Duffy [1949] 1 All ER 932n, CCA; R v Ibrams, R v Gregory (1981) 74 Cr App Rep 154, CA), to the manner of the killing itself which may support or negative contrivance or design (1 Hale PC 454; Fost 291; 1 Hawk PC c 13 s 42; 1 East PC 235; Thorpe's Case (1829) 1 Lew CC 171; R v Shaw (1834) 6 C & P 372; R v Thomas (1837) 7 C & P 817; Mancini v DPP [1942] AC 1, 28 Cr App Rep 65, HL; R v Gilbert (1977) 66 Cr App Rep 237, CA), and to the defendant's characteristics (R v Ahluwalia supra). See also R v Cocker [1989] Crim LR 740, CA (husband gave way to wife's entreaties that he should kill her; loss of self-restraint but not of self-control; no evidence of provocation). Where there has been a protracted course of cruel, insulting or violent conduct, the whole course of that conduct must be taken into account by the jury in considering whether or not the defendant suffered a sudden and temporary loss of self-control as a result of the final occurrence: R v Humphreys [1995] 4 All ER 1008, [1996] Crim LR 431, CA. If the defendant has endured abuse over a period, especially where this has resulted in 'battered woman syndrome', a jury may more readily find (on a 'last straw' basis) that there was a sudden loss of control triggered by even a minor incident: R v Thornton (No 2) [1996] 2 All ER 1023 at 1030, [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 108 at 116, CA, per Lord Taylor CJ; Luc Thiet Thuan v R [1997] AC 131 at 141, [1996] 2 All ER 1033 at 1047, PC.

5 See R v Duffy [1949] 1 All ER 932n, CCA, approving the direction given to the jury by Devlin J; R v Whitfield (1976) 63 Cr App Rep 39 at 42, CA.

6 See PARA 95 post.

7 Where there is any evidence of provocation which would, if accepted, justify the jury in returning a verdict of manslaughter, the judge must leave that issue to the jury whatever the line of defence adopted at the trial (R v Hopper [1915] 2 KB 431, 11 Cr App Rep 136, CCA; Kwaku Mensah v R [1946] AC 83, PC; Bullard v R [1957] AC 635, 42 Cr App Rep 1, PC; R v Porritt [1961] 3 All ER 463, 45 Cr App Rep 348, CCA; Rolle v R [1965] 3 All ER 582, [1965] 1 WLR 1341, PC; R v Cascoe [1970] 2 All ER 833, 54 Cr App Rep 401, CA; R v Newell [1989] Crim LR 906, CA; R v Sawyer [1989] Crim LR 831, CA; R v Cambridge [1994] 2 All ER 760, 99 Cr App Rep 142, CA; and see also Knowles v R [1930] AC 366, PC; Mancini v DPP [1942] AC 1, 28 Cr App Rep 65, HL) and even if, in the opinion of the trial judge, on the evidence a verdict of manslaughter would be perverse (R v Gilbert (1977) 66 Cr App Rep 237, CA; R v Newell supra; R v Stewart [1995] 4 All ER 999, [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 229n, CA; R v Baillie [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 31, CA). Where there is such evidence the judge must leave the defence to the jury notwithstanding that the defendant or his counsel would prefer that it was not: R v Dhillon [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 104, CA. Counsel on both sides are obliged to draw the judge's attention to any evidence of provocation: R v Cox [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 513, CA. Where provocation is not left to the jury where it should have been, a manslaughter verdict will be substituted on appeal unless the Court of Appeal is sure that the jury would inevitably have found the defence of provocation disproved and have convicted the defendant of murder: R v Dhillon supra; R v Van Dongen [2005] EWCA Crim 1728, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 632. See also Franco v R (2001) Times, 11 October, PC (an appellate court should be very cautious in drawing inferences as to how a jury would have resolved an issue, such as provocation, which was never before it). Where the evidence discloses a possible defence of provocation, the burden of proof remains on the prosecution, and it is not for the defendant to establish the defence; this must be made clear to the jury: Chan Kau v R [1955] AC 206, [1955] 1 All ER 266, PC; R v McPherson (1957) 41 Cr App Rep 213, CCA; R v Cascoe supra. If the jury has a reasonable doubt whether or not there was provocation, the defendant is entitled to a verdict of manslaughter: R v Prince [1941] 3 All ER 37, 28 Cr App Rep 60, CCA; R v McPherson supra.

Evidence which was adduced in support of an unsuccessful defence, eg self-defence, may be relied on in whole or in part as affording provocation: see Bullard v R supra; R v Porritt supra.

If the judge decides that there is insufficient evidence for a jury to conclude that there is a reasonable possibility that there was specific provoking conduct resulting in loss of self-control by the defendant, he must not leave the defence of provocation to the jury: R v Acott [1997] 1 All ER 706, [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 94, HL.

8 At common law the defence of provocation tended to be limited to certain particular situations (such as physical attack or finding of spouse in adultery) and it was held in Holmes v DPP [1946] AC 588, 31 Cr App Rep 123, HL, that words alone, save in extreme and exceptional cases, would not amount to provocation. The effect of the Homicide Act 1957 s 3 is to remove these limitations upon the defence; anything, whether things done or words said or both together, which causes a loss of self-control in the defendant may be considered by the jury in determining whether it is capable of amounting to provocation: R v Davies [1975] QB 691, 60 Cr App Rep 253, CA. See also R v Doughty (1986) 83 Cr App Rep 319, CA (baby's continuous crying may constitute evidence of provocation).

9 Homicide Act 1957 s 3. Section 3 involves two questions, to be answered by the judge: whether there is any evidence of specific provocative conduct, and whether there is any evidence that that conduct caused the defendant to lose his self-control: R v Gilbert (1977) 66 Cr App Rep 237, CA; and see also Franco v R [2001]

UKPC 38, 145 Sol Jo LB 216, (2001) Times, 11 October, PC. Where the judge is required to leave the issue of provocation to the jury, he should indicate, unless it is obvious, what evidence might support the conclusion that the defendant had lost his self-control: R v Stewart [1995] 4 All ER 999, [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 229n, CA. See also R v Humphreys [1995] 4 All ER 1008, [1996] Crim LR 431, CA. As to the effect of provocation on a reasonable man see PARA 95 post.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(iii) Manslaughter/B. VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER/95. Provocation: the objective test.

95. Provocation: the objective test.

The function of the objective test for provocation is to introduce an objective standard of self-control against which the defendant's actions must be measured<sup>1</sup>. Traditionally, the objective criterion has been expressed as a requirement that the alleged provocative words or conduct must have been such as might have caused a reasonable man (that is, an ordinary person) to suffer a loss of self-control and, having lost self-control, to do as the defendant did<sup>2</sup>. This is a question to be decided according to the opinion of the jury<sup>3</sup>. For the purposes of the defence of provocation, a defendant is to be judged by the standard of a person having ordinary powers of control, which standard is a constant, objective standard in all cases<sup>4</sup>. The jury must assess the gravity of the provocation to the defendant and must do so by reference to the particular defendant's peculiarities<sup>5</sup>, but the gravity of the provocation to the defendant having been assessed, the standard of self-control by which his conduct is to be evaluated for the purpose of the defence of provocation is the external standard of a person having and exercising ordinary powers of self-control of someone of the defendant's age and sex, and is not to be evaluated by reference to the standard which one could expect of the particular defendant with his particular characteristics<sup>6</sup>. There is no rule of law that the retaliation must be proportionate to the provocation: it is merely a matter to be considered by the jury in determining whether a reasonable man would have acted as the defendant did<sup>7</sup>. Where a person, owing to the taking of alcohol or drugs, makes a mistake of fact, he is entitled, for the purposes of the defence of provocation, to be treated as though the supposed fact was true; hence, if owing to his drunkenness he believed that another was about to make an attack upon him, the jury ought to take that into consideration in determining the issue of provocation<sup>8</sup>.

2 See eg DPP v Camplin [1978] AC 705, 67 Cr App Rep 14, HL.

3 See the Homicide Act 1957 s 3; and PARA 94 ante. At common law the judge might withdraw the issue of provocation from the jury where, upon the evidence, no reasonable jury could find that a reasonable man would have been provoked (see eg Holmes v DPP [1946] AC 588, 31 Cr App Rep 123, HL), but the Homicide Act 1957 s 3 makes it clear that the judge may no longer withdraw the issue on this ground. If there is evidence that the defendant was in part provoked, the issue must be left to be determined by the jury. For instances where the court has considered provocation and its effect on a reasonable man after the Homicide Act 1957 see eg R v Simpson [1957] Crim LR 815 (threats and nagging constituting provocation); R v Fantle [1959] Crim LR 584 (taunts by deceased of having spent the night with defendant's wife constituting provocation); R v Doughty (1986) 83 Cr App Rep 319, CA (baby's continuous crying capable of constituting provocation).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(iii) Manslaughter/B. VOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER/96. Diminished responsibility as defence to murder charge.

96. Diminished responsibility as defence to murder charge.

Where a person kills or is a party to the killing of another, he may not be convicted of murder<sup>1</sup> if he was suffering from such abnormality of mind<sup>2</sup> (whether arising from a condition of arrested or retarded development of mind or any inherent causes or induced by disease or injury<sup>3</sup>) as substantially impaired his mental responsibility<sup>4</sup> for his acts and omissions in doing or being a party to the killing<sup>5</sup>. A person who but for the defence of diminished responsibility would be liable<sup>6</sup> to be convicted of murder is liable instead to be convicted of manslaughter<sup>7</sup>. The fact that one party to a killing is by virtue of such defence not liable to be convicted of murder does not, however, affect the question whether the killing amounted to murder in the case of any other party to it<sup>8</sup>.

The onus is on the defence to prove that by reason of diminished responsibility the defendant is not liable to be convicted of murder<sup>9</sup>, but the burden is not so heavy as the burden of proof on the prosecution and is only that of showing a preponderance of probabilities<sup>10</sup>. As a rule of practice, a plea of guilty of manslaughter on the ground of diminished responsibility should not generally be accepted; the issue of diminished responsibility should be left to the jury<sup>11</sup>. Where such a plea is tendered, however, and the medical evidence plainly shows that the plea can properly be accepted, it is permissible for the court to accept it and thus avoid a trial for murder<sup>12</sup>. Where the defence seeks a verdict of manslaughter on the ground of diminished responsibility and on another ground<sup>13</sup> and the jury returns a verdict of manslaughter, the judge may ask the jury on which ground its verdict is based or whether it was based on both grounds<sup>14</sup>.

1 Diminished responsibility is not a defence to a charge of attempted murder: R v Campbell [1997] Crim LR 495, Crown Ct. The defence arises only where the defendant would otherwise be guilty of murder because the actus reus and mens rea of murder have been proved or admitted: see R v Antoine [2001] AC 340, [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 94, HL. A person accused of murder who is found unfit to plead, and is found to have done the act charged, cannot raise the defence of diminished responsibility: R v Antoine supra.

2 'Abnormality of mind', which has to be contrasted with the expression 'defect of reason' in the defence of insanity (see PARA 31 ante), means a state of mind so different from that of ordinary human beings that the reasonable man would term it abnormal; it appears to be wide enough to cover the mind's activities in all its aspects, not only the perception of physical acts and matters, and the ability to form a rational judgment whether an act is right or wrong, but also the ability to exercise will-power to control physical acts in accordance with that rational judgment: R v Byrne [1960] 2 QB 396 at 403, 44 Cr App Rep 246 at 252, CCA. To establish mental abnormality under the Homicide Act 1957 s 2(1) (see the text and note 5 infra), it is not necessary to show that the defendant's abnormality existed from birth: R v Gomez (1964) 48 Cr App Rep 310, CCA.

3 Abnormality of mind induced by alcohol or drugs is not due to inherent causes: see R v Gittens [1984] QB 698, 79 Cr App Rep 272, CA; R v Fenton (1975) 61 Cr App Rep 261, CA. If, however, the imbibing of alcohol has reached the stage that the defendant's brain has been damaged so that there is gross impairment of judgment and emotional responses, or the defendant's use of alcohol is involuntary because he can no longer resist the impulse to drink, the defence of diminished responsibility is available: see R v Tandy [1989] 1 All ER 267, 87 Cr App Rep 45, CA. See also R v Inseal [1992] Crim LR 35, CA. Where the evidence is that the defendant was suffering from abnormality of mind due to two or more causes, one of which is a specified cause and the other of which is intoxication through drink or drugs, the defendant is not deprived of the defence of diminished responsibility merely because he would not (or might not) have killed if he had not been intoxicated: the question for the members of the jury is whether the defendant satisfied them that, despite the drink, his mental abnormality substantially impaired his mental responsibility for his fatal acts: R v Dietschmann [2003] UKHL 10, [2003] 1 AC 1209, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 54 (approving R v Fenton (1975) 61 Cr App Rep 261, CA; R v Gittens [1984] QB 698, 79 Cr App Rep 272, CA). If the jury is so satisfied, it must find him not guilty of murder but guilty of manslaughter: R v Dietschmann supra. 'Induced by disease or injury' refers to organic or physical injury or disease of the body including the brain, while 'any inherent cause' covers functional mental illness: R v Sanderson (1994) 98 Cr App Rep 325, CA. 'Battered women's syndrome', listed in the British Classification of Mental Diseases in 1994, can give rise to the defence of diminished responsibility: R v Hobson [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 31, CA. Unless an alleged abnormality of the mind can be shown to fall within one of the causes specified in the Homicide Act 1957 s 2(1), the defence of diminished responsibility cannot be sustained: R v King as reported in [1965] 1 QB 443 at 450, CCA.

4 The expression 'mental responsibility for his acts' points to a consideration of the extent to which the defendant's mind is answerable for his physical acts, which must include a consideration of the extent of his ability to exercise will-power to control his physical acts: R v Byrne [1960] 2 QB 396 at 403, 44 Cr App Rep 246 at 252, CCA. Such abnormality as 'substantially impairs his mental responsibility' involves a mental state which in popular language a jury would regard as amounting to partial insanity or being on the borderline of insanity: R v Byrne supra at 404 and at 253. It is not appropriate in every case to direct a jury that the test of diminished responsibility is partial or borderline insanity: see Rose v R [1961] AC 496, 45 Cr App Rep 102, PC (cited in R v Seers (1984) 79 Cr App Rep 261, CA (a case of chronic reactive depression)). It is not appropriate where the abnormality relied on cannot readily be related to any of the generally recognised types of insanity, as, for example, where the defendant pleads diminished responsibility occasioned by a depressive illness: Rose v R supra; R v Seers supra. Moreover, even where it is appropriate for a judge to invite a jury to take into consideration borderline insanity, he should make it plain that he is not using the word 'insanity' in the narrow legal sense of the M'Naghten Rules but in 'its broad popular sense': Rose v R supra.

As to the meaning of 'substantially' see R v Lloyd [1967] 1 QB 175, 50 Cr App Rep 61, CCA ('substantial' means that the impairment of the defendant's mental responsibility need not be 'total' but must be more than 'trivial' or 'minimal': 'substantial' means something in between). The difficulty which the defendant had in controlling his conduct must have been substantially greater than would have been experienced by an ordinary person, without mental abnormality, in the circumstances in question: R v Simcox [1964] Crim LR 402, CCA.

5 Homicide Act 1957 s 2(1). Where on a trial for murder the defendant contends either that at the time of the alleged offence he was insane so as not to be responsible according to law for his actions (Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 s 6(a)), or that at that time he was suffering from such abnormality of the mind as is specified in the Homicide Act 1957 s 2(1) (Criminal Procedure (Insanity) Act 1964 s 6(b)), the court must allow the prosecution to adduce or elicit evidence tending to prove the other of those contentions, and may give directions as to the stage of the proceedings at which the prosecution may adduce such evidence (s 6). In such a case the prosecution must prove the elements of the defence beyond reasonable doubt: R v Grant [1960] Crim LR 424. If, however, the defendant does not raise insanity or diminished responsibility, and in no way suggests any abnormality of mind, the prosecution may not introduce evidence tending to establish insanity or diminished responsibility: see R v Dixon [1961] 3 All ER 460n, [1961] 1 WLR 337. As to whether the judge may raise the issue of diminished responsibility see R v Kookan (1981) 74 Cr App Rep 30, CA; R v Campbell (1986) 84 Cr App Rep 255, CA.

Where the medical evidence of diminished responsibility is based on certain facts, it is for the defence to prove those facts by admissible evidence: R v Ahmed Din [1962] 2 All ER 123, 46 Cr App Rep 269, CCA.

NOTE 3--In the case of alcohol dependency syndrome, the question is ultimately whether the defendant's mental responsibility for his actions when killing the deceased was substantially impaired as a result of the alcohol consumed under the influence of the syndrome: R v Wood [2008] EWCA Crim 1305, [2008] All ER (D) 272 (Jun). ## 97. Diminished responsibility; functions of judge and jury.

In his summing up the judge must give to the jury a proper explanation of the terms contained in the statutory provisions concerned with diminished responsibility<sup>1</sup>.

Whether or not the defendant was suffering from an abnormality of the mind at the time of the killing is for the jury to decide<sup>2</sup> and while the medical evidence is important, the jury is not bound to accept it if other evidence is adduced which conflicts with or outweighs it<sup>3</sup>. The question whether the defendant's abnormality of mind was sufficiently substantial to impair his mental responsibility is a question of degree; and it should also be decided by the jury<sup>4</sup>. However, the aetiology<sup>5</sup> of the abnormality of the mind is a matter to be determined on medical evidence<sup>6</sup>.

The judge should review the evidence in detail for the jury<sup>7</sup>. When directing the jury on burden of proof, the judge must point out that the burden on the defence of establishing diminished responsibility is not so great as the burden on the prosecution<sup>8</sup>. Comment by the judge on the failure of the defendant to give evidence in such cases is only rarely proper<sup>9</sup>.

2 R v Dunbar [1958] 1 QB 1 at 9, 41 Cr App Rep 182 at 186, CCA, per Lord Goddard CJ; R v Spriggs [1958] 1 QB 270, 42 Cr App Rep 69, CCA. The jury should approach this task in a broad common sense way: Walton v R [1978] AC 788, 66 Cr App Rep 25, PC.

3 The jury is entitled to consider all the evidence including the acts and statements of the defendant and his demeanour: R v Byrne [1960] 2 QB 396 at 403, 44 Cr App Rep 246 at 253, CCA. The decision on the issue of diminished responsibility is entrusted to the jury, after proper direction, most obviously when there is a conflict of medical evidence: R v Jennion [1962] 1 All ER 689, 46 Cr App Rep 212, CCA. The jury may return a verdict contrary to the medical evidence if the verdict is otherwise supportable: R v Latham [1965] Crim LR 434, CCA; Walton v R [1978] AC 788, 66 Cr App Rep 25, PC; R v Kiszko (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 62, CA; R v Sanders (1991) 93 Cr App Rep 245, CA. Where, however, a verdict of murder entirely lacks support from the evidence adduced it will be reversed on appeal, and a verdict of manslaughter will be substituted for one of murder: R v Matheson [1958] 2 All ER 87, 42 Cr App Rep 145, CCA; R v Bailey (1961) reported in (1977) 66 Cr App Rep 31n, CCA. The principle that mental responsibility is a matter for the jury is the same whether the defence pleads insanity or diminished responsibility: R v Jennion supra at 692 and 217. As to the issue of insanity being left to the jury see PARA 31 ante.

4 R v Byrne [1960] 2 QB 396 at 402-403, 44 Cr App Rep 246 at 253, CCA. For the direction to be given where abnormality resulted from a combination of alcohol or drugs and inherent causes see R v Dietschmann [2003] UKHL 10, [2003] 1 AC 1209, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 54. As to alcoholism see PARA 96 ante.

5 Ie whether the abnormality arose from a condition of arrested or retarded development of mind or any inherent causes, or was induced by disease or injury: cf para 96 note 3 ante.

6 R v Byrne [1960] 2 QB 396 at 403, 44 Cr App Rep 246 at 253, CCA.

7 R v Terry [1961] 2 QB 314, 45 Cr App Rep 180, CCA; R v Gomez (1964) 48 Cr App Rep 310, CCA. It is bad practice, and normally constitutes an inadequate direction, for the judge merely to hand transcripts of the medical evidence to the jury: R v Terry supra.

8 R v Dunbar [1958] 1 QB 1, 41 Cr App Rep 182, CCA.

9 R v Bathurst [1968] 2 QB 99, 52 Cr App Rep 251, CA. For examples of cases where it would be proper to comment see R v Bathurst supra and R v Bradshaw (1985) 82 Cr App Rep 79, CA (situations where it would be reasonable to expect the defendant to give evidence). Where comment is proper, it may take the form that the defendant is not bound to give evidence, but that the burden is on him and if he does not give evidence he runs the risk of not being able to prove his case. It is submitted that these propositions remain true despite the subsequent enactment of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35 (drawing inferences from failure of accused to give evidence: see PARA 1555 post).

97 Diminished responsibility; functions of judge and jury

NOTE 2--Where the evidence is such that no reasonable jury, properly directed, could conclude that the defendant had failed to prove on a balance of probabilities that the defendant had suffered from an abnormality of mind and that that abnormality of mind substantially impaired the defendant's mental responsibility for his acts, the judge is permitted to withdraw the charge of murder from the jury: R v Khan [2009] EWCA Crim 1569, [2010] 1 Cr App Rep 74, [2009] All ER (D) 288 (Jul).

98. Suicide pacts.

Suicide, which was self-murder at common law, is no longer an offence<sup>1</sup>. However, where a person, acting in pursuance of a suicide pact between himself and another, kills the other or is a party to the other being killed by a third party, he is guilty of manslaughter<sup>2</sup>. For these purposes, 'suicide pact' means a common agreement between two or more persons having for its object the death of all of them, whether or not each is to take his own life, but nothing done by a person who enters into a suicide pact is to be treated as done by him in pursuance of the pact unless it is done while he has the settled intention of dying in pursuance of the pact<sup>3</sup>. Where it is shown that a person charged with the murder of another killed the other or was a party to his being killed, it is for the defence to prove<sup>4</sup> that the person charged was acting in pursuance of a suicide pact between him and the other<sup>5</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(iii) Manslaughter/C. INVOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER/99. Killing by unlawful and dangerous act: constructive manslaughter.

C. INVOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER

99. Killing by unlawful and dangerous act: constructive manslaughter.

Where death is caused<sup>1</sup> by an unlawful act, the person doing that act is guilty of manslaughter if it is dangerous in the sense that any reasonable person would inevitably recognise that the act would expose some other person<sup>2</sup> to the risk of at least some harm<sup>3</sup>. This type of manslaughter is often described as 'constructive manslaughter'. The objective test mentioned above is applied on the basis of the facts known to the defendant at the time of his unlawful act<sup>4</sup>. Where the victim is killed by one or other of two different acts of the defendant, each of which if it caused the death is sufficient to establish manslaughter, it is not necessary to prove which act caused the death provided that the defendant had the necessary mental element at the time of each of those acts<sup>5</sup>.

To be an unlawful act, the act must constitute a criminal offence<sup>6</sup>; an unlawful act does not include an act which is tortious but not criminal<sup>7</sup>, nor does it include an act which becomes unlawful merely because of the negligent manner in which it is performed. Thus a person who causes the death of another while committing the offence of careless or inconsiderate driving<sup>8</sup> is not necessarily<sup>9</sup> guilty of manslaughter<sup>10</sup>. It would also seem that a distinction is to be drawn between omissions and acts of commission; only an unlawful and dangerous act of commission resulting in death suffices for constructive manslaughter<sup>11</sup>.

Although it need not be proved that the defendant himself intended, or even foresaw, harm to another, the requirement of an unlawful act will ordinarily require proof that he had the requisite mens rea to render the act unlawful<sup>12</sup>. Thus where, for example, the unlawful act alleged is an assault, a verdict of manslaughter cannot be supported unless it is shown that the defendant had the mens rea for an assault<sup>13</sup>.

Where a person accidentally kills another while playing a lawful game, the killing is not manslaughter<sup>14</sup>. A contestant who causes the death of his opponent in wrestling or boxing is not guilty of manslaughter if the death results from conduct ordinarily incident to the sport<sup>15</sup>; but prize-fighting<sup>16</sup> is by its nature illegal and, if death results, the survivor is guilty of manslaughter while those who are present encouraging the fight are guilty of manslaughter as abettors<sup>17</sup>. If two persons fight a duel and one is killed, the survivor is guilty of murder or manslaughter according to his mens rea, while the seconds and other persons giving encouragement are liable as abettors<sup>18</sup>.

It would appear that to cause death by an unlawful abortion would amount at least to manslaughter<sup>19</sup>.

1 It is an essential element that the unlawful and dangerous act must have caused the death: R v Inner South London Coroner, ex p Douglas-Williams [1999] 1 All ER 344 at 350, CA, per Lord Woolf MR; R v Carey [2006] EWCA Crim 17, [2006] All ER (D) 189 (Jan). As to causation see PARA 7 ante.

2 The objective risk of harm need not be of harm to the victim; it suffices that that risk is of harm to another, and this is so even if the victim was outside any category of persons whom a reasonable person might consider potentially at risk: A-G's Reference (No 3 of 1994) [1998] AC 245, [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 1, HL. The cases cited in note 3 infra spoke in terms of an objective risk of harm to the victim and must be understood in light of this case.

For the purposes of the definition of 'dangerousness', 'harm' means physical harm; the reasonably foreseeable risk of emotional disturbance produced by terror is not enough; but the reasonably foreseeable risk of physical harm from emotional disturbance is: R v Dawson, R v Nolan, R v Walmsley (1985) 81 Cr App Rep 150, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(iii) Manslaughter/C. INVOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER/100. Killing by gross negligence.

100. Killing by gross negligence.

A person is guilty of manslaughter if he is under a duty of care towards the victim, he does or fails<sup>1</sup> to do something in breach of that duty, the breach of duty causes the death of the victim<sup>2</sup>, and the breach of duty constitutes gross negligence<sup>3</sup>. Although the 'ordinary principles of the law of negligence' apply to ascertain whether there has been a breach of the duty of care towards the victim<sup>4</sup>, this does not mean that outside the 'ordinary' case of negligence the duty of care in manslaughter automatically corresponds with that in tort where different policy considerations apply<sup>5</sup>. For gross negligence to be established the defendant's conduct must in the circumstances have been such that a reasonably prudent person would have foreseen a serious and obvious risk of death<sup>6</sup> and in respect of that risk his conduct in all the circumstances in which he was placed must have fallen so far below the standard to be expected of a reasonable person as to go beyond a mere matter of compensation to amount to a criminal act or omission<sup>7</sup>. Thus a higher degree of negligence is necessary to render a person guilty of manslaughter than to establish civil liability against him<sup>8</sup>; mere carelessness is not enough<sup>9</sup>. Negligence sufficient to support a conviction for a criminal offence such as dangerous driving or careless driving<sup>10</sup> will not necessarily support a conviction for manslaughter<sup>11</sup>.

The death must have been caused by personal misconduct or personal negligence on the part of the defendant<sup>12</sup>. The defendant is not vicariously criminally liable if the death was directly caused in his absence by the negligence of his employees or others<sup>13</sup>.

1 For authority that an omission in breach of duty can suffice see R v Markus (1864) 4 F & F 356 (doctor leaving seriously ill patient unattended); R v Curtis (1885) 15 Cox CC 746 (relieving officer of local authority failing to provide medical assistance for destitute person). As to whether a person who has supplied a controlled drug to another owes a duty of care when the other, having consumed the drugs, becomes in need of medical treatment in his presence, contrast R v Khan [1998] Crim LR 830, CA, with R v Sinclair [1998] NLJR 1353, CA.

2 It is an essential ingredient that the breach of duty must have caused the death: R v Inner South London Coroner, ex p Douglas-Williams [1999] 1 All ER 344 at 350, CA, per Lord Woolf MR.

3 R v Adomako [1995] 1 AC 171, 99 Cr App Rep 362, HL (applying R v Bateman (1925) 19 Cr App Rep 8, CCA, and Andrews v DPP [1937] AC 576, 26 Cr App Rep 34, HL; and overruling R v Seymour [1983] 2 AC 493, 77 Cr App Rep 215, HL). The ingredients of the offence of manslaughter by gross negligence are sufficiently clear and do not offend against the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 7 (requirement of certainty): see R v Misra, R v Srivastava [2004] EWCA Crim 2375, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 328. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq. Manslaughter by gross negligence or by an unlawful and dangerous act are not mutually exclusive; in some circumstances a person can be guilty by both routes: R v Willoughby [2004] EWCA Crim 3365, [2005] 1 WLR 1880, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 495.

4 R v Adomako [1995] 1 AC 171 at 187, 99 Cr App Rep 362 at 369, HL, per Lord Mackay of Clashfern. Under those principles, a duty of care exists where it is foreseeable that negligence on the part of the defendant will imperil another person who is in a relationship of sufficient 'proximity' with the defendant and it is 'just and reasonable' to impose liability: see eg Marc Rich & Co AG v Bishop Rock Marine Co Ltd, The Nicholas H [1996] AC 211, [1995] 3 All ER 307, HL.

5 R v Wacker [2002] EWCA Crim 1944, [2003] QB 1207, [2003] 4 All ER 295 (tortious ex turpi causa rules whereby a duty of care between participants in a criminal activity is not recognised held inapplicable in respect of existence of duty of care in manslaughter).

As to whether the existence of the duty of care is a question of law for the judge, or whether the judge's task is simply to rule whether there was evidence capable of giving rise to a duty of care, leaving it to the jury to decide in the light of the judge's direction whether it actually did arise, contrast R v Singh [1999] Crim LR 582, CA, with R v Khan [1998] Crim LR 830, CA, and R v Sinclair [1998] NLJR 1353, CA. See also R v Willoughby [2004] EWCA Crim 3365, [2005] 2 WLR 1558, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 495 (the latter approach was adopted; however, it was held that there might be exceptional cases where a duty of care obviously existed, eg that between a doctor and patient or where Parliament had imposed a particular type of statutory duty, and that in such cases a judge could properly direct the jury that a duty existed).

7 R v Bateman (1925) 94 LJB 791, 19 Cr App Rep 8, CCA; Akerele v R [1943] AC 255, [1943] 1 All ER 367, PC; R v Adomako [1995] 1 AC 171, 99 Cr App Rep 362, HL; R v Misra, R v Srivastava [2004] EWCA Crim 2375, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 328. Although evidence of the defendant's state of mind is not a pre-requisite to liability for manslaughter by gross negligence, there may be cases where his state of mind is relevant to the issue of the criminality of his conduct: A-G's Reference (No 2 of 1999) [2000] QB 796, [2000] 2 Cr App Rep 207, CA. See also R v DPP, ex p Jones [2000] IRLR 373, DC. Whether negligence is to be regarded as of such a nature is a question for the jury, after it has been properly directed by the judge as to the standard to be applied, and depends on the facts of the particular case: R v Bateman supra at 796 and 13; Akerele v R supra at 262 and 371. If, on a trial for murder, a verdict of manslaughter by negligence is as a matter of law a possible verdict in view of the facts of the case, the judge should direct the jury that such a verdict is open to it: R v Roberts [1942] 1 All ER 187, 28 Cr App Rep 102, CCA. The number of persons affected by a single act of negligence does not affect the degree of negligence: Akerele v R [1943] AC 255 at 264, [1943] 1 All ER 367 at 372, PC. See also Brown v R [2005] UKPC 18, [2006] 1 AC 1, [2005] 2 WLR 1558 (a case involving causing death by reckless driving).

8 R v Bateman (1925) 94 LJB 791 at 796, 19 Cr App Rep 8 at 13, CCA (where the difference was described as a difference in kind); Akerele v R [1943] AC 255 at 262, [1943] 1 All ER 367 at 371, PC; The People (A-G) v Dunleavy [1948] IR 95, CCA; R v Misra, R v Srivastava [2004] EWCA Crim 2375, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 328.

9 R v Large [1939] 1 All ER 753, 27 Cr App Rep 65, CCA; R v Bateman (1925) 94 LJB 791 at 794, 19 Cr App Rep 8 at 11-12, CCA, per Hewart LC; Andrews v DPP [1937] AC 576 at 582-583, 26 Cr App Rep 34 at 46-48, HL; Akerele v R [1943] AC 255 at 262, [1943] 1 All ER 367 at 371, PC; and see also R v Bonnyman (1942) 28 Cr App Rep 131, CCA.

10 As to these offences see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 963 et seq.

11 See PARA 99 text to notes 8-10 ante.

12 A corporation may be personally liable for manslaughter see PARA 38 ante.

13 R v Bennett (1858) Bell CC 1, CCR (the defendant had unlawfully kept in his house a quantity of fireworks, which through the negligence of his employees, were set on fire, and thus caused the death of the deceased; it was held that the defendant could not be convicted of manslaughter).

NOTE 12--The common law offence of manslaughter by gross negligence is abolished in its application to corporations, and in any application it has to other organisations to which the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 1 applies: s 20. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(1) HOMICIDE/(iii) Manslaughter/C. INVOLUNTARY MANSLAUGHTER/101. Killing with recklessness as to serious injury.

101. Killing with recklessness as to serious injury.

A person is guilty of manslaughter if he unlawfully causes the death of another and is reckless as to the risk that he might cause serious injury<sup>1</sup>. In this context 'recklessness' requires foresight of the high probability of serious injury<sup>2</sup>.

1 R v Lidar [2000] 4 Archbold News 3, CA. A fortiori, recklessness as to the risk of death would suffice since serious injury must include death. Unlawful violence on an individual with a fragile and vulnerable personality, which is proved to be a material cause of death (even if the result of suicide) (see PARA 149 post) would at least arguably be capable of amounting to manslaughter: see R v Dhalwal [2006] EWCA Crim 1139, [2006] All ER (D) 236 (May).

103. Infanticide.

Where a woman by any wilful act or omission causes<sup>1</sup> the death of her child under the age of 12 months, but at the time of the act or omission the balance of her mind was disturbed by reason of her not having fully recovered from the effect of giving birth to the child or by reason of the effect of lactation consequent upon the birth of the child, then, notwithstanding that the circumstances were such that the offence would have amounted to murder<sup>2</sup>, she is guilty of infanticide and may be punished as if she had been guilty of the manslaughter of the child<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to causation see PARA 7 ante.

2 Ie but for the Infanticide Act 1938.

3 Ibid s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a). For a restriction on prosecution see PARA 85 ante. As to the penalty for manslaughter see PARA 93 ante. On an indictment for infanticide, the mother may be convicted of child destruction: see the Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 s 2(2); and PARAS 108, 1336 post. On a trial for murder the jury may in the circumstances referred to in the text return a verdict of infanticide: Infanticide Act 1938 s 1(2).

Nothing in the Infanticide Act 1938 affects the power of a jury upon an indictment for the murder of a child to return a verdict of manslaughter or a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity: s 1(3) (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 10(2), Sch 3 Pt III). As to alternative verdicts generally see PARAS 1335-1338 post; and as to procedural provisions relating to infanticide see PARA 1164 post.

Custodial sentences are most rare; offenders are usually dealt with by way of a community sentence (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 163 et seq) or a hospital order (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 332): R v Sainsbury (1989) 11 Cr App Rep (S) 533, CA.

(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE

(i) Offences Ancillary to Murder

104. Soliciting murder.

Any person who solicits, encourages, persuades or endeavours to persuade, or proposes to<sup>1</sup> any person to murder<sup>2</sup> any other person<sup>3</sup>, whether he is a subject of Her Majesty or not and whether he is within the jurisdiction or not, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life<sup>4</sup>.

An article or letter in a newspaper may amount to an incitement to murder, although no particular person is named, so long as the proposed victims belong to a definable class<sup>5</sup>. The communication containing the incitement must be proved to have reached the person intended to be incited, although it is not necessary to show that the latter's mind was affected by it<sup>6</sup>. If the communication cannot be proved to have reached him, the defendant may be convicted of an attempt to incite<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the common law offence of incitement see PARA 65 ante; and as to the statutory offence of conspiracy see PARA 67 ante. The offence of soliciting murder under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 4 (see the text and notes 2-4 infra) is based on the same principles as the common law offence of incitement. It is, however, wider in that it applies to an incitement of someone who is not a subject of Her Majesty to commit murder outside the jurisdiction, which under the normal rules of jurisdiction (see PARA 1050 et seq post) would not be the case for common law incitement.

2 A solicitation to kill not merely to do serious bodily harm must be proved: R v Bainbridge (1991) 93 Cr App Rep 32, [1991] Crim LR 535, CA. Because what is solicited must be murder, it is not an offence to solicit someone to kill in self-defence or defence of others: see R v El-Faisal [2004] EWCA Crim 456, [2004] 3 Archbold News 3.

3 Soliciting another to murder at birth a child then in the womb but subsequently born alive is soliciting to murder 'a person': R v Shephard [1919] 2 KB 125, 14 Cr App Rep 26, CCA (solicitation of pregnant woman to murder infant after birth).

104 Soliciting murder

NOTE 1--An offence under the 1861 Act s 4 may be committed in respect of soliciting murder outside the jurisdiction where the person solicited is not a British national: R v Hamza [2006] EWCA Crim 2918, [2007] 3 All ER 451.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(i) Offences Ancillary to Murder/105. Threatening to kill.

105. Threatening to kill.

Any person who without lawful excuse<sup>1</sup> makes to another a threat<sup>2</sup>, intending that that other would fear it would be carried out<sup>3</sup>, to kill that other or a third person<sup>4</sup> is guilty of an offence<sup>5</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>6</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>7</sup>, or to both<sup>8</sup>.

1 Self-defence or the prevention of crime may constitute a lawful excuse provided that it was reasonable in the circumstances to make such a threat; and it is for the prosecution to prove the absence of lawful excuse and for the jury to decide what was reasonable: see R v Cousins [1982] QB 526, 74 Cr App Rep 363, CA. Lawful excuse does not depend on whether the life of the defendant was in immediate jeopardy when he made the threat: R v Cousins supra. The reasonableness of the defendant's belief that he had lawful excuse is judged on the facts as he believed them to be: see R v Williams [1987] 3 All ER 411, 78 Cr App Rep 276, CA; Beckford v R [1988] AC 130, 85 Cr App Rep 378, PC; and PARA 18 ante.

2 The threat may be conditional and it may be implied as well as express: R v Solanke [1969] 3 All ER 1383, [1970] 1 WLR 1, CA. It would seem that the threat may be made by any means: see eg R v Williams (1986) 84 Cr App Rep 299, CA (threatening telephone calls). Whether a communication amounts to a threat to kill is a matter for the jury: R v Boucher (1831) 4 C & P 562, R v Tyler (1835) 1 Mood CC 428. As to threatening letters see also the Malicious Communications Act 1988 s 1 (as amended); and PARA 767 post.

4 Where a person threatens a pregnant woman with the words 'I am going to kill your baby' and the threat is to the foetus in utero, no offence under these provisions is made out since the foetus is not another person distinct from its mother: R v Tait [1990] 1 QB 290, [1989] 3 All ER 682, CA. Where, however, the threat is to kill the child after its birth, it seems that such an offence may be made out: R v Tait supra (obiter); and see PARA 104 note 3 ante.

5 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 16 (substituted by the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 65(4), Sch 12). This offence is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post.

6 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

7 As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

8 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 16 (as substituted: see note 5 supra); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 5(a).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(ii) Complicity in Suicide/106. Aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring suicide or attempted suicide.

(ii) Complicity in Suicide

106. Aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring suicide or attempted suicide.

Although suicide is no longer an offence in itself<sup>1</sup>, any person who aids, abets, counsels or procures<sup>2</sup> the suicide<sup>3</sup> of another, or an attempt by another to commit suicide, is guilty of an offence<sup>4</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>5</sup>. No proceedings for this offence may be instituted except by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>4</sup> Suicide Act 1961 s 2(1). The fact that the person counselled would have tried to commit suicide anyway makes no difference to a charge under s 2(1): A-G v Able [1984] QB 795 at 812, 78 Cr App Rep 197 at 208, DC, per Woolf J.

If on the trial of an indictment for murder or manslaughter it is proved that the defendant aided, abetted, counselled or procured the suicide of the person in question, the jury may find him guilty of that offence: Suicide Act 1961 s 2(2). As to procedural provisions relating to prosecutions for aiding etc the suicide of a child or young person see PARA 1164 post. For a restriction on prosecution see PARA 85 ante.

In R v McShane (1977) 66 Cr App Rep 97, CA, a conviction for an attempt to commit an offence under the Suicide Act 1961 s 2(1) was upheld. A refusal by the Director of Public Prosecutions to give an undertaking not to consent to prosecution for an offence under s 2(1) where the offence has not yet been committed does not breach the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 2 (right to life), art 3 (prohibition of inhuman or degrading treatment), art 8 (right to respect for private and family life), art 9 (freedom of thought, conscience and religion) or art 14 (enjoyment of Convention rights without discrimination): R (on the application of Pretty) v DPP (Secretary of State for the Home Department intervening) [2001] UKHL 61, [2002] 1 AC 800, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 1; Pretty v United Kingdom (2002) 35 EHRR 1, 12 BHRC 149, ECtHR. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid s 2(4) (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 10(2), Sch 3 Pt II; and the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 s 14(5), Sch 6 Pt I). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(iii) Causing or Allowing Death of a Child or Mentally Vulnerable Adult/107. Causing or allowing death of a child or mentally vulnerable adult.

(iii) Causing or Allowing Death of a Child or Mentally Vulnerable Adult

107. Causing or allowing death of a child or mentally vulnerable adult.

If a child<sup>1</sup> or vulnerable adult<sup>2</sup> dies as a result of the unlawful act<sup>3</sup> of a person who was a member of the same household as him<sup>4</sup> and had frequent contact with him<sup>5</sup>, and at that time there was a significant risk of serious physical harm<sup>6</sup> being caused to the child or vulnerable adult by the unlawful act of such a person<sup>7</sup>, then any person who at the time of the act was a member of the same household as the child or vulnerable adult and had frequent contact with him<sup>8</sup> is guilty of an offence<sup>9</sup> if<sup>10</sup>:

- 41 (1) he was the person whose act caused the death<sup>11</sup>; or
- 42 (2) he was, or ought to have been, aware of the risk of serious physical harm being caused to the child or vulnerable adult by his unlawful act<sup>12</sup>, he failed to take such steps as he could reasonably have been expected to take to protect the child or vulnerable adult from the risk<sup>13</sup>, and the act occurred in circumstances of the kind that he foresaw or ought to have foreseen<sup>14</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years, to a fine, or to both<sup>15</sup>.

1 le a person under the age of 16: Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 5(6).

2 le a person aged 16 or over whose ability to protect himself from violence, abuse or neglect is significantly impaired through physical or mental disability or illness, through old age or otherwise: ibid s 5(6).

3 For these purposes, 'act' includes a course of conduct and also includes omission (ibid s 5(6)); and an 'unlawful' act is one that either constitutes an offence (s 5(5)(a)) or would constitute an offence but for being the act of a person under the age of ten (s 5(5)(b)(i)) or of a person who is entitled to rely on a defence of insanity (s 5(5)(b)(ii)). An act which would constitute an offence but for being the act of a person under the age of ten or of a person who is entitled to rely on a defence of insanity is not an unlawful act for these purposes if it is an act of the person who commits the offence under these provisions: s 5(5).

The reference in s 5(1)(a) to an unlawful act does not include an act that (or so much of an act as) occurs before 21 March 2005: s 59, Sch 12 para 2.

4 Ibid s 5(1)(a)(i). For these purposes, a person is to be regarded as a 'member' of a particular household, even if he does not live in that household, if he visits it so often and for such periods of time that it is reasonable to regard him as a member of it: s 5(4)(a). Where the child or vulnerable adult lived in different households at different times, 'the same household as him' refers to the household in which the child or vulnerable adult was living at the time of the act that caused his death: see s 5(4)(b).

5 Ibid s 5(1)(a)(ii).

6 'Serious' harm means harm that amounts to grievous bodily harm for the purposes of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 (see PARA 118 ante): Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 5(6).

7 Ibid s 5(1)(c).

8 Ibid s 5(1)(b).

9 A person who is not the mother or father of the child or vulnerable adult may not be charged with an offence under these provisions if he was under 16 at the time of the act that caused the child or vulnerable adult's death: ibid s 5(3)(a).

Where a person ('the defendant') is charged in the same proceedings with an offence of murder or manslaughter and an offence under s 5 in respect of the same death ('the s 5 offence'):

- 21 (1) the charge of murder or manslaughter is not to be dismissed under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 Sch 3 para 2 (as amended) (see PARA 1138 post) unless the s 5 offence is dismissed (Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 6(1), (3));
- 22 (2) at the defendant's trial the question whether there is a case for the defendant to answer on the charge of murder or manslaughter is not to be considered before the close of all the evidence (or, if at some earlier time he ceases to be charged with the s 5 offence, before that earlier time) (s 6(4)); and
- 23 (3) where by virtue of the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 35(3) (see PARA 1555 post) a court or jury is permitted, in relation to the s 5 offence, to draw such inferences as appear proper from the defendant's failure to give evidence or refusal to answer a question, the court or jury may also draw such inferences in determining whether he is guilty of murder or manslaughter (Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 6(2)(a)) or of any other offence of which he could lawfully be convicted on the charge of murder or manslaughter (s 6(2)(b)) even if there would otherwise be no case for him to answer in relation to that offence (s 6(2)).

An offence under s 5 is an offence of homicide for the purposes of: the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 24, 25 (both as amended) (mode of trial of child or young person for indictable offence: see PARAS 1116-1119 post); the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 51A (as added) (sending cases to the Crown Court: children and young persons: see PARA 1133 post); and the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 8 (power and duty to remit young offenders to youth courts for sentence: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 5): Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 6(5)(a)-(c).

10 The prosecution does not have to prove whether it is the first alternative in ibid s 5(1)(d) (see head (1) in the text) or one of the others (see heads (2)-(4) in the text) that applies: s 5(2).

11 Ibid s 5(1)(d).

12 Ibid s 5(1)(d)(i).

13 Ibid s 5(1)(d)(ii). A person who is not the mother or father of the child or vulnerable adult cannot have been expected to take any such step as is referred to in the text before attaining the age of 16: s 5(3)(b).

14 Ibid s 5(1)(d)(iii).

15 Ibid s 5(7).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(iv) Child Destruction, Abortion and Concealment of Birth/108. Child destruction.

(iv) Child Destruction, Abortion and Concealment of Birth

108. Child destruction.

Any person who, with intent to destroy the life of a child capable of being born alive<sup>1</sup>, by any wilful act<sup>2</sup> causes a child to die before it has an existence independent of its mother, is guilty of child destruction<sup>3</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>4</sup>. No person may, however, be found guilty of such an offence unless it is proved that the act which caused the death of the child was not done in good faith for the purpose only of preserving the life of the mother<sup>5</sup>.

1 For these purposes, evidence that a woman had at any material time been pregnant for a period of 28 weeks or more is prima facie proof that she was at that time pregnant of a child capable of being born alive: Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 s 1(2). Once a foetus is capable, if born, of breathing and living by reason of its breathing through its own lungs alone without connection with its mother, it is 'capable of being born alive': Rance v Mid-Downs Health Authority [1991] 1 QB 587, [1991] 1 All ER 801 (27-week foetus capable of being born alive). See also C v S [1988] QB 135, [1987] 1 All ER 1230, CA (foetus of gestational age between 18 and 21 weeks incapable of being born alive).

2 It is presumed that an act of omission would not suffice to support the charge: cf R v Shepherd (1862) Le & Ca 147, CCR (mother of pregnant woman under no duty to get midwife).

3 Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a). Where on the trial of any person for child destruction the jury is of opinion that the person charged is not guilty of that offence but that he is shown by the evidence to be guilty of an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 58 (as amended) (using means to procure an abortion: see PARA 109 post), the jury may find him guilty of that offence: Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 s 2(3).

4 Ibid s 1(1); Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1).

5 Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 s 1(1) proviso. The words 'preserving the life of the mother' have been widely construed by judges when directing juries: see R v Bourne [1939] 1 KB 687 at 692-694, [1938] 3 All ER 615 at 618-619, CCA, per Macnaghten J; R v Newton and Stungo [1958] Crim LR 469 at 469 per Ashworth J (both cases on abortion: see PARA 109 post). No offence under the Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 is committed by a registered medical practitioner who terminates a pregnancy in accordance with the Abortion Act 1967 (see PARA 112 post; and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 209): s 5(1) (substituted by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 s 37(4)).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(iv) Child Destruction, Abortion and Concealment of Birth/109. Use of poison or instruments to cause miscarriage.

109. Use of poison or instruments to cause miscarriage.

Any woman, being with child, who, with intent to procure her own miscarriage, unlawfully<sup>1</sup> administers to herself any poison or other noxious thing<sup>2</sup>, or unlawfully uses any instrument or other means whatsoever with the like intent, and any person who, with intent to procure the miscarriage of any woman, whether or not she is with child, unlawfully administers to her or causes to be taken by her any poison or other noxious thing, or unlawfully uses any instrument or other means<sup>3</sup> whatsoever with the like intent, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>4</sup>. This offence is commonly but inaccurately (because no miscarriage need be procured) described as the offence of abortion.

1 Not all abortions are unlawful: see PARA 112 post; and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 209. For the purposes of the law relating to abortion (ie the Offences against the Person Act 1861 ss 58, 59 (as amended) (see PARA 111 post), and any rule of law relating to the procurement of abortion), anything done with intent to procure a miscarriage (or, in the case of a woman carrying more than one foetus, the miscarriage of any foetus) is unlawfully done unless authorised by the Abortion Act 1967 s 1: see ss 5(2), 6 (s 5(2) amended by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 s 37(5)). See also PARA 112 post; and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 209.

Where death results from a criminal abortion, this constitutes manslaughter at least: see PARA 99 ante. As to the constituents of unlawfully procuring an abortion see PARA 110 post.

2 As to poisons and other noxious things for these purposes see PARA 110 post.

3 As to the meaning 'other means' see PARA 110 post.

4 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 58; Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5) (a). On a trial for this offence, the jury may acquit of this offence and convict of child destruction (see PARA 108 ante): Infant Life (Preservation) Act 1929 s 2(2).

109 Use of poison or instruments to cause miscarriage

NOTE 4--See R v Magira [2008] EWCA Crim 1939, [2009] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 390, [2008] All ER (D) 29 (Nov) (three-and-a-half years' imprisonment imposed where person surreptitiously fed a woman abortion pills).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(iv) Child Destruction, Abortion and Concealment of Birth/110. Constituents of offence of use of poison or instruments to cause a miscarriage.

110. Constituents of offence of use of poison or instruments to cause a miscarriage.

The offence of using poison or instruments to cause a miscarriage<sup>1</sup> is concerned with the administration of a poison or other noxious thing or the use of an instrument or other means, with intent to procure a miscarriage. 'Poison' means a recognised poison; if a recognised poison is administered it is irrelevant that the quantity is so small as to be incapable of doing harm<sup>2</sup>. 'Noxious thing' means something other than a recognised poison, which is harmful in the dosage in which it is administered, even though it may be harmless in small quantities<sup>3</sup>. 'Any other means' includes manual interference and hitting a woman in the lower part of her body<sup>4</sup>. It is irrelevant that, unknown to the defendant, that thing or means in question is incapable of procuring a miscarriage<sup>5</sup>. Where the thing administered is mistakenly believed to be a poison or noxious thing, the defendant may be convicted of attempting to commit the offence<sup>6</sup>.

If a person procures poison for a woman with intent to procure her miscarriage, to which intent she is a party, and she takes it, although in his absence, he may be convicted of causing it to be taken by the woman, and not merely of procuring it with that intent<sup>7</sup>.

A woman cannot be convicted of administering poison to herself with intent to procure her own miscarriage unless she is in fact with child; but even if she is not pregnant, she may be convicted of attempt to commit the offence or of conspiracy to commit it<sup>8</sup>, or of aiding and abetting others in administering poison or some noxious thing to her with intent to procure her miscarriage<sup>9</sup>.

For the purposes of the requirement of an intent to procure a miscarriage, 'miscarriage' is construed as presupposing that the fertilised ovum has become implanted in the endometrium of the uterus; it follows that the use of a drug or device to prevent implantation of a fertilised ovum is not done with intent to procure a miscarriage<sup>10</sup>.

To prove the intent with which the noxious thing was administered or the instrument or other means used, evidence showing that the defendant had on previous occasions used similar means with the avowed intention of procuring an abortion, or that he or she had previously admitted having often done the same thing, is admissible<sup>11</sup>.

On a charge of using an instrument to procure an abortion, evidence of the administration of drugs to other women for that purpose may be admitted in order to rebut the defence of innocent user<sup>12</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(iv) Child Destruction, Abortion and Concealment of Birth/111. Supplying or procuring poison or instruments with intent to procure a miscarriage.

111. Supplying or procuring poison or instruments with intent to procure a miscarriage.

Any person who unlawfully supplies or procures<sup>1</sup> any poison or other noxious thing<sup>2</sup>, or any instrument or thing whatsoever, knowing that it is intended to be unlawfully<sup>3</sup> used or employed with intent to procure the miscarriage of any woman<sup>4</sup>, whether or not she is with child, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years<sup>5</sup>.

A person who supplies something which he knows to be harmless cannot be convicted of inciting the woman to commit an offence<sup>6</sup>, although he knows that she will take it in the belief that it is noxious and with intent to procure abortion<sup>7</sup>.

The fact that medicine supplied by the defendant is followed by illness and a miscarriage is evidence that the thing supplied is noxious<sup>8</sup>.

The requirement of knowledge that the thing procured or supplied is to be unlawfully used to procure a miscarriage is satisfied if the defendant believes that that thing will be so used<sup>9</sup>, so that the defendant can be convicted if the person for whom he procures, or to whom he supplies, the thing does not intend so to use it.

1 For the purposes of the Offences against the Persons Act 1861 s 59 (see the text and notes 2-5 infra), 'procure' means to get possession from another person of something which the defendant has not got. If the defendant already has it in his possession, eg in a cupboard, he does not procure it if he takes it out in order to sterilise it or for some other purpose: see R v Mills [1963] 1 QB 522, 47 Cr App Rep 49, CCA.

2 As to the meanings of 'poison' and 'noxious thing' see PARA 110 ante.

3 As to the meaning of 'unlawfully' see PARAS 109 ante, 112 post; and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 209.

4 It follows from this requirement that contraceptive devices such as the morning-after pill or the intra-uterine device are not covered by the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 59 (as amended): see R (on the application of Smeaton) v Secretary of State for Health [2002] EWHC 610 (Admin), [2002] 2 FCR 193, [2002] 2 FLR 146; and PARA 110 ante.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(iv) Child Destruction, Abortion and Concealment of Birth/112. Medical termination of pregnancy.

112. Medical termination of pregnancy.

A person is not guilty of an offence under the law relating to abortion<sup>1</sup> where a pregnancy is terminated by a registered medical practitioner<sup>2</sup> if two registered medical practitioners are of the opinion, formed in good faith:

- 43 (1) that the pregnancy has not exceeded its twenty-fourth week and that the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated, of injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman or any existing children of her family<sup>3</sup>;
- 44 (2) that the termination is necessary to prevent grave permanent injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman<sup>4</sup>;
- 45 (3) that the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated<sup>5</sup>; or
- 46 (4) that there is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped<sup>6</sup>.

A man has no right to prevent his wife or girlfriend from having a legal abortion<sup>7</sup> and the foetus, while unborn, cannot be a party to legal proceedings instituted for that purpose<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'the law relating to abortion' see PARA 109 note 1 ante. For the purposes of the law relating to abortion, anything done with intent to procure a miscarriage (or, in the case of a woman carrying more than one foetus, the miscarriage of any foetus) is unlawfully done unless authorised by the Abortion Act 1967 s 1 (see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 209): s 5(2) (amended by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Act 1990 s 37(5)). In the case of a woman carrying more than one foetus, an act is so authorised if: (1) the ground for the termination of the pregnancy specified in the Abortion Act 1967 s 1(1)(d) (as substituted) (see head (4) in the text) applies in relation to any foetus and the act is done for the purpose of procuring the miscarriage of that foetus (s 5(2)(a) (as so amended)); or (2) any of the other grounds for termination of the pregnancy in s 1 (as amended) (see heads (1)-(3) in the text) applies (s 5(2)(b) (as so amended)).

2 As to registered medical practitioners see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 4. ### 113. Concealment of birth.

If any woman has been delivered of a child, any person who, by any secret disposition of the dead body of the child, whether such child died before, at, or after its birth, endeavours to conceal its birth, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>1</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>2</sup>, or to both<sup>3</sup>.

1 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(2) OFFENCES RELATING TO HOMICIDE/(iv) Child Destruction, Abortion and Concealment of Birth/114. Constituents of concealing birth.

114. Constituents of concealing birth.

In order to constitute concealment of birth a woman must have been delivered of something which may properly be called a child, and not the unformed subject of a premature miscarriage<sup>1</sup>. The child must be so far developed that in the ordinary course of events it would have had a fair chance of life when born<sup>2</sup>.

There must be a concealment of the fact of birth, carried out by a secret disposition of the body<sup>3</sup>, and this implies some act of concealment<sup>4</sup>. Proof that a woman still had the body of her child in her possession, although about to dispose of it<sup>5</sup>, or that she allowed others to take away the body, unless it was at her request or with her knowledge and consent<sup>6</sup>, or that she merely denied that she had given birth to a child<sup>7</sup>, is not sufficient to support a conviction for concealment.

There is a concealment when the child is placed where it is not likely to be found; and the most complete exposure of the body in a secluded place where it would not be likely to be found may be a concealment<sup>8</sup>. Leaving it in a street, although it may amount to a public nuisance<sup>9</sup>, is not a concealment of birth<sup>10</sup>.

The secret disposition need not be in a place where it is intended finally to leave the body; a temporary place of concealment is sufficient<sup>11</sup>.

The dead body must be found and identified as that of the child the attempted concealment of whose birth is alleged<sup>12</sup>, or at least there must have been a confession by the defendant<sup>13</sup>.

A person does not commit the offence of endeavouring to conceal the birth of a child if he or she puts it while it is still alive in a place of concealment, even though it may subsequently die<sup>14</sup>; but if such person later on visits the place, and, finding the child dead, replaces the clothes or other things with which it was concealed, that person commits this offence<sup>15</sup>.

The offence does not consist in the concealment of the birth of a child from any particular individual, but in such a concealment as would keep the world at large in ignorance of the birth<sup>16</sup>.

It is a question of law for the judge whether there is evidence that the place where the body was put was such that the body might have been disposed of there so as to conceal it. It is for the jury to say whether the body had in fact been so disposed of by the defendant, and with intent to conceal the birth<sup>17</sup>.

2 R v Berriman (1854) 6 Cox CC 388. It has been said that, although no specific limit can be assigned to the period when the chance of life begins, it may perhaps be safely assumed that, in the case of a child which has been less than seven months in the womb, the great probability is that it would not be born alive: R v Berriman supra. The reference to seven months would doubtless be reconsidered by a modern court in the light of the fact that the modern threshold of viability is generally 24 weeks from conception (see eg the Abortion Act 1967 s 1(1)(a) (as substituted); and MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 209) and sometimes as low as 22 weeks. Contrast the approach in R v Colmer (1864) 9 Cox CC 506, where a lower threshold was adopted (Martin B held that a foetus not bigger than a man's finger, but having the shape of a child, might be a child within the meaning of the statute; in this case the woman had been confined in the fourth or fifth month after pregnancy, and Martin B expressed the opinion at 507 that, as soon as a foetus which had the outward appearance of a child was born, the offence of concealment of birth could be committed); and see Stephen's Digest of the Criminal Law (9th Edn) 227. See also PARA 108 note 1 ante. It is submitted that the question of whether that which was concealed was 'the dead body of a child' is in each case a question of fact for the jury. See also R v Kersey (1908) 1 Cr App Rep 260, CCA (mother confessing to killing her newly-born child and disposing of body; murder charge insupportable in absence of evidence that child had existence separate from its mother and had breathed; conviction for concealment of birth despite absence of body).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(i) Consent/115. Relevance of consent.

(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON

(i) Consent

115. Relevance of consent.

Many offences against the person cannot be committed if the victim gives a valid consent. In such cases a valid consent renders the conduct lawful<sup>1</sup>. On the other hand, if a victim refuses consent to what is done, an offence against the person will be committed (unless some other excuse is available<sup>2</sup>).

An offence against the person can be committed, despite the victim's consent, if that consent is invalid. While one can validly consent to an application of force which does not cause actual bodily harm<sup>3</sup>, or in some cases even if it does, no one can lawfully consent to his own death at the hands of another<sup>4</sup>.

A person's consent is irrelevant and cannot prevent criminal liability for an offence if actual bodily harm was intended and/or caused<sup>5</sup>. However, a person may validly consent in such a case where the public interest requires an exception to this rule<sup>6</sup>. A few general exceptions have been recognised, for example, properly conducted games or sports<sup>7</sup>, reasonable surgical interference<sup>8</sup>, and tattooing and earpiercing<sup>9</sup>. Other exceptions which have been recognised are that, if a person is caused actual bodily harm by rough and undisciplined horseplay which is not intended to cause injury, his consent to run the risk of it is legally relevant<sup>10</sup>; that a person who takes part in a dangerous exhibition can give a valid consent to the risk of being unintentionally harmed<sup>11</sup>, and that a person can validly consent to run the known risk of infection, as well as all the other risks inherent in, and possible consequences of, sexual intercourse, just as they can validly consent to run the risks inherent in other aspects of everyday life<sup>12</sup>. The application of the public interest test when new situations arise can give rise to fine distinctions<sup>13</sup>.

If there is evidence that the victim may have consented (in a case where consent could be valid), the prosecution must prove a lack of consent<sup>14</sup>. A belief in consent, even though unreasonably held, is a defence<sup>15</sup>.

Consent is no defence to murder or to certain statutory offences involving children or young persons or mentally vulnerable persons<sup>16</sup>.

1 Consent can render conduct lawful only if the act constituting the alleged offence falls within that which is freely permitted by the other: cf Donnelly v Jackman [1970] 1 All ER 987, [1970] 1 WLR 562, DC. A person who consents to play football does not thereby consent to deliberate and dangerous kicking (see R v Bradshaw (1878) 14 Cox CC 83; R v Moore (1898) 14 TLR 229). The Sexual Offences Act 2003 makes express provision in relation to consent for the purposes of offences under it: see PARA 163 post.

2 ie such as the defences of duress of circumstances (see PARA 25 ante) or of necessity (see PARA 26 ante).

3 For the meaning of 'actual bodily harm' see PARA 149 post.

4 R v Young (1838) 8 C & P 644; R v Cuddy (1843) 1 Car & Kir 210.

5 R v Donovan [1934] 2 KB 498, 25 Cr App Rep 1, CCA (beating of 17-year-old girl for defendant's sexual gratification; if blows likely or intended to cause bodily harm, immaterial whether or not girl consented); A-G's

Reference (No 6 of 1980) [1981] QB 715, 73 Cr App Rep 63, CA (consensual fight; consent no defence if actual bodily harm intended or caused); applied in R v Brown [1994] 1 AC 212, 97 Cr App Rep 44, HL (male homosexual sado-masochistic practices resulting in wounding and actual bodily harm; participants' consent no defence). The prosecution and conviction of the defendants in R v Brown supra did not contravene the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 8 (right to respect for private and family life): Laskey, Jaggard and Brown v United Kingdom (1997) 24 EHRR 39, ECtHR. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq. In R v Brown supra the majority of the House of Lords were of the view that consent was a defence to a charge of common assault (a term which includes a battery). More importantly, in R v Barnes [2004] EWCA Crim 3246 at [7], [2005] 2 All ER 113 at [7], [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 507 at [7], Lord Woolf CJ stated that: 'When no bodily harm is caused, the consent of the victim to what happened is always a defence to a charge'. Read literally, the reference to actual bodily harm being 'intended and/or caused' means that it is irrelevant that actual bodily harm was unforeseen or even unforeseeable by the defendant (or the victim, for that matter), but see R v Boyea [1992] Crim LR 574, CA (suggests that it must have been likely that actual bodily harm would be caused); R v Slingsby [1995] Crim LR 570, Crown Ct (defendant must have intended actual bodily harm or anticipated risk of it).

6 R v Brown [1994] 1 AC 212, 97 Cr App Rep 44, HL; A-G's Reference (No 6 of 1980) [1981] QB 715, 73 Cr App Rep 63, CA.

7 A person who takes part in a properly conducted contact game or sport, like football, rugby or cricket, validly consents to the risk of actual bodily harm, even serious harm, such as can reasonably be expected during the game or sport: R v Coney (1882) 8 QBD 534, 51 LJMC 66, CCR; R v Barnes [2004] EWCA Crim 3246, [2005] 2 All ER 113, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 507. He does not, however, consent to the intentional infliction of actual bodily harm: R v Bradshaw (1878) 14 Cox CC 83; R v Barnes supra. The fact that the play is within the rules of the game gives a firm indication that what has happened is not criminal. In judging whether conduct is criminal or not, it must be remembered that, in highly competitive sports, conduct outside the rules can be expected to occur in the heat of the moment, and even if the conduct justifies, for example, a player being sent from the field of play by the referee, it still may not reach the threshold level required for it to be criminal. That level is an objective one and does not depend upon the views of individual players. The type of the sport, the level at which it is played, the nature of the act, the degree of force used, the extent of the risk of injury, and the state of mind of the defendant are all likely to be relevant in determining whether the defendant's actions go beyond the threshold. Whether conduct reaches the required threshold to be criminal depends on all the circumstances. However, there will be cases that fall within a 'grey area', and then the tribunal of fact will have to make its own determination as to which side of the line the case falls: R v Barnes supra; and see also R v Bradshaw supra; R v Moore (1898) 14 TLR 229.

Boxing under the Queensberry Rules is a properly conducted sport: R v Brown [1994] 1 AC 212 at 231, 97 Cr App Rep 44 at 47 per Lord Templeman, at 241 and 55-56 per Lord Jauncey of Tullichettle, at 265 and 74-75 per Lord Mustill, and at 278 and 86 per Lord Slynn of Hadley. On the other hand, prize fighting is not regarded as a properly conducted sport: R v Coney supra. For the meaning of 'prize-fighting' see R v Coney supra.

8 This exception was recognised in A-G's Reference (No 6 of 1980) [1981] QB 715, 73 Cr App Rep 63, CA; R v Brown [1994] 1 AC 212, 97 Cr App Rep 44, HL. 'Reasonable surgical interference' includes a sex-change operation for genuine therapeutic reasons (Corbett v Corbett [1971] P 83 at 99, [1970] 2 All ER 33 at 43) and ritual male circumcision (R v Brown [1994] 1 AC 212 at 231, 97 Cr App Rep 44 at 47 per Lord Templeman; Re J (Child's Religious Upbringing and Circumcision) [2000] 1 FCR 307, [2000] 1 FLR 571, CA), but it does not include female genital mutilation (see the Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 s 1; and PARA 157 post). It seems that reasonable surgical interference includes cosmetic surgery or, at the present day, sterilisation operations (whether for eugenic or contraceptive reasons), both of which have now become routine. An obiter dictum in Bravery v Bravery [1954] 3 All ER 59 at 67-68, [1954] 1 WLR 1169 at 1180, CA, per Denning LJ, to the effect that a sterilisation operation for sterilisation purposes (as opposed to eugenic purposes) is an unlawful assault would seem not to represent the current legal position: see R v Dica [2004] EWCA Crim 1103 at [41], [2004] 2 QB 1257 at [41], [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 467 at [41] per Judge LJ. The court's jurisdiction should be invoked whenever it is proposed to perform a sterilisation operation on an adult woman disabled by mental incapacity, since, while a doctor may lawfully operate on such a patient if it is in her best interests, a declaration will establish by judicial process whether the proposed operation is in her best interests and therefore lawful: Re F (Mental Patient: Sterilisation) [1990] 2 AC 1, sub nom F v West Berkshire Health Authority (Mental Health Act Commission intervening) [1989] 2 All ER 545, HL; and MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARAS 553, 612-613.

9 This exception was recognised in R v Brown [1994] 1 AC 212 at 231, 97 Cr App Rep 44 at 47 per Lord Templeman, and at 277 and 85 per Lord Slynn of Hadley. The tattooing of a person aged under 18 (otherwise than by a qualified medical practitioner for medical reasons) is, however, an offence under the Tattooing of Minors Act 1969 s 1: see PARA 145 post; and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 646.

11 This was recognised in A-G's Reference (No 6 of 1980) [1981] QB 715, 73 Cr App Rep 63, CA.

12 R v Dica [2004] EWCA Crim 1103, [2004] QB 1257, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 467. To be valid the consent must be an informed one, which it will not be if the defendant has concealed his disease (unless the victim knows of the disease through another source): R v Konzani [2005] EWCA Crim 706, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 198. In the case of the intentional transmission of serious disease, the consent of the infected party would be no defence: R v Dica supra at [46], [58] per Judge LJ.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(i) Consent/116. Apparent consent invalid.

116. Apparent consent invalid.

An apparent consent is invalid where the person giving it is so young, drunk or mentally disordered as to have no real understanding of what is involved, or (in other words) to have such a limited knowledge or understanding as not to be in a position to make a rational decision whether or not to consent<sup>1</sup>. The victim's apparent consent may be invalid if it has been procured by an express or implied threat<sup>2</sup>.

There is no valid consent if a person, apparently consenting, is induced to do so by a mistake, whether induced by the defendant's fraud or self-induced<sup>3</sup>, as to the nature of the act or as to the identity of the defendant<sup>4</sup> or as to the quality of the act<sup>5</sup>. While someone who consents to sexual intercourse in ignorance that the other party has a serious sexually transmitted disease nevertheless validly consents to the bodily contact involved, that person does not consent to run the risk of being infected by the disease in consequence<sup>6</sup>. To be effective there must be an informed consent to run such risk<sup>7</sup>.

In respect of surgical, medical or dental treatment a minor aged over 16 can give a valid consent: see the Family Law Reform Act 1969 s 8; and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 4. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(i) Consent/117. Implied consent.

117. Implied consent.

Consent may be express or implied. Most of the physical contacts of ordinary life are not criminal because they are impliedly consented to by all who move in society and expose themselves to the risk of bodily contact, such as the jostling which is inevitable from presence in a supermarket, an underground station or a busy street; or having one's hand seized in friendship, or one's back (within reason) slapped<sup>1</sup>. Although such cases are regarded as examples of implied consent, it is, however, more common nowadays to treat them as falling within a general exception embracing all physical contact which is generally acceptable in the ordinary conduct of daily life<sup>2</sup>.

118. Wounding, or causing grievous bodily harm, with intent.

Any person who unlawfully<sup>1</sup> and maliciously by any means whatsoever wounds or causes any grievous bodily harm to any person<sup>2</sup> with intent to do some grievous bodily harm to any person, or with intent to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of any person, is guilty of an offence<sup>3</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to when wounding or causing grievous bodily harm may be lawful see PARAS 20-22, 115 ante.

2 As to causation see PARA 7 ante. A charge of causing grievous bodily harm contrary to the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 (see the text and note 3 infra) includes an allegation of inflicting grievous bodily harm contrary to s 20 (as amended) (see PARA 120 post): R v Mandair [1995] 1 AC 208, 99 Cr App Rep 250, HL.

3 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18; Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 ss 10(2), 12(5)(a), Sch 3 Pt III. In relation to an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18, battery of a child cannot be justified on the ground that it constituted reasonable punishment: see the Children Act 2004 s 58(1), (2)(a); and PARA 161 post. Although the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 creates a single offence there are two variations on that offence: wounding with a specified intent and causing harm with a specified intent: R v Naismith [1961] 2 All ER 735, [1961] 1 WLR 952, C-MAC. The offence specified in the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post. For the extended territorial scope of an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 or s 20 (as amended) (see PARA 120 post) in connection with acts in relation to or by means of nuclear material see the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983 s 1(1)(b); and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1583. Such an offence may also constitute an 'act of violence' for the purposes of the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 2: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 628. As to the constituents of wounding with intent see PARA 119 post. As to procedural provisions applying where an offence involving bodily injury to a child or young person is charged see PARA 1164 post; as to the finding of causing grievous bodily harm with intent to do so on a charge of murder see PARA 1336 post; and as to the general power to convict of an offence other than that charged see PARA 1335 post. See also R v Monger [1973] Crim LR 301, Crown Ct; R v Slimmings [1998] 8 Archbold News 1, CA.

Where several defendants inflict injuries on a victim, in which a serious injury such as a broken nose is sustained, it is the totality of the injuries which is to be considered in relation to a charge of causing grievous bodily harm with intent contrary to the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18; it is immaterial that one defendant joins in the attack slightly after the others have begun to inflict injuries, which may have included the broken nose; he is aiding the commission of the offence and participating as soon as he joins in: R v Grundy, R v Gerrard, R v Patterson (1989) 89 Cr App Rep 333, CA. This decision was distinguished in relation to wounding in R v Percival (2003) Times, 23 May, CA, where it was held that if the offence of wounding is completed and then a person punches the victim of the wounding without previously having formed any intention to be a party to the wounding offence, then the person who punches may be guilty of assault, or of assault occasioning actual bodily harm, but he would not be guilty of wounding.

A defence of intoxication must be very extreme before it induces the prosecution to accept a plea of guilty to the lesser offence of unlawful wounding (see PARA 120 post): R v Stubbs (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 53, [1988] Crim LR 389, CA. As to voluntary intoxication see PARA 28 ante.

4 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18; Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5) (a). For sentencing guidelines see A-G's References (Nos 59, 60 and 63 of 1998), R v Goodwin [1999] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 128 (all offences against the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 are of great seriousness and will almost always attract a custodial sentence; even where a defendant responds in self-defence with unreasonable force a custodial sentence is generally appropriate). Where a charge of the less serious offence under the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 s 20 (see PARA 120 post) is available as an alternative to a charge under s 18, a charge under s 20 should be included in an indictment when a s 18 offence is alleged: R v Lahaye [2005] EWCA Crim 2847, [2006] 1 Cr App Rep 205, [2006] Crim LR 241.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(ii) Wounding or Causing Grievous Bodily Harm with Intent/119. Constituents of wounding etc with intent.

119. Constituents of wounding etc with intent.

In order to constitute a wounding there must be an injury to the person by which the skin is broken<sup>1</sup>; the continuity of the whole skin must be severed, not merely that of the cuticle or upper skin<sup>2</sup>. A bruise or internal rupturing of blood vessels is not sufficient<sup>3</sup>, nor is a broken bone alone<sup>4</sup>. The skin severed need not, however, be external<sup>5</sup>, but it is not sufficient to prove merely that a flow of blood was caused<sup>6</sup>, unless there is evidence to show where the blood came from<sup>7</sup>. It is not necessary that any instrument should have been used, as an injury caused for instance by a kick may be a wounding<sup>8</sup>.

'Grievous bodily harm' simply means 'really serious bodily harm'<sup>9</sup>. 'Harm' refers to injury and 'bodily harm' is not limited to the skin, flesh and bones of the victim, but also includes an identifiable psychiatric injury<sup>10</sup>. Whether harm is 'grievous' must be judged objectively, according to the ordinary standards of usage and experience, not subjectively from the standpoint of how the victim would describe it<sup>11</sup>.

The word 'maliciously' does not connote spite or ill-will<sup>12</sup>. In order to prove that the defendant acted maliciously, it is sufficient to prove that he intended his act to result in some unlawful<sup>13</sup> bodily harm to some other person, albeit of a minor nature, or was reckless as to the risk that his act might<sup>14</sup> result in such harm<sup>15</sup>.

On an indictment for wounding with intent the actual intent must be proved<sup>16</sup>.

The intent need not be an intent to do grievous bodily harm to the person actually injured, the offence being complete if there is an intent to do grievous bodily harm to any person<sup>17</sup>.

Where the intent is to resist or prevent lawful apprehension, it is negated if the attempted apprehension is believed to be unlawful and would be unlawful if the facts had been as the defendant honestly but mistakenly believed them to be<sup>18</sup>.

10 R v Ireland, R v Burstow [1998] AC 147, [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 177, HL. Where really serious psychiatric injury is alleged but not admitted by the defence, the question whether or not the defendant caused such injury should not be left to the jury in the absence of expert evidence: R v Ireland, R v Burstow supra. 'Bodily harm' includes lack of consciousness: R (on the application of T) v DPP [2003] EWHC 266 (Admin), [2003] Crim LR 622.

11 R v Brown, R v Stratton [1998] Crim LR 485, CA. Although the test of whether bodily harm is grievous is objective, in deciding whether or not the harm is really serious regard must be had to the effect of the injury on the particular victim, taking account of the victim's age, health and any particular factor: R v Bollom [2003] EWCA Crim 2846, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 50. Where the defendant has caused a number of injuries to the victim, whether there is grievous bodily harm can be judged by looking at the totality of those injuries; injuries which individually are not really serious can amount to really serious harm when aggregated: R v Birmingham [2002] EWCA Crim 2608, [2002] All ER (D) 299 (Nov). The ambit of grievous bodily harm is potentially wide. In order to be 'really serious harm', harm need not be life-threatening or permanent or have lasting consequences or even require treatment: R v Bollom supra.

14 It was affirmed in R v Rushworth (1992) 95 Cr App Rep 252, CA, that it need only be foreseen that harm might (as opposed to would) result.

15 R v Savage, R v Parmenter [1992] 1 AC 699, 94 Cr App Rep 193, HL. See also R v Mowatt [1968] 1 QB 421, 51 Cr App Rep 402, CA; and PARA 120 note 2 post. It has been said that 'maliciously' in the Offences against the Person Act 1861 adds nothing, because the ulterior intention required by s 18 is more specific than the intention or recklessness required by 'maliciously': R v Mowatt supra. While this is no doubt true in a case of wounding or causing grievous bodily harm with intent to do grievous bodily harm, 'maliciously' does add something where the alleged intent is to resist or prevent lawful apprehension or detainer: it would seem unduly harsh to convict a person of the serious offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 where he accidentally but seriously injured another in trying to resist or prevent a lawful arrest. It seems to have been assumed in R v Morrison (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 17, CA, that 'maliciously' in the context of a charge under s 18 involving an intent to resist or prevent arrest does add something.

16 R v Cox (1859) 1 F & F 664; Yardy v Greenwood (1935) 79 Sol Jo 363, CA; and see further PARA 1366 post. Foresight of or recklessness as to causing grievous bodily harm is not sufficient to constitute intent to do such harm (R v Belfon [1976] 3 All ER 46, 63 Cr App Rep 59, CA), but if foresight that grievous bodily harm is virtually certain is proved the jury is entitled to find that the defendant had such an intention (see PARA 10 ante).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(iii) Unlawful Wounding or Infliction of Grievous Bodily Harm etc/120. Unlawful wounding or infliction of grievous bodily harm.

(iii) Unlawful Wounding or Infliction of Grievous Bodily Harm etc

120. Unlawful wounding or infliction of grievous bodily harm.

Any person who unlawfully<sup>1</sup> and maliciously<sup>2</sup> wounds<sup>3</sup> or inflicts<sup>4</sup> any grievous bodily harm<sup>5</sup> upon any other person, either with or without any weapon or instrument, is guilty of an offence<sup>6</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>7</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>8</sup>, or to both<sup>9</sup>.

Although no specific intention need be alleged or proved, the prosecution must nonetheless prove that the act was committed unlawfully and maliciously<sup>10</sup>.

Provocation is no defence to a charge of unlawful wounding<sup>11</sup>.

1 See PARA 118 note 1 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'maliciously' see PARA 119 text to notes 12-15 ante. The fact that recklessness as to the risk of causing some unlawful bodily harm to another suffices for these purposes means that if the defendant, knowing that he has some sexually transmitted disease, and therefore aware of the risk of infecting a sexual partner, has intercourse with a person who consents to the intercourse in ignorance of the defendant's disease, the defendant will be guilty of an offence under these provisions if that person becomes infected with the disease and suffers grievous bodily harm in consequence: R v Dica [2004] EWCA Crim 1103, [2004] QB 1257, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 467. In R v Konzani [2005] EWCA Crim 706 at [42], [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 198 at [42], Judge LJ stated that where a defendant who knows that he is suffering from a serious sexually transmitted disease deliberately conceals it from a sexual partner his silence is incongruous with a genuine belief that there was an informed consent to the risk of contracting the disease.

'Where the evidence for the prosecution, if accepted, shows that the physical act of the defendant which caused the injury to another person was a direct assault which any ordinary person would be bound to realise was likely to cause some physical harm to the other person (as, for instance, an assault with a weapon or the boot or violence with the hands) and the defence put forward on behalf of the defendant is not that the assault was accidental or that he did not realise that it might cause some physical harm to the victim, but is some other defence such as that he did not do the alleged act or that he did it in self-defence, it is unnecessary to deal specifically in the summing up with what is meant by the word 'maliciously': R v Mowatt [1968] 1 QB 421 at 426-427, 51 Cr App Rep 402 at 407, CA, per Diplock LJ. However, this is a subject which it will be prudent for the trial judge to discuss with counsel before he starts his summing up: R v Barnes [2004] EWCA Crim 3246, [2005] 2 All ER 113, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 507.

A defendant who has been shown to have foreseen that his victim was likely to suffer some bodily harm is not entitled to be acquitted on the basis of not having foreseen the harm actually suffered by the victim: DPP v W [2006] EWHC 92 (Admin), [2006] All ER (D) 76 (Jan).

3 For the meaning of 'wound' see PARA 119 ante.

4 Grievous bodily harm can be inflicted without an assault and without the application of violence directly or indirectly to the body of the victim: R v Ireland, R v Burstow [1998] AC 147, [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 177, HL. Thus causing a person to suffer grievous bodily harm by infecting him with a disease constitutes an infliction of that harm (R v Dica [2004] EWCA Crim 1103, [2004] QB 1257, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 467, where the Court of Appeal confirmed that the reasoning which led the majority in R v Clarence (1888) 22 QBD 23 to hold that there could not be a conviction under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 in a case of infecting another has no continuing application). For the purposes of the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 6(3) (alternative verdicts: see PARA 1335 post), a charge of inflicting grievous bodily harm contrary to the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s

20 (as amended) includes an allegation of assault occasioning actual bodily harm contrary to s 47 (as amended) (para 149 post): Metropolitan Police Comr v Wilson, R v Jenkins [1984] AC 242, 77 Cr App Rep 319, HL.

An offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 20 is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post. Such an offence may also constitute an 'act of violence' for the purposes of the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 2: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 628.

122. Administering drugs.

Any person who unlawfully applies or administers<sup>1</sup> to, or causes to be taken by, or attempts to apply or administer to, or attempts to cause to be administered to or taken by, any person, any chloroform, laudanum or other stupefying or overpowering drug, matter or thing, with intent thereby to enable himself or any other person to commit, or with intent to assist any other person in committing, any indictable offence, is guilty of an offence<sup>2</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>3</sup>.

1 'Administer' does not necessarily involve the application of direct physical force and includes eg the spraying of tear gas from a distance: see R v Gillard (1988) 87 Cr App Rep 189, CA. Where a person acts in concert with another who self-injects a drug (eg by holding a tourniquet around that person's arm while he self-injects or by preparing and giving that person the drug for immediate self-injection), both persons can be regarded as administering the drug because their actions are interlinked (though separate) parts of the overall process of administering the drug: R v Rogers [2003] EWCA Crim 945, [2003] 1 WLR 1374, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 160 (tourniquet); R v Kennedy [2005] EWCA Crim 685, [2005] 1 WLR 2159, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep 348 (preparation and giving).

2 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 22; Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a). As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 22 has in his possession a firearm or imitation firearm see PARA 677 post; as to the administration of a substance to a person, or causing a substance to be taken, for the purpose of enabling any other person to engage in sexual activity that involves that person see PARA 230 post; as to the administration of poisons etc with intent to annoy see PARA 124 post; and as to offences in relation to controlled drugs see PARA 770 et seq post.

This offence is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post. The offence may also constitute an 'act of violence' for the purposes of the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 2: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 628.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(iv) Administering Drugs or Poison/123. Use of noxious substances or things to cause harm and intimidate.

123. Use of noxious substances or things to cause harm and intimidate.

A person commits an offence if he takes any action which involves the use of a noxious substance<sup>1</sup> or other noxious thing<sup>2</sup> and has, or is likely to have, the effect<sup>3</sup> of:

- 47 (1) causing serious violence against a person anywhere in the world<sup>4</sup>;
- 48 (2) causing serious damage to real or personal property anywhere in the world<sup>5</sup>;
- 49 (3) endangering human life or creating a serious risk to the health or safety of the public<sup>6</sup> or a section of the public<sup>7</sup>; or
- 50 (4) inducing in members of the public the fear that the action is likely to endanger their lives or create a serious risk to their health or safety<sup>8</sup>, if the action in question is designed to influence the government<sup>9</sup> or an international governmental organisation or to intimidate the public or a section of the public<sup>10</sup>. A person is similarly guilty if he makes a threat that he or another will take any action which constitutes this offence<sup>11</sup> and intends thereby to induce in any person anywhere in the world<sup>12</sup> the fear that the threat is likely to be carried out<sup>13</sup>.

These provisions apply to conduct done in the United Kingdom<sup>14</sup>. They also apply to conduct done outside the United Kingdom which: (a) is done by a United Kingdom national<sup>15</sup> or resident<sup>16</sup>, is done by any person to, or in relation to, a United Kingdom national, resident or protected person<sup>17</sup>, or is done by any person in connection with an attack (or threat of attack) on the residence or diplomatic premises of a United Kingdom diplomat, or his vehicle, while he is on the premises or in the vehicle<sup>18</sup>; and (b) is done for the purpose of advancing a political, religious or ideological cause<sup>19</sup>.

A person guilty of any such offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years or a fine, or both<sup>20</sup>, and on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>21</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>22</sup>, or to both<sup>23</sup>.

123 Use of noxious substances or things to cause harm and intimidate

TEXT AND NOTES 1-13--Where an offence under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 113 is committed in the United Kingdom, proceedings for the offence may be taken at any place in the United Kingdom and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed at any such place: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 28(1), (2)(b).

TEXT AND NOTE 19--After 'religious' read ', racial': Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 113A(2) (amended by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 75(1), (2)(b)).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(iv) Administering Drugs or Poison/124. Administering poison etc.

124. Administering poison etc.

Any person who unlawfully and maliciously<sup>1</sup> administers<sup>2</sup> to or causes to be administered to or taken by any other person any poison or other destructive or noxious thing so as thereby to endanger the life of that person, or so as to inflict upon him any grievous bodily harm, is guilty of an offence<sup>3</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years<sup>4</sup>.

Any person who unlawfully and maliciously administers to or causes to be administered to or taken by any other person any poison or other destructive or noxious thing, with intent to injure, aggrieve, or annoy such person, is guilty of an offence<sup>5</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years<sup>6</sup>.

If, in fact, grievous bodily harm is caused by the noxious thing, the defendant commits the first-mentioned offence, although the intent was merely to injure or annoy<sup>7</sup>.

The drug or thing administered must be a poison, or other destructive or noxious thing or the defendant cannot be convicted, although there may have been an intent to injure or annoy<sup>8</sup>. If the thing administered is a recognised poison, the quantity used is immaterial<sup>9</sup>. 'Noxious thing' means something other than a recognised poison which is sufficient in the actual amount administered to cause injury, even though when taken in smaller quantities the particular thing given would be harmless<sup>10</sup>. The administering does not necessarily consist in the actual giving of the poison or destructive or noxious thing to the victim by the defendant: it is sufficient if the poison or destructive or noxious thing is placed by the defendant where it will be taken<sup>11</sup>, or if it is handed to a third person in order that it may be given to another, although it may ultimately reach and be taken by someone for whom it was not intended<sup>12</sup>.

The administration of a drug to a woman with the intention of exciting her sexual passion is an administration of a noxious thing with intent to injure or annoy<sup>13</sup>.

1 'Maliciously', where harm is done indirectly, postulates foresight of consequences and requires either an intention to do the particular kind of harm that was done or recklessness whether such harm occurs or not: R v Cunningham [1957] 2 QB 396, 41 Cr App Rep 155, CCA (causing escape of coal gas); distinguished in R v Cato [1976] 1 All ER 260, 62 Cr App Rep 41, CA (deliberately injecting heroin into victim 'malicious' without proof of intention or recklessness as to harm caused thereby). See also PARAS 8 note 4, 119 text to notes 12-15 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'administer' see the text and notes 11-12 infra; and PARA 122 note 1 ante.

This offence is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post. 5 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 24; Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1. There is an intent to injure for the purposes of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 24 only if the defendant intended to injure in the sense of causing physical harm: R v Hill (1986) 83 Cr App Rep 386, HL. The purpose for which a substance is administered may be relevant in determining whether or not it was intended to cause physical harm: R v Hill supra at 390 per Lord Griffiths.

This offence is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post. ## (v) Injury by Explosion, Corrosives, Mantraps etc

125. Causing bodily injury by explosion.

Any person who unlawfully and maliciously<sup>1</sup> by the explosion of gunpowder or other explosive substance<sup>2</sup> burns, maims, disfigures, disables or does any grievous bodily harm<sup>3</sup> to any person is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>4</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'maliciously' see PARA 119 text to notes 12-15 ante.

2 As to the meaning of 'explosive substance' in a related offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 see PARA 126 post.

3 For the meaning of 'grievous bodily harm' see PARA 119 ante.

4 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 28; Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5) (a). This offence is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post. As to procedural provisions applying where an offence involving bodily injury to a child or young person is charged see PARA 1164 post.

This offence may be constituted by an act done in connection with the offence of hijacking committed or attempted on board an aircraft: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 625. The offence may also constitute an 'act of violence' for the purposes of the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 2: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 628.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(v) Injury by Explosion, Corrosives, Mantraps etc/126. Causing explosion.

126. Causing explosion.

Any person who unlawfully and maliciously<sup>1</sup>:

- 51 (1) causes any gunpowder or other explosive substance<sup>2</sup> to explode<sup>3</sup>;
- 52 (2) sends or delivers to, or causes to be taken or received by, any person any explosive substance or any other dangerous or noxious thing<sup>4</sup>; or
- 53 (3) puts or lays at any place, or casts or throws at or upon or otherwise applies to any person, any corrosive fluid, or any destructive or explosive substance<sup>5</sup>, with intent, in any such case, to burn, maim, disfigure, or disable<sup>6</sup> any person, or to do some grievous bodily harm<sup>7</sup> to any person, whether any bodily injury is effected or not, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>8</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'maliciously' see PARA 119 text to notes 12-15 ante.

2 A petrol bomb is an 'explosive substance' within the meaning of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 29: R v Howard [1993] Crim LR 213, CA (following R v Bouch [1983] QB 246, 76 Cr App Rep 11, CA (see PARA 127 note 7 post)).

3 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 29; Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a).

4 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 29; Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a).

5 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 29; Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a). Boiling water was held to be 'a destructive matter' for the purposes of the Offences Against the Person Act 1837 s 5 (R v Crawford (1845) 2 Car & Kir 129, CCR) but subsequently it was held that it was not a 'destructive substance' for the purposes of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 (R v Crawford (1877) 62 LT Jo 372 per Huddleston B).

6 Where an intent to disable is alleged, the prosecution need not prove that the defendant intended to disable permanently: R v James (1979) 70 Cr App Rep 215, CA.

7 For the meaning of 'grievous bodily harm' see PARA 119 ante.

8 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 29; Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a). This offence is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post.

An offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 29 may be constituted by an act done in connection with the offence of hijacking committed or attempted on board an aircraft: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 625. The offence may also constitute an 'act of violence' for the purposes of the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 2: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 628.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(v) Injury by Explosion, Corrosives, Mantraps etc/127. Causing explosion likely to endanger life or property.

127. Causing explosion likely to endanger life or property.

A person who in the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup> or (being a British citizen<sup>2</sup>, a British overseas territories citizen<sup>3</sup>, a British overseas citizen<sup>4</sup> or a British National (Overseas)<sup>5</sup>) in the Republic of Ireland unlawfully and maliciously<sup>6</sup> causes by any explosive substance<sup>7</sup> an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life or to cause serious injury to property is guilty of an offence, whether any such injury has been actually caused or not, and is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>8</sup>.

1 'It would be quite extraordinary if, in the circumstances prevailing in 1975 [ie the year in which the Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 2 was substituted: see note 8 infra], Parliament when enacting the new s 2 intended to limit the crime so as to require the physical presence of the offender as opposed to defining the place where the damage occurred': R v Ellis (1991) 95 Cr App Rep 52 at 66, CCC, per Swinton Thomas J. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2 As to British citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 23-43.

3 As to British overseas territories citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 44-57.

4 As to British overseas citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 58-62.

5 As to the status of British National (Overseas) see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 63-65.

6 For the meaning of 'maliciously' see PARA 119 text to notes 12-15 ante.

7 'Explosive substance' includes any materials for making any such substance, and also any apparatus, machine, implement or materials, or any part thereof, used or intended to be used, or adapted for causing, or aiding in causing, any explosion in or with any explosive substance: Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 9(1). In the absence of a definition of 'explosive' in the Explosive Substances Act 1883, it has been held that that term in that Act should be construed in the light of the definition of 'explosive' in the Explosives Act 1875 s 3, whereby 'explosive': (1) means gunpowder, nitroglycerine, dynamite, gun-cotton, blasting powders, fulminate of mercury or of other metals, coloured fires and every other substance, whether similar to those above mentioned or not, used or manufactured with a view to producing a practical effect by explosion or a pyrotechnic effect; and (2) includes fog-signals, fireworks, fuses, rockets, percussion caps, detonators, cartridges, ammunition of all description, and every adaptation or preparation of an explosive as defined: see R v Wheatley [1979] 1 All ER 954, 68 Cr App Rep 287, CA (fire-damaged sodium chlorate mixture used in pipe bomb held to be an explosive substance for purposes of the Explosive Substances Act 1883 even if it only had a pyrotechnic effect); and EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 905. 'Pyrotechnic effect' has a broad meaning, and it is not limited to, eg, fireworks; a petrol bomb is an 'explosive substance' because the fireball produced by it clearly has a pyrotechnic effect: R v Bouch [1983] QB 246, 76 Cr App Rep 11, CA (R v Wheatley supra applied; definition of 'explosion' in 1886 edition of Encyclopaedia Britannica approved). See also R v Elliott (1984) 81 Cr App Rep 115, CA. A part of a vessel filled with an explosive substance (see R v Charles (1892) 17 Cox CC 499); a shotgun (see R v Downey [1971] NI 224); and electronic timers (see R v Berry (No 3) [1994] 2 All ER 913, 99 Cr App Rep 88, CA) have also been held to be 'explosive substances' for the purposes of the Explosive Substances Act 1883: see further EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 1022.

8 Ibid s 2 (substituted by the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 s 7(1), (3)); British Nationality Act 1981 s 51(3)(a) (ii) (amended by the British Nationality (Falkland Islands) Act 1983 s 4(3); the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 ss 2(2)(b), 5, Sch 1 para 6; and the Hong Kong (British Nationality) Order 1986, SI 1986/948, art 7(9)).

An offence under the Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 2 (as substituted) may also constitute an 'act of violence' for the purposes of the Aviation Security Act 1982 s 2: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 628.

No proceedings may be instituted except by or with the consent of the Attorney General: Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 7(1) (amended by the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 s 14(5), Sch 6 Pt I). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post.

As to inquiries under the Explosive Substances Act 1883 see EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 1044.

The Explosives Act 1875 ss 73, 74, 75, 89, 96 (search for, seizure and detention of explosive substances, forfeiture, and the disposal of explosive substances seized or forfeited: see EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARAS 1027-1029) apply as if a crime or forfeiture under the Explosive Substances Act 1883 were an offence or forfeiture under the Explosives Act 1875: Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 8(1).

A person who in the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup> or a dependency<sup>2</sup> or (being a British citizen<sup>3</sup>, a British overseas territories citizen<sup>4</sup>, a British overseas citizen<sup>5</sup> or a British National (Overseas)<sup>6</sup>) elsewhere unlawfully and maliciously<sup>7</sup> either does any act with intent to cause, or conspires to cause, by an explosive substance<sup>8</sup> an explosion of a nature likely to endanger life, or cause serious injury to property, whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere<sup>9</sup>, or makes or has in his possession or under his control an explosive substance with intent by means thereof to endanger life, or cause serious injury to property, whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, or to enable any other person to do so<sup>10</sup>, is guilty of an offence, whether or not any explosion takes place or any injury to person or property is actually caused, and is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term, and the explosive substance must be forfeited<sup>11</sup>.

1 These words do not govern the person but govern the relevant act complained of; they create a geographical limitation on the place where those relevant acts take place, ie acts preparatory to explosions in the United Kingdom: R v Ellis (1991) 95 Cr App Rep 52, CCC. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2 'Dependency' means the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man and any colony, other than a colony for whose external relations a country other than the United Kingdom is responsible: Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 3(2) (s 3 substituted by the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 s 7(1), (3)).

UPDATE

128 Attempting to cause explosion

NOTE 11--The level of sentencing in Martin, cited, cannot govern sentences for terrorist conspiracies where the potential for mass injury and loss of life may be vastly greater: R v Jalil [2008] EWCA Crim 2910, [2009] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 276, [2008] All ER (D) 51 (Dec).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(v) Injury by Explosion, Corrosives, Mantraps etc/129. Sending for proof gun barrels containing explosive substances.

129. Sending for proof gun barrels containing explosive substances.

Any person who knowingly sends for proof<sup>1</sup> any barrel<sup>2</sup> containing any explosive substance or any other matter calculated by explosion or otherwise to occasion injury to any person handling or having to do with the barrel for the purposes of proof or otherwise, or puts in the barrel before or when it is sent such explosive substances or other matter, or causes, procures, or knowingly permits any such offence or an attempt at any such offence, or knowing that any such offence or attempt has been or is to be committed does not give warning thereof to some officer employed at the proof house in question, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>3</sup>.

1 'Proof' means provisional proof and definitive proof, or, as the case requires, provisional proof or definitive proof; and 'provisional proof' means proof of a barrel liable in any subsequent stage of manufacture to be reduced in strength before it forms part of a small arm in a finished state; and 'definitive proof' means proof of a barrel not liable in any subsequent stage of manufacture to be reduced in strength before it forms part of a small arm in a finished state: Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868 s 4. See further note 2 infra. 'Sending for proof' involves sending for proof to the Proof House of the Gunmakers Company of the City of London or the Birmingham Proof House or any branch proof house: see s 123 (amended by the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1978 s 8(1), Sch 3 para 12). As to the proof and marking of gun barrels see further TRADE MARKS AND TRADE NAMES vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARA 487.

2 For these purposes, 'barrel' includes every barrel of every small arm, and every breech of every small arm, and every small arm which would in the user of the small arm contain all or any part of its charge; every part of every small arm in, from, or through which, in the user of the small arm all or any part of its charge would be exploded or discharged; and every barrel welded, forged, or cast, finished or unfinished or in any other progressive state of manufacture and any and every part of a barrel: see the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868 s 4. 'Small arms' includes small arms of every description (whether 'of present use or of future invention') respectively adapted for the discharge of bullets, shots or other projectiles either by means of the explosion, ignition or other action of gunpowder, gun-cotton, fulminating powder or other substance (whether 'of present use or of future invention or application') or by means of the expansion of steam or gas or by any other means not being merely mechanical means, except air guns ('as at present manufactured'): s 4. In the immediately preceding sentence phrases have been printed within inverted commas to draw attention to the historical interpretation which must be given to this definition in the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868.

Any person who sets or places, or causes to be set or placed, any spring-gun, mantrap, or other engine<sup>1</sup> calculated to destroy human life or inflict grievous bodily harm<sup>2</sup>, with the intent that it will, or whereby it may, destroy or inflict grievous bodily harm on a trespasser or other person coming in contact with it, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years<sup>3</sup>.

Any person who knowingly and wilfully permits any such spring-gun, mantrap or other engine, which may have been set or placed in any place then being in or afterwards coming into his possession or occupation by some other person, to continue so set or placed is deemed to have set or placed it with the above-mentioned intent<sup>4</sup>.

However, nothing in these provisions makes it illegal to set or place any gin or trap such as may have been or may be usually set or placed with the intent of destroying vermin, or to set or place, or cause to be set or placed, or to be continued set or placed, from sunset to sunrise, any spring-gun, mantrap or other engine which is set or placed, or caused or continued to be set or placed, in a dwelling house for its protection<sup>5</sup>.

1 An 'engine' in this context means a mechanical contrivance: R v Munks [1964] 1 QB 304, 48 Cr App Rep 56, CCA. It does not include an arrangement of electric wires: R v Munks supra.

132. Placing wood etc on railway, taking up rails, turning points, showing or hiding signals etc with intent to endanger passengers.

Any person who unlawfully and maliciously<sup>1</sup> puts or throws upon or across any railway any wood, stone or other matter or thing, or takes up, removes or displaces any rail, sleeper or other matter or thing belonging to any railway, or turns, moves or diverts any points or other machinery belonging to any railway, or makes or shows, hides or removes, any signal or light upon or near to any railway, or does or causes to be done any other matter or thing, with intent to endanger the safety of any person travelling or being upon such railway, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>2</sup>.

133. Casting stone etc upon a railway carriage, with intent to endanger the safety of any person therein, or in any part of the same train.

Any person who unlawfully and maliciously<sup>1</sup> throws, or causes to fall or strike, at, against, into, or upon any engine, tender, carriage or truck used on any railway, any wood, stone, or other matter or thing, with intent to injure or endanger the safety of any person in or upon such engine, tender, carriage or truck, or in or upon any other engine, tender, carriage or truck forming part of the same train, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>2</sup>.

Any person who, by any unlawful act<sup>1</sup>, or by any wilful omission or neglect, endangers or causes to be endangered<sup>2</sup> the safety of any person conveyed or being in or upon a railway, or who aids or assists therein, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>4</sup>, or to both<sup>5</sup>.

1 Throwing a stone at engines or carriages may be an offence for these purposes (R v Bowray (1846) 10 Jur 211), as is playing with a cart on railway premises so as to let it run within a dangerous distance of the track (R v Monaghan, R v Granger (1870) 11 Cox CC 608).

2 Proof of the causation of actual danger is not essential if the facts proved may properly be described as potentially endangering the safety of any person conveyed by railway: R v Pearce [1967] 1 QB 150, 50 Cr App Rep 305, CA.

3 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(vii) False Imprisonment, Kidnapping and Child Abduction/135. False imprisonment.

(vii) False Imprisonment, Kidnapping and Child Abduction

135. False imprisonment.

False imprisonment is an offence at common law punishable by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court<sup>1</sup>. False imprisonment consists in the unlawful<sup>2</sup> and intentional or reckless<sup>3</sup> restraint of a victim's freedom of movement from a particular place<sup>4</sup>.

1 See SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 31, 139. This offence is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(b) (as added); and PARA 474 post. For sentencing guidelines see R v Spence, R v Thomas (1983) 5 Cr App Rep (S) 413, CA. In assessing the seriousness of a false imprisonment, attention ought to be paid to the purpose for which the imprisonment was carried out: R v Willoughby [1999] 2 Cr App Rep 82, [1999] Crim LR 244 (life sentence not appropriate for false imprisonment for the purposes of indecent assault).

As to the tort of false imprisonment see TORT vol 97 (2010) PARA 542 et seq.

2 As to whether or not an arrest is a lawful restraint see PARAS 910-934 post. The restraint (eg imprisonment) of a person in pursuance of a court order is not unlawful (Greaves v Keene (1879) 4 Cox D 73) provided that the order is valid on its face (Henderson v Preston (1888) 21 QBD 362, CA). The detention of a person after his acquittal or after the expiry of his term of imprisonment is unlawful restraint: Mee v Cruickshank (1902) 20 Ex CC 210.

A parent will rarely be guilty of false imprisonment in respect of his child because the sort of restraint imposed on children is usually well within the realms of reasonable parental discipline and therefore not unlawful, but parental restraint may be unlawful where, for example, a court order has given parental control to someone other than the parent and the restraint is contrary to that order, or where the restraint is outside the realm of parental discipline (which is a question of fact): R v Rahman (1985) 81 Cr App Rep 349, CA.

3 Recklessness bears its normal subjective meaning: R v James (1997) Times, 2 October, CA.

4 R v Rahman (1985) 81 Cr App Rep 349, CA. The victim may be restrained physically, eg by locking him in a room (as in R v Linsberg and Leies (1905) 69 JP 107, CCC) or by words, eg intimidation or commands, if he submits (R v James (1997) Times, 2 October, CA). A restraint may consist simply of being prevented from proceeding in a particular direction (2 Co Inst 482 at 589), but not if a safe alternative route is available (Bird v Jones (1845) 7 QB 742 (tort of false imprisonment)). There is authority that in the tort of false imprisonment (see TORT vol 97 (2010) PARA 542 et seq), there can be an imprisonment without the detained person knowing that he is being detained: Meering v Grahame-White Aviation Co Ltd (1919) 122 LT 44, CA; but see Herring v Boyle (1834) 1 Cr M & R 377 to the contrary effect.

136. Kidnapping.

It is an offence at common law punishable by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court<sup>1</sup> to kidnap any person<sup>2</sup>. Kidnapping consists of the taking or carrying away<sup>3</sup> of one person by another by force<sup>4</sup> or fraud<sup>5</sup> without the consent of the person so taken or carried away<sup>6</sup> and without lawful excuse<sup>7</sup>. Even in the case of a child victim, it is the absence of the victim's consent which is material, whatever the victim's age may be<sup>8</sup>.

The common law offence of kidnapping exists in the case of a victim under the age of 14<sup>9</sup>; and it may be committed by a parent who takes away by force or fraud his own unmarried child under the age of 18, without the child's consent and without lawful excuse<sup>10</sup>, or by a husband on his wife if he treats her with hostile force and carries her away from the place where she wishes to remain<sup>11</sup>. Where the offence is committed against a child under the age of 16 by a person connected with the child<sup>12</sup>, no prosecution may be instituted except by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>13</sup>.

1 See SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 31, 139. For sentencing guidelines see R v Spence, R v Thomas (1983) 5 Cr App Rep (S) 413. See also R v Winslow (Terence) [2004] EWCA Crim 3417, [2005] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 307; A-G's Reference (No 6 of 2004) [2004] EWCA Crim 1275, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 83.

2 See R v D [1984] AC 778, 79 Cr App Rep 313, HL, where the earlier authorities are reviewed. Kidnapping is one of the offences specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents): see s 63B(1), (2)(a) (as added); and PARA 474 post.

3 Contrast false imprisonment (see PARA 135 ante) which simply requires an unlawful restraint on the victim's freedom of movement. All that must be proved for kidnapping is a deprivation of liberty coupled with a carrying away from the place where the victim wishes to be; it is unnecessary to prove that the kidnapper carried the victim to the place he intended: R v Welland [1978] 3 All ER 161, 67 Cr App Rep 364, CA (defendant deceived victim into accompanying him for about 100 yards to a car, in which he said he would drive her home; defendant was stopped after victim was in the car but before he could drive off; held, although there might be circumstances where the movement would be insufficient for a carrying away, the movement of the victim and putting her in the car was ample evidence that she had been carried away from the place where she wanted to be).

4 'Force' in this context is not restricted to force in the sense of physical violence or the threat of it. Its function is to encompass any conduct which, coupled with the carrying away, overrides the true consent of the person carried away. Thus the exercise of a mental or moral power or influence to compel or force another to do something against his will would suffice if it is sufficiently compelling to overcome that person's will: R v Singh, R v Southward [1995] 8 Archbold News 3, CA.

5 Since taking or carrying away by fraud is part of the definition of kidnapping, issues of consent will rarely arise, if ever, because a victim who has been deceived will not have consented to being taken or carried away by fraud: R v Cort [2003] EWCA Crim 2149, [2004] QB 388, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 199.

6 The offence can be committed even though the defendant only took the victim where the victim wanted to go, if the taking is by fraud: R v Cort [2003] EWCA Crim 2149, [2004] QB 388, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 199 (defendant falsely told woman at bus stop that bus had broken down and offered her a lift, which she accepted; defendant drove woman to her destination; conviction for kidnapping upheld).

7 R v D [1984] AC 778, 79 Cr App Rep 313, HL. 'Without lawful excuse' has the same meaning as 'unlawful' in false imprisonment (see PARA 135 ante). The defendant's belief that the victim is an illegal immigrant is not a defence: R v D supra.

Kidnapping may be committed although the person carried away at first consents. If, while being carried away, he or she ceases to consent, any person who then uses force to continue the process is guilty of the offence: R v Lewis [1993] 5 Archbold News 2, CA.

8 In the case of a very young child, it would not have the understanding or the intelligence to give its consent, so that absence of consent would be a necessary inference from its age. In the case of an older child, however, it is a question of fact for a jury whether the child concerned has sufficient understanding and intelligence to give its consent; if, but only if, the jury considers that a child has these qualities, it must then go on to consider whether it has been proved that the child did not give its consent. While the matter will always be for the jury alone to decide, a jury will not frequently find that a child under 14 had sufficient understanding and intelligence to give its consent. While the absence of the consent of the person having custody or care and control of a child is not material to the issue of absence of consent, the giving of consent by such a person may well support a defence of lawful excuse: R v D [1984] AC 778 at 803, 79 Cr App Rep 313 at 323, HL, per Lord Brandon.

10 R v D [1984] AC 778, 79 Cr App Rep 313, HL. The giving of consent by a person having custody or care and control of the child may be relevant to a defence of lawful excuse: R v D supra.

11 R v Reid [1973] QB 299, [1972] 2 All ER 1350, CA. The fact that the parties are cohabiting at the time of the offence is immaterial: R v Reid supra.

12 le connected with the child within the meaning of the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1 (as amended): see PARA 137 post.

13 Child Abduction Act 1984 s 5. As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post. As to child abduction see PARAS 137-141 post; and as to the offence of hostage-taking see PARA 468 post. In general it is undesirable as a matter of policy to prosecute for kidnapping parents who snatch their own children in defiance of a court order; such conduct should be dealt with as a contempt of court and a prosecution for kidnapping should be used only in exceptional cases, where the conduct of the parent concerned is so bad that an ordinary right-thinking person would without hesitation regard it as criminal in nature: R v D [1984] AC 778 at 806, 79 Cr App Rep 313 at 323-324, HL, per Lord Brandon. Where a count alleging abduction contrary to the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1 (see PARA 137 post) encompasses the allegation against the defendant, the inclusion of a count alleging kidnapping is to be deprecated: see R v C (Kidnapping: Abduction) [1991] 2 FLR 252, [1991] Fam Law 522, CA; and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 786.

137. Abduction of child by parents or persons connected with child.

A person connected with a child<sup>1</sup> under the age of 16 commits an offence if he takes<sup>2</sup> or sends<sup>3</sup> the child out of the United Kingdom<sup>4</sup> without the appropriate consent<sup>5</sup>. A person does not commit such an offence, however, by doing anything without the consent of another person whose consent is so required if:

- 54 (1) he does it in the belief that the other person either has consented<sup>6</sup> or would consent if he was aware of all the relevant circumstances<sup>7</sup>;
- 55 (2) he has taken all reasonable steps to communicate with the other person but has been unable to communicate with him<sup>8</sup>; or
- 56 (3) the other person has unreasonably refused to consent<sup>9</sup>.

Where in proceedings for such an offence there is sufficient evidence to raise an issue as to the application of heads (1) to (3) above, it is for the prosecution to prove that heads (1) to (3) do not apply<sup>10</sup>. Special provision is made in connection with the abduction of a child who is the subject of adoption<sup>11</sup>, is in the care of a local authority<sup>12</sup>, or is detained in a place of safety or remanded to local authority accommodation<sup>13</sup>.

Provision is made for the punishment and prosecution of child abduction offences<sup>14</sup>.

1 For these purposes, a person is connected with a child if: (1) he is a parent of the child (Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(2)(a) (s 1(2)-(4), (7) substituted, and s 1(4A), (5A) added, by the Children Act 1989 s 108(4), Sch 12 para 37(2)-(4)); (2) in the case of a child whose parents were not married to each other at the time of his birth, there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is the father of the child (Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(2)(b) (as so substituted)); (3) he is a guardian of the child (s 1(2)(c) (as so substituted)); (4) he is a special guardian of the child (s 1(2)(ca) (s 1(2) as so substituted; and s 1(2)(ca), (3)(iia), (5A)(a)(ia) added, and s 1(4)(a), (b) further substituted, by the Adoption and Children Act 2002 s 139(1), Sch 3 para 42)); (5) he is a person in whose favour a residence order is in force with respect to the child (Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(2)(d) (as so substituted)); or (6) he has custody of the child (s 1(2)(e) (as so substituted)). For the meaning of 'guardian of a child' see the Children Act 1989 s 105(1) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 144); for the meaning of 'special guardian' see s 14A (as added) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 151); and for the meaning of 'residence order' see s 8(1) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 262) (definitions applied by the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(7)(a) (as so substituted; and amended by the Adoption and Children Act 2002 s 139(1), Sch 3 para 42(1), (6))). A person is treated as having custody of a child if there is in force an order of a court in the United Kingdom awarding him (whether solely or jointly with another person) custody, legal custody or care and control of the child: Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(7)(b) (as so substituted). References to a child's parents and to a child whose parents were (or were not) married to each other at the time of his birth are to be construed in accordance with the Family Law Reform Act 1987 s 1 (which extends their meaning: see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 125); Child Abduction Act 1984 s 3(d) (added by the Children Act 1984 Sch 12 para 39).

A person who could not personally perpetrate an offence contrary to the Child Abduction Act 1989 s 1 (as amended) (see the text and notes 2-10 infra; and PARAS 138-140 post) because he is not connected with the child can be convicted of a conspiracy with someone who is so connected for the abduction of a child by that person: R v Sherry, R v El Yamani [1993] Crim LR 537, CA.

2 For these purposes, a person is regarded as taking a child if he causes or induces the child to accompany him or any other person or causes the child to be taken: Child Abduction Act 1984 s 3(a). His acts need not be the sole cause of the child accompanying him, but they must be an effective cause of the child accompanying him; if they are it is immaterial that there are also other causes, such as the child's state of mind: R v A (Child Abduction) [2000] 2 All ER 177, [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 418, CA (taking under the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2 (see PARA 141 post)). The child's act is irrelevant: R v A (Child Abduction) supra.

3 For these purposes, a person is to be regarded as sending a child if he causes the child to be sent: Child Abduction Act 1984 s 3(b).

4 For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

5 Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(1). For these purposes, 'the appropriate consent', in relation to a child, means: (1) the consent of the child's mother (s 1(3)(a)(i) (as substituted: see note 1 supra)), father (if he has parental responsibility for the child) (s 1(3)(a)(ii) (as so substituted)), any guardian of the child (s 1(3)(a)(iii) (as so substituted)), any special guardian of the child (s 1(3)(a)(iiiia) (as substituted and added: see note 1 supra)), any person in whose favour a residence order is in force with respect to the child (s 1(3)(a)(iv) (as so substituted)), or any person who has custody of the child (s 1(3)(a)(v) (as so substituted)); (2) the leave of the court granted under or by virtue of any provision of the Children Act 1989 Pt II (ss 8-16) (as amended) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARAS 247-269) (Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(3)(b) (as so substituted)); or (3) if any person has custody of the child, the leave of the court which granted custody to him (s 1(3)(c) (as so substituted)). For the meaning of 'parental responsibility' see the Children Act 1989 s 3; and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 134 (definition applied by the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(7)(a) (as so substituted)). A person is treated as having custody of a child if there is in force an order of a court in the United Kingdom awarding him (whether solely or jointly with another person) custody, legal custody or care and control of the child: Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(7)(b) (substituted by the Children Act 1989 s 108(4), Sch 12 para 37(3)).

A person does not commit an offence under the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1 (as amended) by taking or sending a child out of the United Kingdom without obtaining the appropriate consent if either he is a person in whose favour there is a residence order in force with respect to the child and he takes or sends him out of the United Kingdom for a period of less than one month (s 1(4)(a) (as so substituted)) or he is a special guardian of the child and he takes or sends the child out of the United Kingdom for a period of less than three months (s 1(4)(b) (as so substituted)). Section 1(4) (as substituted) does not apply if the person taking or sending the child out of the United Kingdom does so in breach of an order under the Children Act 1989 Pt II (as amended): Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(4A) (as added: see note 1 supra).

As to applications to the police for assistance where danger of removal of the child from the jurisdiction is imminent see Practice Direction [1986] 1 All ER 983, [1986] 1 WLR 475.

7 Ibid s 1(5)(a)(ii).

8 Ibid s 1(5)(b).

9 Ibid s 1(5)(c). This provision does not, however, apply if the person who refused to consent is a person in whose favour there is a residence order in force with respect to the child (s 1(5A)(a)(i) (as added: see note 1 supra)), or is a person who is a special guardian of the child (s 1(5A)(a)(ia) (as so added)) or who has custody of the child (s 1(5A)(a)(ii) (as so added)); or if the person taking or sending the child out of the United Kingdom is, by so acting, in breach of an order made by a court in the United Kingdom (s 1(5A)(b) (as so added)).

138. Abduction of child who is the subject of adoption.

A person connected with a child<sup>1</sup> under the age of 16 who is placed for adoption by an adoption agency<sup>2</sup> or who such an agency is authorised to place for adoption<sup>3</sup> commits an offence if he takes or sends<sup>4</sup> the child out of the United Kingdom<sup>5</sup> without either the consent of each person who has parental responsibility<sup>6</sup> for the child or the leave of the High Court<sup>7</sup>, and a person connected with a child under the age of 16 in respect of whom a placement order<sup>8</sup> is in force or a parental responsibility order<sup>9</sup> has been made, or in respect of whom an application for an adoption order<sup>10</sup>, a placement order or a parental responsibility order has been made but not disposed of, commits an offence if he takes or sends the child out of the United Kingdom without the leave of the court<sup>11</sup> which made the order<sup>12</sup> or, in respect of pending orders, the court to which the application was made<sup>13</sup>. A person does not, however, commit an offence under these provisions by taking or sending a child out of the United Kingdom without obtaining the appropriate consent if he is a special guardian<sup>14</sup> of the child and he takes or sends the child out of the United Kingdom for a period of less than three months<sup>15</sup> or if he provides the home of a child who is placed for adoption by an adoption agency, who such an agency is authorised to place for adoption, or in respect of whom a placement order is in force, and he takes or sends him out of the United Kingdom for a period of less than one month<sup>16</sup>.

Where a child is the subject of adoption<sup>17</sup> and is also in local authority care<sup>18</sup>, these provisions apply to the exclusion of those concerned with the abduction of children in local authority care<sup>19</sup>.

Provision is made for the punishment and prosecution of child abduction offences<sup>20</sup>.

- 58 (2) that, at the time of the alleged offence, he believed that the child had attained the age of 16<sup>10</sup>.

Provision is made for the punishment and prosecution of child abduction offences<sup>11</sup>.

1 A person other than: (1) where the father and mother of the child were married to each other at the time of the birth, the child's father and mother (Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2(2)(a) (ss 1(2), 2(2) substituted, s 2(1) amended, and s 2(3) added, by the Children Act 1989 s 108(4), Sch 12 paras 37, 38)); (2) where the father and mother were not so married, the child's mother (Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2(2)(b) (as so substituted)); (3) a guardian of the child (ss 1(2)(c), 2(2)(c) (as so substituted)); (4) a special guardian of the child (s 1(2)(ca) (s 1(2) as so substituted; and s 1(2)(ca) added by the Adoption and Children Act 2002 s 139(1), Sch 3 para 42(1), (2))); (5) a person in whose favour a residence order is in force with respect to the child (Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1(2)(d) (as so substituted)); or (6) a person who has custody of the child (s 1(2)(e) (as so substituted)). For the meanings of 'guardian of a child', 'special guardian' and 'residence order' see PARA 137 note 1 ante. As to references to a child's parents and to a child whose parents were (or were not) married to each other at the time of his birth, and as to when a person is treated as having custody of a child, see PARA 137 note 1 ante.

2 As to when a person 'takes' a child see PARA 137 note 2 ante.

3 For these purposes, a person is regarded as 'detaining' a child if he causes the child to be detained or induces the child to remain with him or any other person: Child Abduction Act 1984 s 3(c).

4 No removal from one place to another is required by the words 'so as to remove him from the lawful control of any person having lawful control of the child'; and who has control of a child is a question of fact: R v Leather [1994] 1 FCR 877, CA. A relevant question relating to the phrase is whether, without lawful authority or reasonable excuse, the child was deflected by some action by the defendant from that which with the consent of his parents, or other person having lawful control at the time, he would otherwise have been doing, into some activity induced by the defendant: R v Leather supra at 882. 'So as to' is concerned with the objective consequence of the taking or detaining, and not with the defendant's intention: R v Mousir [1987] Crim LR 561, [1987] LS Gaz R 1328, CA. Cf Re Owens [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 195, sub nom O v Governor of Holloway Prison [2000] 1 FLR 147, DC ('so as to' means 'with the intention of' removing the child from lawful control, and not merely 'with the effect' of such removal; and 'lawful control' is not to be equated with 'legal custody'). In Re Owens supra the court was not referred to R v Leather supra or R v Mousir supra. In Foster v DPP [2004] EWHC 2955 (Admin) at [26]-[27], [2005] 1 FCR 153 at [26]-[27], DC, Pitchford J stated that he was bound by the decisions in R v Leather supra and R v Mousir supra and that it did not seem that the applicant's successful arguments in Re Owens supra on the construction of the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2 (as amended) could or should have survived them.

5 Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2(1)(a) (as amended: see note 1 supra). This provision creates two separate means by which the offence may be committed, and neither is an alternative to the other: Foster v DPP [2004] EWHC 2955 (Admin), [2005] 1 FCR 153, DC. The mens rea required for an offence under the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2 (as amended) is an intentional or reckless taking or detention of a child under the age of 16, the effect or objective consequence of which was to remove or keep that child from the lawful control of any person having or being entitled to lawful control of him: Foster v DPP supra. The distinction between removal from a person having control, and keeping from a person entitled to control, is intended to reflect materially different states of affairs. The first requires the child there and then to be in the lawful control of someone when taken or detained. The second requires only that the child is kept out of lawful control of someone entitled to it when taken or detained: Foster v DPP supra. This provision does not apply to any person providing a refuge at a home certified by the Home Secretary (or to a foster parent likewise certified) who provides a refuge for a child at that home (or who provides foster parent refuge in accordance with the Children Act 1989 s 51): see s 51(6), (7)(d); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 609.

6 Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2(1)(b) (as amended: see note 1 supra). See note 5 supra.

7 As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953) Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 post. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

8 Child Abduction Act 1984 s 2(3)(a)(i) (as substituted: see note 1 supra).

9 Ibid s 2(3)(a)(ii) (as substituted: see note 1 supra). This defence is not available where the defendant makes a mistake of identity (ie takes child A thinking him to be child B, and believing himself to be connected to child B); the issue is one of reasonable excuse: R v Berry [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 226, CA.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(vii) False Imprisonment, Kidnapping and Child Abduction/142. Punishment of, and prosecution for, statutory child abduction offences.

142. Punishment of, and prosecution for, statutory child abduction offences.

A person guilty of a statutory offence of child abduction<sup>1</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years<sup>2</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>4</sup>, or to both<sup>5</sup>. No prosecution for such an offence may, however, be instituted except by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>6</sup>.

1    Is an offence under the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1 (as amended), as appropriate where modified by the Schedule (as amended) (see PARAS 137-140 ante) or s 2 (as amended) (see PARA 141 ante).

2    Ibid s 4(1)(b).

4    As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

5    Child Abduction Act 1984 s 4(1)(a). As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for an offence under s 1 (as amended) has in his possession a firearm or imitation firearm see PARA 677 post.

6    Ibid s 4(2). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post. The common law offence of kidnapping may be committed by a parent or person connected with the child: see PARA 136 ante. Where a count alleging abduction contrary to the Child Abduction Act 1984 s 1 (as amended) encompasses the allegation against the defendant, the inclusion in the indictment of a count alleging kidnapping is to be deprecated: R v C (Kidnapping: Abduction) [1991] 2 FLR 252, [1991] Fam Law 522, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(viii) Cruelty to Children/143. Cruelty to persons under sixteen.

(viii) Cruelty to Children

143. Cruelty to persons under sixteen.

If any person who has attained the age of 16 years and has responsibility<sup>1</sup> for any child or young person<sup>2</sup> under that age, wilfully assaults<sup>3</sup>, ill-treats, neglects<sup>4</sup>, abandons<sup>5</sup>, or exposes<sup>6</sup> him, or causes or procures him to be assaulted, ill-treated, neglected, abandoned or exposed in a manner likely<sup>7</sup> to cause him unnecessary suffering or injury to health<sup>8</sup>, he is guilty of an offence<sup>9</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or to a fine, or to both<sup>10</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>11</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum, or to both<sup>12</sup>.

A person may be convicted under these provisions notwithstanding that actual suffering or injury to health, or the likelihood of actual suffering or injury to health, was obviated by the action of another person<sup>13</sup> and notwithstanding the death of the child or young person in question<sup>14</sup>.

1 The persons who are presumed to have responsibility for a child or young person for these purposes are any person who either has parental responsibility (within the meaning of the Children Act 1989 s 3: see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 134) for that child or young person (Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 17(1)(a)(i) (s 17 substituted by the Children Act 1989 s 108(5), Sch 13 paras 2, 5)) or is otherwise legally liable to maintain him (Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 17(1)(a)(ii) (as so substituted)) and any person who has care of him (s 17(1)(b) (as so substituted)). A person who is presumed to be responsible for a child or young person by virtue of s 17(1)(a) (as substituted) is not to be taken to have ceased to be responsible for him by reason only that he does not have care of him: s 17(2) (as so substituted).

2 For these purposes, 'child' means a person under the age of 14 years; and 'young person' means a person who has attained the age of 14 years and is under the age of 18 years: ibid s 107(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 68, Sch 8 para 1(3)). In this context the term 'young person' must, however, be read subject to the age limitation referred to in the text. As to the protection of children from cruelty and danger generally see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 611 et seq.

3 'Wilfully' appears to govern all expressions such as 'assaults', 'ill-treats', 'neglects' etc, as they are also qualified by the words 'in a manner likely to cause unnecessary suffering or injury to health'. The offence of wilfully neglecting a child contrary to the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1 (as amended) (see the text and notes 4-14 infra) is not an offence of strict liability and is to be judged by a subjective test as to the risk of suffering or injury to health: R v Sheppard [1981] AC 394, 72 Cr App Rep 82, HL. The requirement of wilfulness can be satisfied only where the defendant is aware that the child's health may be at risk if it is not provided with medical aid, or where his unawareness of this fact is due to his not caring whether the child's health was at risk or not: R v Sheppard supra. The Court of Appeal in A-G's Reference (No 3 of 2003) [2004] EWCA Crim 868, [2005] QB 73, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 366, held that there was no material difference between the definition of 'wilfulness' in R v Sheppard and that of 'recklessness' adapted in R v G, R v R [2003] UKHL 50, [2004] 1 AC 1034, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 237 (as to which see PARA 11 ante).

The Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1 (as amended) does not create five distinct offences of 'assaulting', 'neglecting' etc but one single offence dealing with various forms of cruelty (R v Hayles [1969] 1 QB 364, 53 Cr App Rep 36, CA); however, the prosecution should choose with care the word which more precisely and appropriately than any other describes the conduct complained of (R v Beard (1987) 85 Cr App Rep 395, CA). To fall within the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1 (as amended) an assault must be one which is likely to cause unnecessary suffering or injury to health: R v Hatton [1925] 2 KB 322, 19 Cr App Rep 29, CCA.

The particulars of the offence should include the word 'wilfully': R v Walker (1934) 24 Cr App Rep 117, CCA.

4 For these purposes: (1) a parent or other person legally liable to maintain a child or young person, or the legal guardian of a child or young person, is deemed to have neglected him in a manner likely to cause injury to his health if he has failed to provide adequate food, clothing, medical aid or lodging for him, or if, being unable to provide it, he fails to take steps to procure it under the enactments applicable in that behalf (Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1(2)(a) (amended by the Children Act 1989 Sch 12 para 2; and by the National Assistance (Adaptation of Enactments) Regulations 1950, SI 1950/174)); and (2) where it is proved that the death of an infant under three years of age was caused by suffocation, not being suffocation caused by disease or the presence of any foreign body in the throat or air passages of the infant, while the infant was in bed with some other person who has attained the age of 16 years, that other person, if he was, when he went to bed, under the influence of drink, is deemed to have neglected the infant in a manner likely to cause injury to its health (Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1(2)(b)).

'Neglect' may include the refusal to allow a child to undergo an operation to remove adenoids; the question as to whether it does or not is a question of fact dependent for its answer on the circumstances of the case: Oakey v Jackson [1914] 1 KB 216. Deliberate or reckless omission to supply medical or surgical relief necessary for a child is within the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1 (as amended): R v Senior [1899] 1 QB 283, CCR; R v Sheppard [1981] AC 394, 72 Cr App Rep 82, HL; and see note 3 supra. The possibility that resort to public assistance by the mother might have obviated the effect of the father's neglect is no answer to a charge under the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1 (as amended): Cole v Pendleton (1896) 60 JP 359.

5 'Abandon' means to leave a child to its fate: Mitchell v Wright 1905 SC 568 at 574, Ct of Sess, per Lord Dunedin; R v Boulton (1957) 41 Cr App Rep 105, CCA. Leaving a child in court causing some mental suffering is not an abandonment: R v Whibley [1938] 3 All ER 777, 26 Cr App Rep 184, CCA.

6 Any person who unlawfully abandons or exposes any child under the age of two years, whereby his life is endangered or his health is or is likely to be permanently injured, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum, or to both: Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 27; Penal Servitude Act 1891 s 1(1); Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1; Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 5(d). See PARA 1103 post. As from a day to be appointed the maximum six-month term referred to above is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES' COURTS ACT 1980 (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS VOL 92 (2010) PARA 141. As to procedural provisions applying to offences under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 27 see PARA 1164 post.

For the purposes of an offence under s 27 the exposure need not necessarily consist of the physical placing of the child somewhere with intent to injure him: R v Williams (1910) 26 TLR 290, 4 Cr App Rep 89, CCA. See also R v Falkingham (1870) LR 1 CCR 222 (five week old child sent by railway in a hamper); R v White (1871) LR 1 CCR 331 (nine month old child left outside house from 7 pm to 1 am).

7 For these purposes, 'likely' is to be understood as excluding only what can fairly be described as highly unlikely: R v Wills [1990] Crim LR 714, CA (applying dictum of Lord Diplock in R v Sheppard [1981] AC 394 at 405, 72 Cr App Rep 82 at 87, HL).

8 'Injury to health' includes injury to or loss of sight, or hearing, or limb, or organ of the body, and any mental derangement: Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1(1).

9 In relation to an offence under ibid s 1 (as amended), battery of a child cannot be justified on the ground that it constitutes reasonable punishment: see the Children Act 2004 s 58(1), (2); and PARA 161 post. Where the facts of a case justify it, a prosecution may be brought under an enactment other than the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1 (as amended) even though this may entail a more severe penalty: R v Beanland (1970) 54 Cr App Rep 289, CA. As to procedural provisions applying to offences under the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1 (as amended) see PARA 1164 post. For sentencing guidelines in cases involving cruelty to children see A-G's Reference (No 96 of 2005), R v Didi [2006] EWCA Crim 114, [2006] All ER (D) 89 (Jan).

10 Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1(1)(a) (amended by the Children and Young Persons Act 1963 s 64(1), (3), Sch 3 para 1, Sch 5; the Children Act 1975 s 108(1)(b), Sch 4 Pt III; the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 45(1); and the Children Act 1989 Sch 13 para 2). Where the offence is committed by a mother suffering from post-natal depression, a sentence beyond a short custodial sentence is inappropriate: R v Isaac [1998] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 266, CA. See also R v Weaver [1998] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 56, CA (neglect of child resulting in death).

13 Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 1(3)(a).

14 Ibid s 1(3)(b). If a child dies as a result of neglect in respect of which someone is criminally liable under s 1 (as amended), it does not necessarily follow that the person concerned is guilty of manslaughter: see R v Lowe [1973] QB 702, 57 Cr App Rep 365, CA; and PARA 99 ante.

144. Exposing child under the age of 12 to risk of burning.

If any person who has attained the age of 16 years, having responsibility for any child<sup>1</sup> under the age of 12 years<sup>2</sup>, allows the child to be in any room containing an open fire grate, or any heating appliance liable to cause injury to a person by contact with it, which is not sufficiently protected to guard against the risk of the child being burnt or scalded, without taking reasonable precautions against that risk, and the child is killed or suffers serious injury for that reason, that person is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 1 on the standard scale<sup>3</sup>.

1 As to responsibility for a child see PARA 143 note 1 ante.

2 As to proof of age see PARA 1470 post.

As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142. Neither the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 11 nor any proceedings taken under it affects the liability of any person to be proceeded against by indictment for any indictable offence: s 11 proviso. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(viii) Cruelty to Children/145. Tattooing of minors.

145. Tattooing of minors.

It is an offence to tattoo<sup>1</sup> a person under the age of 18<sup>2</sup> except when the tattoo is performed for medical reasons by a duly qualified medical practitioner or by a person working under his direction<sup>3</sup>. It is a defence, however, for a person charged to show<sup>4</sup> that at the time the tattoo was performed he had reasonable cause to believe that the person tattooed was of or over the age of 18 and did in fact so believe<sup>5</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>6</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tattoo' means the insertion into the skin of any colouring material designed to leave a permanent mark: Tattooing of Minors Act 1969 s 3.

2 As to proof of age see PARA 1470 post.

3 Tattooing of Minors Act 1969 s 1.

4 As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 et seq post. ## (ix) Offences against Employees

146. Neglect to provide food etc for employees.

Any employer<sup>1</sup> who, being legally liable to provide for an employee<sup>2</sup> necessary food, clothing or lodging, wilfully and without lawful excuse refuses or neglects to provide the same, or unlawfully and maliciously<sup>3</sup> does or causes to be done any bodily harm to the employee, so that his life is endangered or his health is, or is likely to be, permanently injured, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>5</sup>, or to both<sup>6</sup>.

Where an employer<sup>7</sup>, being legally liable to provide for his employee<sup>8</sup> necessary food, clothing, medical aid or lodging, wilfully and without lawful excuse refuses or neglects to provide the same, so that the health of the employee is or is likely to be seriously or permanently injured, he is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale<sup>10</sup>.

1 The Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 26 (see the text and notes 2-6 infra) refers to a 'master or mistress'.

2 Ibid s 26 refers to any 'apprentice or servant'.

3 For the meaning of 'maliciously' see PARA 119 text to notes 12-15 ante.

4 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

9 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). ### A. COMMON ASSAULT AND BATTERY

147. Assault and battery.

A person commits an assault if he intentionally or recklessly causes<sup>1</sup> another person to apprehend the application to his body of immediate, unlawful<sup>2</sup> force<sup>3</sup>. An assault can be committed by words alone if they cause the necessary apprehension<sup>4</sup>. The requirement of the apprehension of immediate force is satisfied if the prosecution proves a fear of force at some time not excluding the immediate future<sup>5</sup>.

A person commits a battery if he intentionally or recklessly applies<sup>6</sup> unlawful<sup>7</sup> force to the body of another person<sup>8</sup>. The slightest degree of force, even mere touching, suffices<sup>9</sup>. It is not necessary that the victim should feel the force through his clothes: a touching of a person's clothes is the equivalent of touching him<sup>10</sup>. Without the application, however, of some force there cannot be a battery. Thus causing someone psychiatric harm by a threat does not constitute a battery<sup>11</sup>. Similarly, the use of force merely to pull away from another does not constitute a battery<sup>12</sup>.

Although an assault is a separate, independent crime and should be treated as such<sup>13</sup>, for practical purposes the term 'assault' is generally synonymous with 'battery' and is used to mean the actual intended use of unlawful force to another person<sup>14</sup>. Where there is actual as well as apprehended unlawful force the charge should be assault by beating rather than assault and battery since the latter form is duplicitous<sup>15</sup>.

1 As to causation see PARA 7 ante. A mere omission to act which creates the requisite apprehension is not enough: Fagan v Metropolitan Police Comr [1969] 1 QB 439, 52 Cr App Rep 700, DC. The only exception is where the defendant has created a dangerous situation (even inadvertently) in which case he is under a duty to take such steps as lie within his power to counteract the danger, and a failure to do so will suffice if it results in the necessary apprehension: DPP v Santana-Bermudez [2003] EWHC 2908 (Admin), [2004] Crim LR 471, DC (applying R v Miller [1983] 2 AC 161, 77 Cr App Rep 17, HL).

7 Under certain circumstances it may be a defence that the defendant was using only such force as was necessary to serve civil process: see Harrison v Hodgson (1830) 10 B & C 445. Serving process by thrusting a document into the fold of a man's coat is not necessarily a battery: see Rose v Kempthorne (1910) 103 LT 730.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/ (x) Assault/A. COMMON ASSAULT AND BATTERY/148. Prosecutions for assault; penalty.

148. Prosecutions for assault; penalty.

Common assault and battery are summary offences and a person guilty of either of them is liable on conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>1</sup>, to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale<sup>2</sup>, or to both<sup>3</sup>.

A count charging a person with common assault<sup>4</sup> may be included in an indictment if the charge is founded on the same facts or evidence as a count charging an indictable offence<sup>5</sup> or is part of a series of offences of the same or similar character as an indictable offence which is also charged<sup>6</sup>, but only if (in either case) the facts or evidence relating to the offence were disclosed to a magistrates' court inquiring into the offence as examining justices or are disclosed by material served<sup>7</sup> on the person charged after he has been sent for trial<sup>8</sup>. Where a count charging common assault is included in an indictment, the offence must be tried in the same manner as if it were an indictable offence; but the Crown Court may only deal with the offender in respect of it in a manner in which a magistrates' court could have dealt with him<sup>9</sup>.

1 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS VOL 92 (2010) PARA 142.

3 Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 39. See DPP v Taylor, DPP v Little [1992] QB 645, 95 Cr App Rep 28, DC (assault and battery separate statutory offences; information alleging assault and battery contrary to Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 39 therefore bad for duplicity). For the separate offence of racially or religiously aggravated assault see PARA 155 post.

4 The reference to 'common assault' in the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 40 (as amended) (see the text and notes 5-9 infra) includes a battery: R v Lynsey [1995] 3 All ER 654, [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 667, CA.

5 Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 40(1)(a).

6 Ibid s 40(1)(b).

7 Ie in pursuance of regulations made under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 Sch 3 para 1 (procedure where person sent for trial under s 51 (as substituted and amended) or s 51A (as added) (see PARAS 1132-1133 post).

8 Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 40(1), (3)(a) (s 40(1) amended by the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 47, Sch 1 para 34; the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 119, Sch 8 para 66; and the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 para 60(1), (7)(b)). See PARA 1211 post. As from a day to be appointed it is no longer permissible to include in an indictment a count charging a person with a summary offence of common assault by virtue of the facts or evidence relating to the offence having been disclosed to a magistrates' court inquiring into the offence as examining justices: see the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 40(1) (as so amended; prospectively further amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 3 para 60(7)(a)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

9 Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 40(2). See PARA 1233 post. For the purposes of the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 6(3) (alternative verdicts: see PARA 1335 post), an offence to which the Criminal Justice Act 1988 applies is an offence which falls within the jurisdiction of the Crown Court, even if a count charging it is not included in the indictment: Criminal Law Act 1967 s 6(3A) (added by the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 11).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/ (x) Assault/B. AGGRAVATED ASSAULT/149. Assault occasioning actual bodily harm.

B. AGGRAVATED ASSAULT

149. Assault occasioning actual bodily harm.

Any person who is convicted on indictment of any assault<sup>1</sup> occasioning actual bodily harm<sup>2</sup> is guilty of an offence<sup>3</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum<sup>5</sup>, or to both<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to assault and battery see PARA 147 ante. The mens rea for the offence of assault occasioning actual bodily harm is identical with that required for assault or battery, as the case may be (see PARA 147 text and note 1 ante); no mens rea is required as to the element of actual bodily harm: R v Savage, R v Parmenter [1992] 1 AC 699, 94 Cr App Rep 193, HL (approving R v Roberts (1971) 56 Cr App Rep 95, CA).

2 'Bodily harm' has its ordinary meaning and includes any hurt or injury calculated to interfere with the health or comfort of the victim. Such hurt or injury need not be permanent but must be more than merely transient and trifling: R v Donovan [1934] 2 KB 498, 25 Cr App Rep 1, CCA. See also R v Miller [1954] 2 QB 282, [1954] 2 All ER 529. The meaning of 'actual bodily harm' was explained further in R v Chan Fook [1994] 2 All ER 552, 99 Cr App Rep 147, CA (approved in R v Ireland, R v Burstow [1998] AC 147, [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 177, HL), where it was held that 'harm' is a synonym for 'injury' and 'actual' indicates that the injury should not be so trivial as to be wholly insignificant (although there was no need for it to be permanent); that 'bodily harm' is not limited to harm to the skin, flesh and bones of the victim (on which point see also DPP v Smith [2006] EWHC 94 (Admin), [2006] 2 All ER 16, [2006] 1 WLR 1571, DC, in which it was held that the cutting of a victim's hair constitutes actual bodily harm for these purposes, since that part of the hair that was attached to the scalp was 'bodily' and the hair itself, whether alive beneath the skin or dead above it, was an attribute and part of the human body); that the 'body' of the victim includes all parts of his body, including his organs, his nervous system and his brain; that 'bodily injury' therefore includes injury to any of those parts of the victim's body responsible for his mental or other faculties; and, accordingly, that 'actual bodily harm' is capable of including an identifiable psychiatric injury, but not panic or an hysterical or nervous condition (see also R v Dholiwal [2006] EWCA Crim 1139, [2006] All ER (D) 236 (May)). Where psychiatric injury is alleged but not admitted by the defence, the question whether or not the assault occasioned psychiatric injury should not be left to the jury in the absence of expert evidence: R v Chan Fook supra; R v Morris [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 386, CA.

Loss of consciousness is 'harm', because it involves an injurious impairment to the victim's sensory functions: R (on the application of T) v DPP [2003] EWHC 266 (Admin), [2003] Crim LR 622. As to causation see PARA 7 ante.

3 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 47 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(2), Sch 16). As to the position where actual bodily harm is alleged to result from the cumulative effect of a course of conduct see R v Cox [1998] Crim LR 810, CA. In relation to an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 47 (as amended), battery of a child cannot be justified on the ground that it constitutes reasonable punishment: see the Children Act 2004 s 58(1), (2)(b); and PARA 161 post. As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 47 (as amended) has in his possession a firearm or an imitation firearm see PARA 677 post; and as to procedural provisions applying where an offence involving bodily injury to a child or young person is charged see PARA 1164 post. As to the offence of racially or religiously aggravated assault occasioning actual bodily harm see PARA 155 post.

4 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

6 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 47; Penal Servitude Act 1891 s 1(1); Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1; Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 5(h) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 Sch 16).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/ (x) Assault/B. AGGRAVATED ASSAULT/150. Aggravated assault; assault committed in certain specified circumstances.

150. Aggravated assault; assault committed in certain specified circumstances.

Specific statutory provision is made for the punishment of persons who have committed an assault in specified circumstances. Examples are the offences of assault:

- 59 (1) with intent to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of the defendant or of any other person for any offence<sup>1</sup>;
- 60 (2) on a constable, or a person assisting a constable, in the execution of his duty<sup>2</sup>;
- 61 (3) on a magistrate or other lawfully authorised person on account of his preserving a wreck<sup>3</sup>; and
- 62 (4) on a clergyman celebrating divine service or who is en route to or from doing so<sup>4</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/ (x) Assault/C. EFFECT OF SUMMARY CONVICTION OR DISMISSAL OF INFORMATION/151. Effect of summary conviction or dismissal of information.

C. EFFECT OF SUMMARY CONVICTION OR DISMISSAL OF INFORMATION

151. Effect of summary conviction or dismissal of information.

Any person who has been convicted on summary trial of assault or battery<sup>1</sup> on an information<sup>2</sup> preferred by or on behalf of the person aggrieved and has undergone the imprisonment awarded or paid any fine and costs, or against whom a written charge or information alleging assault or battery preferred by or on behalf of the person aggrieved has been dismissed, and who has obtained a certificate of dismissal<sup>3</sup>, is released from all further or other proceedings, civil or criminal, whether taken by the prosecutor or any other person aggrieved<sup>4</sup>, for the same cause<sup>5</sup>.

1 As to assault or battery see PARAS 147-148 ante.

2 As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 post. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 If the justices, upon the hearing of any case of assault or battery upon the merits where the written charge or information was preferred by or on behalf of the party aggrieved, deem the offence not to be proved or find the assault or battery to have been justified, or so trifling as not to merit any punishment, and accordingly dismiss the written charge or information, they must forthwith make out a certificate, stating the fact of such dismissal, and must deliver such certificate to the party against whom the complaint was preferred: Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 44 (amended by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 50; the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170, Sch 15 paras 2, 3, Sch 16; and the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), (3), Sch 8 paras 41, 43, Sch 10). The certificate is a valid bar to an action for assault although not applied for when the summons was heard and not drawn up until after the parties had left: Hancock v Somes (1859) 1 E & E 795. The certificate must be delivered 'forthwith' on demand, not on dismissal (Costar v Hetherington (1859) 1 E & E 802) and should state the grounds on which the charge is dismissed (Skuse v Davis (1839) 10 Ad & El 635).

Where the defendant appeared and pleaded not guilty, and the complainant declined to proceed, stating he meant to bring an action, those proceedings were held to constitute such a hearing: Tunnicliffe v Tedd (1848) 5 CB 553. Similarly, where a complainant purported to withdraw the summons and the defendant appeared and asked for a certificate, which was granted, further proceedings were barred: Vaughton v Bradshaw (1860) 9 CBNS 103; cf Reed v Nutt (1890) 24 QBD 669, DC (where the certificate was held to be no bar to a subsequent action, since there had been no hearing on the merits because the summons had been withdrawn for want of prosecution); Ellis v Burton [1975] 1 All ER 395, [1975] 1 WLR 386, DC (wrong to issue certificate after plea of guilty).

4 Masper v Brown (1876) 1 CPD 97.

5 Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 45 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170, Sch 15 paras 2, 4); Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(2). The Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 45 (as amended) has effect subject to the Criminal Procedure and Investigations Act 1996 s 54(4) (which provides that where an order is made quashing a tainted acquittal, proceedings may be taken against the acquitted person for the offence of which he was acquitted: see PARA 1276 post): s 57(1). For an example of the operation of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 45 (as amended) in relation to civil proceedings see Wong v Parkside Health NHS Trust [2001] EWCA Civ 1721, [2003] 3 All ER 932, CA. Although the charge may have been of a simple assault, the certificate of dismissal or the conviction is a bar to an indictment for a more serious assault arising out of the same transaction (R v Walker (1843) 2 Mood & R 446; R v Elrington (1861) 1 B & S 688; Holden v King (1876) 46 LJQB 75; R v Miles (1890) 24 QBD 423, CCR), but not to an indictment for manslaughter if the person assaulted subsequently dies (R v Morris (1867) LR 1 CCR 90) nor probably to an indictment for rape (see R v Miles supra at 433 (obiter) per Hawkins J). Nor does it prevent justices ordering a defendant to enter into recognisances to keep the peace: Ex p Davis (1871) 35 JP 551. On conviction for unlawful wounding, the imposition of a sentence of imprisonment and payment to the plaintiff of a sum of money for costs and allowances for loss of time was held to be no bar to an action for damages for bodily suffering, permanent injury and medical expenses arising out of the same assault: Lowe v Horwarth (1865) 13 LT 297. The conviction of an employee or agent does not operate as a release of the employer: Dyer v Munday [1895] 1 QB 742. As to the effect of the bar on appeals see Magee v Storey [1929] NI 134, CA.

There is no rule corresponding to that under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 45 (as amended) if the prosecution is not a private prosecution: see Wong v Parkside Health NHS Trust supra at [16].

A conviction followed by the defendant's entering into recognisances is not sufficient to establish a bar: Hartley v Hindmarsh (1866) LR 1 CP 553; Murray v Fitzpatrick (1914) 78 JP Jo 521; Gibbons v Harris (1956) 106 L Jo 828, County Court. Cf Jones v Lamond (1935) 79 Sol Jo 859, CA.

An employer's disciplinary inquiry into an employee's alleged misconduct does not fall within the ambit of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 45 (as amended); and a certificate of acquittal does not release the employee from such an inquiry: Saeed v Inner London Education Authority [1985] ICR 637.

(xi) Harassment

152. Prohibitions of harassment and offence of harassment.

A person must not pursue a course of conduct<sup>1</sup> which amounts to harassment<sup>2</sup> of another person<sup>3</sup>, and which he knows or ought to know amounts to harassment of the other<sup>4</sup>. A person also must not pursue a course of conduct which involves harassment of two or more persons<sup>5</sup>, which he knows or ought to know involves harassment of those persons<sup>6</sup>, and by which he intends to persuade any person<sup>7</sup> either not to do something that he is entitled or required to do<sup>8</sup> or to do something that he is not under any obligation to do<sup>9</sup>.

These provisions do not, however, apply to a course of conduct if the person who pursued it shows<sup>10</sup> that the course of conduct was pursued for the purpose of preventing or detecting crime<sup>11</sup>, under any enactment or rule of law or to comply with any condition or requirement imposed under any enactment<sup>12</sup>, or was reasonable in the particular circumstances<sup>13</sup>. In addition, the Secretary of State may certify that anything done on behalf of the Crown for national security or other purposes is exempt from these provisions<sup>14</sup>.

A person who pursues a course of conduct in breach of these provisions is guilty of an offence<sup>15</sup>, and liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>16</sup>, to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale<sup>17</sup>, or to both<sup>18</sup>.

1 A 'course of conduct' must involve: (1) in the case of conduct in relation to a single person, conduct on at least two occasions in relation to that person (Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 7(3)(a) (ss 1(1A), 7(5) added, ss 1(2), (3), 2(1) amended, and s 7(3) substituted, by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 125(1)-(3), (7))); or (2) in the case of conduct in relation to two or more persons, conduct on at least one occasion in relation to each of those persons (Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 7(3)(b) (as so substituted)). For these purposes, a person's conduct on any occasion is to be taken, if aided, abetted, counselled or procured by another, to be conduct on that occasion of the other (as well as conduct of the person whose conduct it is) (s 7(3A)(a) (s 7(3A) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 44(1))) and to be conduct in relation to which the other's knowledge and purpose, and what he ought to have known, are the same as they were in relation to what was contemplated or reasonably foreseeable at the time of the aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring (s 7(3A)(b) (as so added)).

'Conduct' includes speech: s 7(4). Although there can be a course of conduct comprising only two incidents, the fewer the incidents and the wider apart they are spread the less likely it is that a finding of harassment can reasonably be made: Lau v DPP [2000] 1 FLR 799, [2000] Crim LR 580, DC. Nevertheless, incidents as far apart as a year can constitute a course of conduct, eg a threat made once a year on a person's birthday: Lau v DPP supra. A finding that three separate and distinct telephone calls to a former partner within the space of five minutes constituted a course of conduct has been held not to be irrational; the time interval between the calls was only one factor to be taken into account: Kelly v DPP [2002] EWHC 1428 (Admin), [2003] Crim LR 45, DC. The incidents do not have to be similar in nature but it may be more difficult to prove a course of conduct if they are different, and will be particularly difficult if the parties have been reconciled during that period: R v H [2001] 1 FLR 580, [2001] Crim LR 318, CA. The issue is whether or not the incidents, however many there may have been, can properly be said to be so connected in type and in context as to justify the conclusion that they can amount to a course of conduct, and when directing the jury on a charge of harassment based on incidents few in number and widely spaced in time, it is necessary for the trial judge to point this out to the jury: R v Nitin Patel [2004] EWCA Crim 3284, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 440; and see also Lau v DPP supra; Pratt v DPP [2001] EWHC 483 (Admin), 165 JP 800.

The publication of a series of newspaper articles can constitute conduct amounting to harassment (Thomas v News Group Newspapers [2001] EWCA Civ 1233, [2002] EMLR 78 (publication of racial criticism causing distress)), as can the flying of banners and distribution of leaflets displaying abusive and derogatory remarks (Howlett v Holding [2006] EWHC 41 (QB), 150 Sol Jo LB 161). Where only a small number of incidents of behaviour is involved, prosecutors should be cautious in bringing charges for the offence of harassment contrary to the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 1(1), and should ensure not merely that two or more incidents occurred but that such repetitious behaviour had caused harassment to the other: Pratt v DPP supra.

In the context of harassment by way of speech, a person's freedom of expression under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 10 does not have automatic precedence over another person's right under art 8 to his physical and psychological integrity: Howlett v Holding supra. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

The Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 1 (as amended) should be given a restrictive interpretation so as not to cover conduct involved in pursuance of litigation by a claimant: Tuppen v Microsoft Corp Ltd (2000) Times, 15 November (a case under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 3 (see TORT vol 97 (2010) PARA 557)). However, placing a person under secret surveillance in an attempt to prove that he was committing benefit fraud amounted to harassment for these purposes: Howlett v Holding supra.

2 References to harassing a person include alarming him or causing him distress: Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 7(2). For other provisions about harassment under legislation other than the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 see PARAS 560, 609 post.

3 Ibid s 1(1)(a). References to a person, in the context of the harassment of a person, are references to a person who is an individual: s 7(5) (as added: see note 1 supra).

4 Ibid s 1(1)(b). A person whose course of conduct is in question ought to know that his conduct amounts to or involves harassment of another if a reasonable person in possession of the same information would think the course of conduct amounted to or involved harassment of the other: s 1(2) (as amended: see note 1 supra). The 'reasonable person' in this context is a hypothetical reasonable person; he is not endowed with the defendant's standards or characteristics: R v Colohan [2001] EWCA Crim 1251, [2001] 2 FLR 757, [2001] Crim LR 845.

5 Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 1(1A)(a) (as added: see note 1 supra).

6 Ibid s 1(1A)(b) (as added: see note 1 supra).

7 Ie any person, whether or not one of those mentioned in the text and notes 5-6 supra: ibid s 1(1A) (as added: see note 1 supra).

8 Ibid s 1(1A)(c)(i) (as added: see note 1 supra).

9 Ibid s 1(1A)(c)(ii) (as added: see note 1 supra).

10 As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden or an evidential one see PARA 1368 et seq post; and see also Thomas v News Group Newspapers Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1233, [2002] EMLR 78 (a civil case in which the Court of Appeal stated that the burden of proof was on the defendant). See further the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence); and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 142.

11 Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 1(3)(a) (as amended: see note 1 supra). This defence exists only for the benefit of law enforcement agencies and cannot be used by private individuals: Howlett v Holding [2006] EWHC 41 (QB), 150 Sol Jo LB 161.

12 Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 1(3)(b) (as amended: see note 1 supra).

13 Ibid s 1(3)(c) (as amended: see note 1 supra). See DPP v Selvanayagam, DPP v Moseley, DPP v Woodling (1999) Times, 23 June, DC (Collins J stated that in determining whether conduct was reasonable a court had to balance the interests of the victim against the purpose and nature of the course of conduct pursued, including the right to peaceful protest; however, the Divisional Court agreed that, if the course of conduct in question involved breach of an injunction, it could not be reasonable conduct, at least unless the circumstances were very special). As to an attempted use of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 to limit rights of protest and demonstration see Huntingdon Life Sciences Ltd v Curtin (1997) Times, 11 December.

14 See the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 12(1), under which it is provided that if the Secretary of State certifies that in his opinion anything done by a specified person on a specified occasion related to national security, the economic well-being of the United Kingdom, or the prevention or detection of serious crime, and was done on behalf of the Crown, that certificate is conclusive evidence that the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 does not apply to any conduct of that person on that occasion. 'Specified' means specified in the certificate in question: s 12(2). A document purporting to be a certificate under s 12(1) may be received in evidence and, unless the contrary is proved, treated as being such a certificate: s 12(3).

15 Ibid s 2(1) (as amended: see note 1 supra). For the separate offence of racially or religiously aggravated harassment see PARA 155 post. The offence under s 2(1) (as amended) is a continuing offence and is complete only when the last act in the course of conduct is committed; accordingly, provided that at least one of the incidents relied on falls within the six-month limitation period for summary proceedings under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 127 (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 589) then s 127 will not be violated: DPP v Baker [2004] EWHC 2782 (Admin), DC.

As to civil proceedings for conduct in breach of the prohibition of harassment under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 1(1) see s 3 (as amended); and TORT vol 97 (2010) PARA 557. As to injunctions to prevent persons from harassment under s 1(1A) (as added) see s 3A (as added); and TORT vol 97 (2010) PARA 557. It is an offence to breach an injunction granted in such civil proceedings: see ss 3(6)-(9), 3A(3) (as added); and TORT vol 97 (2010) PARA 557. For guidance as to the interrelationship between the Family Law Act 1996 s 42 (non-molestation orders: see MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW vol 73 (2009) PARA 716) and the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 and the management of concurrent proceedings in the family, civil and criminal justice systems arising from domestic violence incidents see Lomas v Parle [2003] EWCA Civ 1804, [2004] 1 All ER 1173.

16 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

17 As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

UPDATE

152 Prohibitions of harassment and offence of harassment

NOTE 1--As a general proposition, facts of other, separately charged, offences as might be found proved, irrespective of whether they led to a conviction, are capable of forming part of a course of conduct amounting to harassment: Jones v DPP [2010] All ER (D) 230 (Feb). See R v Curtis [2010] EWCA Crim 123, [2010] All ER (D) 94 (Feb) (in volatile relationship, six incidents over period of one year did not amount to course of conduct amounting to harassment).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(xi) Harassment/153. Putting a person in fear of violence.

153. Putting a person in fear of violence.

A person whose course of conduct<sup>1</sup> causes another to fear<sup>2</sup>, on at least two occasions<sup>3</sup>, that violence will be used against him is guilty of an offence if he knows or ought to know<sup>4</sup> that his course of conduct will cause the other so to fear on each of those occasions<sup>5</sup>. The offence is punishable on conviction on indictment<sup>6</sup> with imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, a fine, or both<sup>7</sup>, or on summary conviction with imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>8</sup>, a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>9</sup>, or both<sup>10</sup>.

It is, however, a defence for a person to show<sup>11</sup> that his course of conduct was pursued for the purpose of preventing or detecting crime<sup>12</sup>, under any enactment or rule of law or to comply with any condition or requirement imposed under any enactment<sup>13</sup>, or that his pursuit of such course was reasonable for the protection of himself or another or for the protection of his or another's property<sup>14</sup>. In addition, the Secretary of State may certify that anything done on behalf of the Crown for national security or other purposes is exempt from these provisions<sup>15</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'conduct' and what amounts to a 'course of conduct' see PARA 152 note 1 ante.

2 Direct evidence from the victim that he was caused to fear violence is not essential, because a court may infer such fear if there is other evidence entitling it to do so: R v DPP [2001] EWHC 17 (Admin), [2001] All ER (D) 120 (Jan).

3 It must be proved that at least one person feared on at least two occasions that violence would be used against him; it is not enough that on one occasion he fears violence against himself and on another occasion he fears violence against another, even though he and the other form part of a close knit and identifiable group: Caurti v DPP [2001] EWHC Admin 867, [2002] Crim LR 131, DC.

4 For these purposes, a person ought to know that his conduct will cause another to fear that violence will be used against him on any occasion if a reasonable person in possession of the same information would think the course of conduct would cause the other so to fear on that occasion: Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 4(2).

5 Ibid s 4(1). See note 3 supra. For the separate racially or religiously aggravated version of this offence see PARA 156 post.

6 As to the relevant considerations when sentencing a defendant convicted of an offence under these provisions see R v Liddle, R v Hayes [1999] 3 All ER 816, [1999] Crim LR 847, CA. A person acquitted on indictment of an offence under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 4 may be found guilty of an offence under s 2 (as amended) (see PARA 152 ante): s 4(5). In such a case, the Crown Court then has the same sentencing powers as the magistrates' court would have under s 2 (as amended): s 4(6).

7 Ibid s 4(4)(a).

9 As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

10 Protection from Harassment Act 1997 s 4(4)(b). As to restraining orders see s 5 (as amended); and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 349.

11 As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953) Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 post. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

UPDATE

153 Putting a person in fear of violence

NOTE 6--The 1997 Act s 4(5) does not require the case to be stopped and the prosecution recommenced for the alternative charge of harassment to be considered by the jury: R v Livesey [2006] All ER (D) 241 (Dec), CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/2. OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/ (xii) Racially or Religiously Aggravated Non-fatal Offences/154. 'Racially or religiously aggravated'.

(xii) Racially or Religiously Aggravated Non-fatal Offences

154. 'Racially or religiously aggravated'.

An offence is racially or religiously aggravated<sup>1</sup> if:

- 63 (1) at the time of committing it, or immediately<sup>2</sup> before or after doing so, the offender demonstrates towards the victim of the offence hostility based on the victim's membership<sup>3</sup> of (or presumed<sup>4</sup> membership of) a racial or religious group<sup>5</sup>; or
- 64 (2) the offence is motivated (wholly or partly) by hostility towards members of a racial or religious group based on their membership of that group<sup>6</sup>.

For these purposes, 'racial group' means a group of persons defined by reference to race, colour, nationality (including citizenship) or ethnic or national origins<sup>7</sup>; and 'religious group' means a group of persons defined by reference to religious belief or lack of religious belief<sup>8</sup>.

It is immaterial for these purposes whether or not the offender's hostility is also based, to any extent, on any other factor<sup>9</sup>.

1. See for the purposes of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 ss 28-32 (as amended) (see PARAS 155-156 post. 'Racial or religious aggravation' can exist notwithstanding that the defendant is of the same racial or religious group as the object of the offence: R v White (Anthony) [2001] EWCA Crim 216, [2001] 1 WLR 1352, [2001] Crim LR 576. For other racially or religiously aggravated offences see PARAS 335, 561 post. As to racial or religious aggravation as a factor aggravating sentence see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 619.

2. 'Immediately' qualifies both 'before' and 'after': Parry v DPP [2004] EWHC 3112 (Admin), [2005] ADC 260.

3. 'Membership', in relation to a racial or religious group, includes association with members of that group: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(2) (s 28(1)-(3) amended, and s 28(5) added, by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 39(1), (3), (4)).

4. 'Presumed' means presumed by the offender: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(2).

5. Ibid s 28(1)(a) (as amended: see note 3 supra). For this test to be satisfied where racial aggravation is alleged, the defendant must have formed the view that the victim was a member of a racial group and must have done or said something which demonstrated hostility towards the victim based on that membership: R v Philip Rogers [2005] EWCA Crim 2863, [2006] Crim LR 351 (subjects of words 'bloody foreigners' were Spanish; held that these words were capable of satisfying the requirements of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(1)(a) (as amended)). The words used may or may not expressly identify the racial group to which the victim belongs: see A-G's Reference (No 4 of 2004), R v D [2005] EWCA Crim 889, [2005] 1 WLR 2810 (victim Indian, brown skinned; called an 'immigrant doctor' by defendant immediately before defendant assaulting him; held open to jury to conclude that the defendant had identified her victim as falling within the racial groups of Indian and brown-skinned and that the use of 'immigrant' demonstrated hostility based on the victim's membership of such groups).

See also R v Philip Rogers supra (all who were black formed a racial group within the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(4), as did all who were white, and it is no great extension of the concept to embrace within a single racial group all who were foreign; on the facts of this case the use of the words 'bloody foreigners' satisfied the requirements of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(1)(a) (as amended)); DPP v M (A Minor) [2004] EWHC 1453 (Admin), [2004] 1 WLR 2758, [2005] Crim LR 392 (use of 'bloody foreigners' at time of committing offence might, depending on context, qualify as a demonstration of racial hostility for these purposes because the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(1)(a) (as amended) can be satisfied in a non-inclusive as well as an inclusive sense according to the circumstances and context; the fact that the defendant's hostility was based more on a dispute over food at a kebab shop did not prevent racial aggravation being established). A statement in R v White (Anthony) [2001] EWCA Crim 216 at [19], [2001] 1 WLR 1352 at [19], [2001] Crim LR 576 at [19] per Pill LJ which was in conflict with the reasoning in DPP v M (A Minor) supra and A-G's Reference (No 4 of 2004), R v D supra was held to be obiter in R v Philip Rogers supra; the Court of Appeal stated that to the extent that it was in conflict it should not be followed. See also DPP v Green [2004] EWHC 1225 (Admin), [2004] 7 Archbold News 3, DC (the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(1)(a) (as amended), unlike s 28(1)(b) (as amended), does not require the defendant to be motivated by racial or religious hostility); DPP v Pal [2000] Crim LR 756, DC; DPP v Woods [2002] EWHC 85 (Admin), [2002] All ER (D) 154 (Jan).

The victim is not required to be in the presence of the defendant at the time of the demonstration of racial or religious hostility: Parry v DPP [2004] EWHC 3112 (Admin), [2005] ADC 260.

6 Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(1)(b) (as amended: see note 3 supra). Proof of motivation by hostility towards members of a racial or religious group based on their membership of that group can be established by evidence relating to what the defendant may have said or done on other occasions: G v DPP [2004] EWHC 183 (Admin), 168 JP 313, DC. Prosecutors should not bring charges for a racially aggravated offence unless satisfied that the facts truly suggest that the offence charged was aggravated by racism: R v Philip Rogers [2005] EWCA Crim 2863, [2006] Crim LR 351.

7 Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(4). The wording of this definition must be given a broad, non-technical interpretation: R v White (Anthony) [2001] EWCA Crim 216, [2001] 1 WLR 1352, [2001] Crim LR 576 ('African' describes a racial group defined by reference to race because in ordinary language 'African' denotes a limited group of people regarded as of common stock and as one of the major divisions of humankind having distinct physical features in common; it 'denotes a person characteristic of the blacks in Africa', despite the fact that strictly 'African' is capable of covering Egyptians and white South Africans who would not commonly be described as 'Africans'). As to the meaning of 'ethnic origins' see Mandla v Dowell Lee [1983] 2 AC 548, [1983] 1 All ER 1062, HL.

8 Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(4) (as added: see note 3 supra).

9 Ibid s 28(3) (as amended: see note 3 supra). The reference in the text to 'any other factor' is a reference to any other factor not mentioned in s 28(1)(a) (as amended) or s 28(1)(b) (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-6 supra): s 28(3) (as so amended).

(xiii) Female Genital Mutilation

157. Offence of mutilating a girl's genitalia.

A person who excises, infibulates or otherwise mutilates the whole or any part of a girl's<sup>1</sup> labia majora, labia minora or clitoris is guilty of an offence<sup>2</sup> unless he is either a registered medical practitioner<sup>3</sup> who performs a surgical operation on a girl which is necessary for her physical or mental health<sup>4</sup> or a registered medical practitioner, a registered midwife, or a person undergoing a course of training with a view to becoming such a practitioner or midwife who performs a surgical operation on a girl who is in any stage of labour, or has just given birth, for purposes connected with the labour or birth<sup>5</sup>. It is also an offence to assist a girl in mutilating her own genitalia<sup>6</sup> or to assist a non-United Kingdom national or resident to mutilate a girl's genitalia overseas<sup>7</sup>. Provision is made for the punishment of offenders and for the extension of these provisions to cover extra-territorial acts<sup>8</sup>.

1 'Girl' includes 'woman': Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 s 6(1).

2 Ibid s 1(1).

3 As to registered medical practitioners see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 4.

4 Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 s 1(2)(a), (3)(a). For the purpose of determining whether an operation is necessary for the mental health of a girl, it is immaterial whether she or any other person believes that the operation is required as a matter of custom or ritual: s 1(5).

No offence is committed by a person who performs outside the United Kingdom such an operation as falls within s 1(2)(a) or s 1(2)(b) (see the text and note 5 infra) and, in relation to the operation, exercises functions corresponding to those of a registered medical practitioner or, as the case may be, a registered midwife or a person undergoing a course of training with a view to becoming such a practitioner or midwife: s 1(4). As to registered midwives see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 716 et seq. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/ (xiii) Female Genital Mutilation/158. Assisting in the mutilation or self-mutilation of a girl's genitalia.

158. Assisting in the mutilation or self-mutilation of a girl's genitalia.

A person is guilty of an offence if he aids, abets, counsels or procures:

- 65 (1) a girl<sup>1</sup> to excise, infibulate or otherwise mutilate the whole or any part of her own labia majora, labia minora or clitoris<sup>2</sup>; or
- 66 (2) a person who is not a United Kingdom national<sup>3</sup> or permanent United Kingdom resident<sup>4</sup> to do a relevant act of female genital mutilation<sup>5</sup> outside the United Kingdom<sup>6</sup>.

In the latter case, no offence is committed if the act in question is a surgical operation which is either necessary for the girl's physical or mental health<sup>7</sup> or is performed on a girl who is in any stage of labour, or has just given birth, for purposes connected with the labour or birth<sup>8</sup>, provided the operation is performed by a person who, in relation to such an operation, is a registered medical practitioner<sup>9</sup>, a registered midwife<sup>10</sup>, or a person undergoing a course of training with a view to becoming such a practitioner or midwife, or a person who exercises functions corresponding to those of such a person<sup>11</sup>. Provision is made for the punishment of offenders and for the extension of these provisions to cover extra-territorial acts<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'girl' see PARA 157 note 1 ante.

2 Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 s 2.

3 A 'United Kingdom national' is an individual who is a British citizen, a British overseas territories citizen, a British National (Overseas), a British overseas citizen, a person who is a British subject under the British Nationality Act 1981, or a British protected person within the meaning of the British Nationality Act 1981 s 50(1); Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 s 6(2)(a)-(c). As to British citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 23-43; as to British overseas territories citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 44-57; as to the status of British National (Overseas) see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 63-65; as to British overseas citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 58-62; as to British subjects under the British Nationality Act 1981 see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 66-71; and as to British protected persons within the meaning of s 50(1) see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 72-76.

4 A permanent United Kingdom resident is an individual who is settled in the United Kingdom (within the meaning of the Immigration Act 1971: see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 5); Female Genital Mutilation Act 2003 s 6(3). As to persons settled in the United Kingdom see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 134.

5 An act is a relevant act of female genital mutilation if it is done in relation to a United Kingdom national or permanent United Kingdom resident (ibid s 3(2)(a)) and if it would, if done by such a person, constitute an offence under s 1 (see PARA 157 ante) (s 3(2)(b)).

159. Penalties for, and extent of, offences involving female genital mutilation.

A person guilty of an offence involving female genital mutilation<sup>1</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years, to a fine, or to both<sup>2</sup>, and on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>4</sup>, or to both<sup>5</sup>.

The provisions governing the offences involving female genital mutilation<sup>6</sup> extend to any act done outside the United Kingdom<sup>7</sup> by a United Kingdom national<sup>8</sup> or permanent United Kingdom resident<sup>9</sup>; and, if such an offence is committed outside the United Kingdom, proceedings may be taken<sup>10</sup>, and the offence may for incidental purposes be treated as having been committed<sup>11</sup>, in any place in England, Wales or Northern Ireland<sup>12</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(3) NON-FATAL OFFENCES AGAINST THE PERSON/(xiv) Torture/160. Torture.

160. Torture.

If, in the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup> or elsewhere, a public official or a person acting in an official capacity, whatever his nationality, intentionally inflicts severe pain or suffering<sup>2</sup> on another in the performance or purported performance of his official duties, he is guilty of the offence of torture<sup>3</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>4</sup>. A person, whatever his nationality, also commits this offence, and is correspondingly liable on conviction, if, not being a public official or a person acting in an official capacity, he intentionally inflicts in the United Kingdom or elsewhere severe pain or suffering on another at the instigation or with the consent or acquiescence of either a public official<sup>5</sup> or of a person acting in an official capacity<sup>6</sup>, where that official or other person is performing or purporting to perform his official duties when he instigates the commission of the offence or consents to or acquiesces in it<sup>7</sup>.

It is, however, a defence for a person charged with an offence under these provisions in respect of any conduct of his to prove<sup>8</sup> that he had lawful authority, justification or excuse<sup>9</sup> for that conduct<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante. Her Majesty may by Order in Council make provision for extending the Criminal Justice Act 1988 ss 134, 135, with such modifications and exceptions as may be specified in the order, to any of the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man or any colony: s 138(1). See the Criminal Justice Act 1988 (Torture) (Overseas Territories) Order 1988, SI 1988/2242 (amended by SI 1992/1715); and the Criminal Justice Act 1988 (Torture) (Isle of Man) Order 1989, SI 1989/983.

2 For these purposes, it is immaterial whether the pain or suffering is physical or mental and whether it is caused by an act or an omission: Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 134(3).

3 Ibid s 134(1). Proceedings for an offence under s 134 may not be begun except by or with the consent of the Attorney General: s 135(a). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post.

4 Ibid s 134(6). In connection with the prohibition on torture see also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 124.

5 Ibid s 134(2)(a)(i).

6 Ibid s 134(2)(a)(ii).

7 Ibid s 134(2)(b), (6). As to the restriction on the institution of proceedings see note 3 supra.

8 As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953) Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 post. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

9 In relation to pain or suffering inflicted in the United Kingdom, 'lawful authority, justification or excuse' means lawful authority, justification or excuse under the law of the part of the United Kingdom where it was inflicted: Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 134(5)(a). In relation to pain or suffering inflicted outside the United Kingdom, 'lawful authority, justification or excuse' means: (1) if it was inflicted by a United Kingdom official acting under the law of the United Kingdom or by a person acting in an official capacity under that law, lawful authority, justification or excuse under that law (s 134(5)(b)(i)); (2) if it was inflicted by a United Kingdom official acting under the law of any part of the United Kingdom or by a person acting in an official capacity under such law, lawful authority, justification or excuse under the law of the part of the United Kingdom under whose law he was acting (s 134(5)(b)(ii)); or (3) in any other case, lawful authority, justification or excuse under the law of the place where it was inflicted (s 134(5)(b)(iii)).

161. Corporal punishment.

Parents<sup>1</sup> and other persons in loco parentis are entitled as a disciplinary measure<sup>2</sup> to apply a reasonable degree of force<sup>3</sup> to their children or charges old enough to understand its purpose<sup>4</sup>.

Battery<sup>5</sup> of a child cannot be justified on the ground that it constituted reasonable punishment<sup>6</sup> in relation to the offences of wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm<sup>7</sup>, inflicting bodily injury<sup>8</sup>, assault occasioning actual bodily harm<sup>9</sup>, or cruelty to a person aged under 16<sup>10</sup>. Nor can battery of a child causing actual bodily harm<sup>11</sup> be justified in any civil proceedings on the ground that it constituted reasonable punishment<sup>12</sup>.

A teacher is no longer entitled by virtue of his position as such to apply reasonable corporal punishment as a disciplinary measure<sup>13</sup>.

1 A father who was not married to the mother at the time of the child's birth is not a 'parent' for this purpose, unless he has subsequently acquired parental responsibility (ie parental rights, duties etc) and not ceased to have it in accordance with the Children Act 1989: see s 2(2) (as amended); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 138 et seq.

3 When considering the question of reasonableness, a jury or magistrates' court must consider the nature and context of the defendant's behaviour, the duration of the behaviour, the physical and mental consequences for the child, the child's age and personal characteristics, and the defendant's reasons for administering the punishment: R v H (Assault of Child: Reasonable Chastisement) [2001] EWCA Crim 1024, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 59. For the purposes of the various statutory sexual offences<sup>1</sup> (except sexual activity in a public lavatory<sup>2</sup>), penetration<sup>3</sup>, touching<sup>4</sup> or any other activity is 'sexual' if a reasonable person would consider either:

- 67 (1) that whatever its circumstances or any person's purpose in relation to it, it is because of its nature sexual<sup>5</sup>; or
- 68 (2) that because of its nature it may be sexual and because of its circumstances or the purpose of any person in relation to it (or both) it is sexual<sup>6</sup>.

1 le the offences under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Pt 1 (ss 1-79): see PARA 165 et seq post.

2 le the offence under ibid s 71: see PARA 237 post.

3 Penetration is a continuing act from entry to withdrawal: ibid s 79(1), (2). The slightest degree of penetration is sufficient: R v Hughes (1841) 9 C & P 752; R v Lines (1844) 1 Car & Kir 393.

4 'Touching' includes touching with any part of the body, with anything else, or through anything, and in particular includes touching amounting to penetration: Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 79(1), (8). Where a person is wearing clothing, touching of that clothing constitutes 'touching' for these purposes: R v H [2005] EWCA Crim 732, [2005] 2 All ER 859, [2005] Crim LR 735.

5 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 78(a).

6 Ibid s 78(b). A two-fold test is to be applied for these purposes: first, whether because of its nature the actual touching or other activity could be sexual (in relation to which the circumstances before it or after it, or any evidence as to the purpose of any person in relation to it, are irrelevant); and second, if the activity could be sexual, whether in view of the circumstances and/or the purpose of any person in relation to the activity it was in fact sexual: R v H [2005] EWCA Crim 732, [2005] 2 All ER 859, [2005] Crim LR 735.

163. Consent.

For the purposes of the statutory sexual offences<sup>1</sup> involving the absence of consent, a person 'consents' if he agrees by choice and has the freedom and capacity to make that choice<sup>2</sup>.

Certain evidential presumptions and conclusive presumptions as to the absence of consent and as to the absence of a reasonable belief in consent apply in the case of rape<sup>3</sup>, assault by penetration<sup>4</sup>, sexual assault<sup>5</sup> or causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent<sup>6</sup>.

If in proceedings for such an offence it is proved that the defendant did the relevant act<sup>7</sup>, that any of a number of specified circumstances rendering the complainant incapable of freely consenting<sup>8</sup> existed<sup>9</sup>, and the defendant knew that those circumstances existed<sup>10</sup>, the complainant is to be taken not to have consented to the relevant act unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he consented, and the defendant is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that the complainant consented unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he reasonably believed it<sup>11</sup>.

Further, if in such proceedings it is proved that the defendant did the relevant act and that he intentionally deceived the complainant as to the nature or purpose of the act<sup>12</sup> or intentionally induced the complainant to consent to the act by impersonating a person known personally to the complainant<sup>13</sup>, it is to be conclusively presumed that the complainant did not consent to the act<sup>14</sup> and that the defendant did not believe that the complainant consented to it<sup>15</sup>.

1    Ie the offences under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Pt 1 (ss 1-79): see PARA 165 et seq post.

2    Ibid s 74. The absence of consent does not have to be demonstrated by offering resistance or by communicating it to the defendant: R v Malone [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 447, [1998] Crim LR 834, CA (decided under the now repealed Sexual Offences Act 1956, but there can be no doubt that the same is true in respect of all the non-consensual offences under the new Act).

3    Ie an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 1: see PARA 165 post. The 'relevant act' for these purposes is the defendant intentionally penetrating, with his penis, the vagina, anus or mouth of the complainant: s 77. 'Vagina' includes vulva: s 79(1), (9). References in the Sexual Offences Act 2003 to a part of the body include references to a part surgically constructed (in particular, through gender reassignment surgery): s 79(3).

4    Ie an offence under ibid s 2: see PARA 167 post. For the meaning of 'penetration' see PARA 162 note 3 ante. The 'relevant act' for these purposes is the defendant intentionally penetrating, with a part of his body or anything else, the vagina or anus of the complainant where the penetration is sexual: s 77. For the meaning of 'sexual' see PARA 162 ante.

5    Ie an offence under ibid s 3: see PARA 169 post. The 'relevant act' for these purposes is the defendant intentionally touching the complainant, where the touching is sexual: s 77.

6    Ie an offence under ibid s 4: see PARA 171 post. The 'relevant act' for these purposes is the defendant intentionally causing the complainant to engage in an activity, where the activity is sexual: s 77.

7    Ibid s 75(1)(a). See notes 3-6 supra.

8    Ie: (1) that any person was, at the time of the relevant act or immediately before it began, using violence against the complainant or causing the complainant to fear that immediate violence would be used against him (ibid s 75(2)(a)); (2) that any person was, at the time of the relevant act or immediately before it began, causing the complainant to fear that violence was being used, or that immediate violence would be used, against another person (s 75(2)(b)); (3) that the complainant was, and the defendant was not, unlawfully detained at the time of the relevant act (s 75(2)(c)); (4) that the complainant was asleep or otherwise unconscious at the time of the relevant act (s 75(2)(d)); (5) that because of the complainant's physical disability he would not have been able at the time of the relevant act to communicate to the defendant whether he consented (s 75(2)(e)); or (6) that any person had administered to or caused to be taken by the complainant, without his consent, a substance which, having regard to when it was administered or taken, was capable of causing or enabling the complainant to be stupefied or overpowered at the time of the relevant act (s 75(2)(f)). In s 75(2)(a), (b), the reference to the time immediately before the relevant act began is, in the case of an act which is one of a continuous series of sexual activities, a reference to the time immediately before the first sexual activity began: s 75(3).

163 Consent

NOTE 2--A defendant's failure to mention the fact he is HIV positive to a person with whom he has had sexual intercourse is irrelevant to the issue of consent under the 2003 Act s 74: R v B [2006] EWCA Crim 2945, [2007] 1 WLR 1567. In cases involving intoxication, the question is whether the complainant retained the capacity to consent: R v Bree [2007] EWCA Crim 804, [2007] 2 All ER 676.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(1) IN GENERAL/164. Exceptions to aiding, abetting and counselling.

164. Exceptions to aiding, abetting and counselling.

There are statutory exceptions to the offence of aiding, abetting or counselling the commission of certain sexual offences against children<sup>1</sup> where the person in question acts not for the purpose of obtaining sexual<sup>2</sup> gratification or causing or encouraging the activity constituting the offence or the child's participation in it, but for the purpose of either protecting the child from sexually transmitted infection<sup>3</sup>, protecting the physical safety of the child<sup>4</sup>, preventing the child from becoming pregnant<sup>5</sup> or promoting the child's emotional well-being by the giving of advice<sup>6</sup>. The offences which are specified for these purposes are:

- 69 (1) rape of a child aged under 13<sup>7</sup>;
- 70 (2) assault of a child aged under 13 by penetration<sup>8</sup>;
- 71 (3) sexual assault of a child aged under 13<sup>9</sup>;
- 72 (4) sexual activity with a child<sup>10</sup>;
- 73 (5) child sex offences committed by children or young persons<sup>11</sup> which would comprise the offence of sexual activity with a child<sup>12</sup> if the offender were aged 18<sup>13</sup>;
- 74 (6) sexual activity with a child involving abuse of a position of trust<sup>14</sup>;
- 75 (7) sexual activity with a child family member<sup>15</sup>;
- 76 (8) sexual activity with a person with a mental disorder<sup>16</sup> impeding choice<sup>17</sup>;
- 77 (9) inducement, threat or deception to procure sexual activity with a person with a mental disorder<sup>18</sup>;
- 78 (10) sexual activity by a care worker<sup>19</sup> with a person with a mental disorder<sup>20</sup>.

1 As to complicity in crimes generally see PARAS 49-57 ante. The provisions with which this paragraph is concerned do not affect any other enactment or any rule of law restricting the circumstances in which a person is guilty of aiding, abetting or counselling an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Pt 1 (ss 1-79) (as amended): s 73(3).

Whether or not the other person consents to the penetration is irrelevant, since a child under 13 is legally incapable of giving a legally significant consent; moreover, where it transpires that the sexual activity was, or should be treated as having been, consensual, there is no need to substitute an alternative charge of breach of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 13 (see PARA 177 post) (see R v G [2006] EWCA Crim 821, [2006] All ER (D) 185 (Apr)).

(iii) Other Non-consensual Offences

171. Causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent.

A person who intentionally causes<sup>1</sup> another person to engage in an activity which is sexual<sup>2</sup> commits an offence<sup>3</sup> if that other person does not consent<sup>4</sup> to engaging in the activity<sup>5</sup> and the first person does not reasonably believe<sup>6</sup> that the second person consents to it<sup>7</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years<sup>8</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>10</sup>, or to both<sup>11</sup>. However, if the activity caused involved either penetration<sup>12</sup> of the second person's anus or vagina<sup>13</sup>, penetration of that person's mouth with any person's penis<sup>14</sup>, penetration of any person's anus or vagina with a part of the second person's body or by the second person with anything else<sup>15</sup>, or penetration of any person's mouth with the second person's penis<sup>16</sup>, the offence is punishable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for life<sup>17</sup>.

1 A person ('A') causes another ('B') to engage in sexual activity without consent if B engages in the activity in consequence of A exerting a capacity which he possesses to control or influence B's acts; it is not enough simply to prove that some antecedent event or condition produced by A contributed to the determination of the will of B to engage in the sexual activity, or that in producing that antecedent event or condition A was actuated by desire that B should engage in it: O'Sullivan v Truth and Sportsman Ltd (1957) 96 CLR 220, Aust HC (approved in A-G of Hong Kong v Tse Hung Lit [1986] AC 876, PC); McLeod (or Houston) v Buchanan [1940] 2 All ER 179 at 187, HL, per Lord Wright; Shave v Rosner [1954] 2 QB 113, [1954] 2 All ER 280, DC; Shulton (Great Britain) Ltd v Slough Borough Council [1967] 2 QB 471, [1967] 2 All ER 1327, DC. #### 173. Sexual activity with a child.

A person ('A') aged 18 or over commits an offence if:

- 79 (1) he intentionally touches<sup>1</sup> another person ('B')<sup>2</sup>;
- 80 (2) the touching is sexual<sup>3</sup>; and
- 81 (3) either B is aged under 16<sup>4</sup> and A does not reasonably believe that he is aged 16 or over<sup>5</sup>, or B is aged under 13<sup>6</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years if the touching involved:

- 82 (a) penetration<sup>7</sup> of B's anus or vagina<sup>8</sup> with a part of A's body or anything else<sup>9</sup>;
- 83 (b) penetration of B's mouth with A's penis<sup>10</sup>;
- 84 (c) penetration of A's anus or vagina with a part of B's body or anything else<sup>11</sup>; or

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(3) CHILD SEX OFFENCES/174. Causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity.

174. Causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity.

A person ('A') aged 18 or over commits an offence if:

- 86 (1) he intentionally causes or incites<sup>1</sup> another person ('B') to engage in an activity<sup>2</sup>;
- 87 (2) the activity is sexual<sup>3</sup>; and
- 88 (3) either B is aged under 16<sup>4</sup> and A does not reasonably believe that B is aged 16 or over<sup>5</sup>, or B is aged under 13<sup>6</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years if the activity caused or incited involved:

- 89 (a) penetration<sup>7</sup> of B's anus or vagina<sup>8</sup> with a part of A's body or anything else<sup>9</sup>;
- 90 (b) penetration of B's mouth with A's penis<sup>10</sup>;
- 91 (c) penetration of A's anus or vagina with a part of B's body or anything else<sup>11</sup>; or
- 92 (d) penetration of A's mouth with B's penis<sup>12</sup>.

In other cases a person guilty of the offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>13</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>14</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>15</sup>, or to both<sup>16</sup>.

It is also an offence to arrange or facilitate the commission of this offence<sup>17</sup>.

175. Engaging in sexual activity in the presence of a child.

A person ('A') aged 18 or over commits an offence if:

- 93 (1) he intentionally engages in an activity<sup>1</sup>;
- 94 (2) the activity is sexual<sup>2</sup>;
- 95 (3) for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification he engages in it when another person ('B') is present or is in a place from which the activity can be observed<sup>3</sup> and knowing or believing that B is aware, or intending that he should be aware, that he is engaging in it<sup>4</sup>; and
- 96 (4) either B is aged under 16<sup>5</sup> and A does not reasonably believe that A is aged 16 or over<sup>6</sup>, or B is aged under 13<sup>7</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 10 years<sup>8</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>10</sup>, or to both<sup>11</sup>.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(3) CHILD SEX OFFENCES/177. Child sex offences committed by children and young persons.

177. Child sex offences committed by children and young persons.

A person aged under 18<sup>1</sup> commits an offence if he does anything which would comprise the offence of sexual activity with a child<sup>2</sup>, causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity<sup>3</sup>, engaging in sexual activity in the presence of a child<sup>4</sup> or causing a child to watch a sexual act<sup>5</sup>, if he were aged 18<sup>6</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years<sup>7</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>8</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>9</sup>, or to both<sup>10</sup>.

It is also an offence to arrange or facilitate the commission of this offence<sup>11</sup>. A person may not, however, be guilty of aiding, abetting or counselling the commission of this offence if he acts for the purpose of protecting the child in question<sup>12</sup>.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(3) CHILD SEX OFFENCES/178. Arranging or facilitating the commission of a child sex offence.

178. Arranging or facilitating the commission of a child sex offence.

A person commits an offence if he intentionally arranges or facilitates something that he intends to do, intends another person to do, or believes that another person will do, in any part of the world<sup>1</sup>, where doing it will involve either sexual activity with a child<sup>2</sup>, causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity<sup>3</sup>, engaging in sexual activity in the presence of a child<sup>4</sup>, or causing a child to watch a sexual act<sup>5</sup>. There is, however, an exception which is aimed at the promotion of the protection of vulnerable persons: a person does not commit this offence if he intentionally arranges or facilitates something that he believes another person will do, but that he does not intend to do or intend another person to do<sup>6</sup>, where any of the offences referred to above which the doing of that thing would involve would be an offence against a child for whose protection he acts<sup>7</sup>.

A person guilty of the offence of arranging or facilitating the commission of a child sex offence<sup>8</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>9</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>10</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>11</sup>, or to both<sup>12</sup>.

8 Ie an offence under ibid s 14(1) (see the text and notes 1-5 supra).

178 Arranging or facilitating the commission of a child sex offence

NOTE 1--The offence under the 2003 Act s 14 is something more than, and wider than, a criminal attempt under the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 (see PARA 79 et seq); it requires no agreement or arrangement, nor the consent or acquiescence of anyone else: R v Robson [2008] EWCA Crim 619, [2009] 1 WLR 713 (there can be an attempt to commit such an offence). See also R v Robson [2009] All ER (D) 252 (Jun), CA.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(3) CHILD SEX OFFENCES/179. Meeting a child following sexual grooming etc.

179. Meeting a child following sexual grooming etc.

A person ('A') aged 18 or over<sup>1</sup> commits an offence if having met or communicated<sup>2</sup> on at least two earlier occasions with a person ('B') who is aged under 16<sup>3</sup> and is not reasonably believed by A to be aged 16 or over<sup>4</sup>, he intentionally meets B<sup>5</sup> or travels with the intention of meeting him in any part of the world<sup>6</sup> with the intention of doing anything to or in respect of him, during or after the meeting and in any part of the world, which if done will involve the commission by A of a sexual offence<sup>7</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years<sup>8</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>10</sup>, or to both<sup>11</sup>.

2 For these purposes the reference to A having met or communicated with B is a reference to A having met B in any part of the world or having communicated with him by any means from, to or in any part of the world: Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 15(2)(a).

8 Ibid s 15(4)(b).

9 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). #### 184. Position of trust.

For the purposes of the statutory offences involving abuse of a position of trust<sup>1</sup>, a person is in a position of trust in relation to another person if:

- 117 (1) he looks after persons aged under 18<sup>2</sup> who are detained in an institution by virtue of a court order or under an enactment, and that other person is so detained in that institution<sup>3</sup>;
- 118 (2) he looks after persons aged under 18 who are resident in a home or other place in which accommodation and maintenance are provided by an authority<sup>4</sup> or accommodation is provided by a voluntary organisation<sup>5</sup> and that other person is resident, and is so provided with accommodation and maintenance or accommodation, in that place<sup>6</sup>;
- 119 (3) he looks after persons aged under 18 who are accommodated and cared for in either a hospital<sup>7</sup>, an independent clinic<sup>8</sup>, a care home<sup>9</sup>, a community home<sup>10</sup>, a voluntary home<sup>11</sup>, a children's home<sup>12</sup>, or a home for the accommodation of children who are in need of particular facilities and services<sup>13</sup>, and that other person is accommodated and cared for in that institution<sup>14</sup>;
- 120 (4) he looks after persons aged under 18 who are receiving education at an educational institution and the other person is receiving, and he is not receiving, education at that institution<sup>15</sup>;
- 121 (5) he is appointed to be the other person's guardian under Northern Irish legislation<sup>16</sup>;
- 122 (6) he is engaged in the provision of careers services<sup>17</sup> or services to encourage, enable or assist effective participation by young persons in education or training<sup>18</sup> and, in that capacity, looks after the other person on an individual basis<sup>19</sup>;
- 123 (7) he regularly has unsupervised contact with the other person (whether face to face or by any other means) in the exercise of local authority functions<sup>20</sup> connected with the provision of accommodation for children (including accommodation for children in police protection or detention or on remand)<sup>21</sup>;
- 124 (8) as a person who is to report<sup>22</sup> to the court on matters relating to the welfare of the other person, he regularly has unsupervised contact with him (whether face to face or by any other means)<sup>23</sup>;
- 125 (9) he is a personal adviser appointed<sup>24</sup> for the other person and in that capacity looks after him on an individual basis<sup>25</sup>;
- 126 (10) he looks after the other person on an individual basis in the exercise of functions conferred<sup>26</sup> by virtue of a care order<sup>27</sup>, a supervision order<sup>28</sup> or an education supervision order<sup>29</sup> to which that other person is subject<sup>30</sup>;
- 127 (11) he is an officer of the Children and Family Court Advisory and Support Service<sup>31</sup> or a Welsh family proceedings officer<sup>32</sup> appointed<sup>33</sup> for the other person, or is appointed<sup>34</sup> a children's guardian of the other person, or is appointed<sup>35</sup> to be that person's guardian ad litem, and in that capacity regularly has unsupervised contact with him (whether face to face or by any other means)<sup>36</sup>;
- 128 (12) he looks after the other person on an individual basis in pursuance of requirements imposed on that person by or under an enactment on his release from detention for a criminal offence or by a court order made in criminal proceedings<sup>37</sup>; or

129 (13) any condition specified in an order<sup>38</sup> made by the Secretary of State is met<sup>39</sup>.

1     le sexual activity with a child (see the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 16; and PARA 180 ante), causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity (see s 17; and PARA 181 ante), sexual activity in the presence of a child (see s 18; and PARA 182 ante) and causing a child to watch a sexual act (see s 19; and PARA 183 ante).

2     Subject to the provisions relating to the looking after of a person on an individual basis (see note 19 infra), a person looks after persons aged under 18 if he is regularly involved in caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of such persons: ibid s 22(1), (2). As to proof of age see PARA 1470 post. See also the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 99(2) (as amended) (which provides that where a charge or indictment alleges that a person in respect of whom an offence has been committed is under a specified age, there is a rebuttable presumption that the person is under that age); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1243.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(4) ABUSE OF POSITION OF TRUST/185. Mens rea.

185. Mens rea.

In addition to requiring the defendant intentionally to do the thing specified by each individual offence involving abuse of a position of trust<sup>1</sup>, further provision is made as to the mens rea required in respect of the child's age and the existence of a position of trust.

In terms of the mens rea as to the age of the child, unless the child is under 13<sup>2</sup>, it is necessary that the defendant does not reasonably believe that the child is aged 18 or over<sup>3</sup>. Although the prosecution has the persuasive burden of proof of the fault element as to the child's age where he is aged 13 to 17<sup>4</sup>, the prosecution is assisted by the provision that where in proceedings for an offence under these provisions it is proved that the child was under 18, the defendant is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that he was aged 18 or over unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he reasonably believed it<sup>5</sup>.

In terms of whether or not a person ('A') is in a position of trust, where A was in a position of trust in relation to another ('B') by virtue of B being detained<sup>6</sup>, resident<sup>7</sup>, accommodated and cared for<sup>8</sup> or in receipt of education<sup>9</sup> at a specified institution<sup>10</sup>, but A was not also in a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances<sup>11</sup>, it must be proved that A knew or could reasonably be expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which he is in a position of trust in relation to B<sup>12</sup>. Proof of this is aided by the provision that, where it is proved that A was in a position of trust in relation to B by virtue of B being so detained, resident, accommodated and cared for or in receipt of education<sup>13</sup>, and it is not proved that he was in such a position of trust by virtue of other circumstances<sup>14</sup>, it is to be presumed that A knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of the circumstances by virtue of which he was in such a position of trust unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he knew or could reasonably have been expected to know of those circumstances<sup>15</sup>. As a corollary of these provisions, where a position of trust issue arises wholly or partly by virtue of the other categories of circumstance under which such an issue may arise, no further proof of mens rea as to the position of trust is required.

4 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 24(1). In proceedings for an offence it is for the defendant to prove that such a relationship existed at that time (s 24(3): see note 3 supra), and the defence is not available if at the relevant time sexual intercourse between the two persons would have been unlawful (s 24(2)).

TEXT AND NOTES--Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss 64, 65 amended so that the offences of sex with an adult relative are committed where an adoptive parent has consensual sex with their adopted child when he or she is aged 18 or over: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 15 paras 5, 6.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/3. SEXUAL OFFENCES/(5) FAMILIAL SEX OFFENCES/(i) Sex with an Adult Relative/189. Degrees of relationship and requisite mens rea.

189. Degrees of relationship and requisite mens rea.

The offence of sex with an adult relative<sup>1</sup> is committed where the defendant is related to the other person as parent, grandparent, child, grandchild, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister, uncle, aunt, nephew or niece<sup>2</sup>. It is necessary that the defendant knows or could reasonably be expected to know that he is related to the other person in such a way<sup>3</sup>, and in terms of this requirement where in proceedings for the offence it is proved that the defendant was related to the other person in any such way it is to be taken that the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that he was related in that way unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that he was<sup>4</sup>.

1 See PARA 188 ante.

2 Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss 64(2), 65(2). For these purposes, 'uncle' means the brother of a person's parent, and 'aunt' has a corresponding meaning (ss 64(3)(a), 65(3)(a)); 'nephew' means the child of a person's brother or sister, and 'niece' has a corresponding meaning (ss 64(3)(b), 65(3)(b)).

192. Family relationships.

For the purposes of the offences of sexual activity with a child family member and incitement to such activity<sup>1</sup> the person ('A') who commits the offence and the person ('B') in respect of whom the offence is committed are 'family members' in relation to each other<sup>2</sup> if:

- 143 (1) one of them is the other's parent, grandparent, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister, aunt or uncle<sup>3</sup>;
- 144 (2) A is or has been B's foster parent<sup>4</sup>;
- 145 (3) they live or have lived in the same household, or A is or has been regularly involved in caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of B, and: (a) one of them is or has been the other's step-parent<sup>5</sup>; (b) they are cousins<sup>6</sup>; (c) one of them is or has been the other's stepbrother or stepsister<sup>7</sup>; or (d) the parent or present or former foster parent of one of them is or has been the other's foster parent<sup>8</sup>;
- 146 (4) they live in the same household<sup>9</sup> and A is regularly involved in caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of B<sup>10</sup>; or
- 147 (5) their relationship would fall within any of these categories but for the operation of the statutory provisions governing the familial status of adopted children<sup>11</sup>.

1 See PARA 191 ante.

2 For the mens rea required to be established as to the existence of a family relationship see PARA 193 post.

3 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 27(1)(a), (2)(a). For these purposes, 'aunt' means the sister or half-sister, and 'uncle' means the brother or half-brother, of a person's parent: s 27(5)(a).

4 Ibid s 27(2)(b). A person is a child's foster parent if he is a person with whom the child has been placed under the Children Act 1989 s 23(2)(a) (as amended) (fostering for local authority: see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARAS 877-878, 900) or s 59(1)(a) (fostering for voluntary organisation: see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 975) (Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 27(5)(c)(i)) or if he fosters the child privately (within the meaning of the Children Act 1989 s 66(1)(b) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1049) (Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 27(5)(c)(ii)).

5 Ibid s 27(3)(a). A 'step-parent' includes a parent's partner (s 27(5)(e)); and a person is another's partner (whether they are of different sexes or the same sex) only if they live together as partners in an enduring family relationship (s 27(5)(d)). The step-parent of a person also includes a person who is the civil partner of that person's parent (but is not that person's parent): Civil Partnership Act 2004 ss 246(1), 247(1)(a), Sch 21 para 61.

6 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 27(3)(b). 'Cousin' means the child of an aunt or uncle: s 27(5)(b).

7 Ibid s 27(3)(c). 'Stepbrother' and 'stepsister' include the child of a parent's partner: s 27(5)(e). A person's stepbrother or stepsister also includes a person who is the son or daughter, as the case may be, of the civil partner of that person's parent (but is not the son of either of that person's parents): Civil Partnership Act 2004 ss 246(1), 247(1)(a), Sch 21 para 61.

8 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 27(3)(d).

9 Ibid s 27(4)(a).

10 Ibid s 27(4)(b).

11 Ibid s 27(2)(b). The statutory provisions governing the familial status of adopted children are contained in the Adoption and Children Act 2002 s 67 (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 377); Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 27(2)(b). The effect of this provision is that the categories of relationship set out in heads (1)-(4) in the text continue to apply to an adoptive child's biological family relationships if the child is adopted, as well as applying to its adoptive family relationships.

TEXT AND NOTES--Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 27 amended: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 Sch 15 para 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/3. SEXUAL OFFENCES/(5) FAMILIAL SEX OFFENCES/(ii) Familial Offences Relating to Children/193. Mens rea.

193. Mens rea.

In addition to requiring the defendant intentionally to do the thing specified by each individual offence involving sexual activity with a child family member<sup>1</sup>, further provision is made as to the mens rea required in respect of the child's age and the existence of a family relationship.

In terms of the mens rea as to the age of the child, provided that the child is not under 13<sup>2</sup>, it is necessary that the defendant does not reasonably believe that the child is aged 18 or over<sup>3</sup>. Although the prosecution has the persuasive burden of proof of the fault element as to the child's age where he is aged 13 to 17, the prosecution is assisted by the provision that where in proceedings for an offence under these provisions it is proved that the other person was under 18, the defendant is to be taken not to have reasonably believed that he was aged 18 or over unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he reasonably believed it<sup>4</sup>.

It is necessary that the defendant knows or could reasonably be expected to know that his relation to the other person is of a relevant description<sup>5</sup>, and where in proceedings for such an offence it is proved that the relation of the defendant to the other person was of such a description it is to be taken that the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that his relation to the other person was of that description unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that it was<sup>6</sup>.

194. Exceptions for spouses and civil partners and for pre-existing sexual relationships.

Conduct by a person which would otherwise be an offence involving sexual activity with a child family member<sup>1</sup> is not such an offence if:

- 148 (1) at the time the person in respect of whom the conduct is committed is aged 16 or over<sup>2</sup> and the two are lawfully married to, or are civil partners of, each other<sup>3</sup>; or
- 149 (2) a sexual relationship existed between the two immediately before the relationship between them became a family relationship<sup>4</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid s 28(1)(a). As to proof of age see PARA 1470 post. See also the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 99(2) (as amended) (which provides that where a charge or indictment alleges that a person in respect of whom an offence has been committed is under a specified age, there is a rebuttable presumption that the person is under that age); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1243.

<sup>3</sup> Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 28(1)(b) (s 28(1)(b), (2) amended by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 261(1), Sch 27 para 174(1)-(3)). In proceedings for an offence it is for the defendant to prove that he and the other person were at the time lawfully married to or civil partners of each other: Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 28(2) (as so amended). As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 et seq post. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

<sup>4</sup> Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 29(1)(c). The reference in the text to the relationship between the two persons becoming a family relationship is a reference to their relationship becoming a relationship of a description falling within s 27 (see PARA 192 ante): s 29(1)(c). This exception applies only if neither person is the other's parent, grandparent, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister, aunt or uncle (s 29(1)(a)) or would not be such a person if the Adoption and Children Act 2002 s 67 (which governs the familial status of adopted children: see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 377) did not apply (Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 29(1)(b)), and does not apply if immediately before the relationship between them became a family relationship sexual intercourse between them would have been unlawful (s 29(2)). For the meanings of 'aunt' and 'uncle' see PARA 192 note 3 ante. In proceedings for an offence under s 25 or s 26 it is for the defendant to prove these matters: s 29(3). See note 3 supra.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(5) FAMILIAL SEX OFFENCES/(ii) Familial Offences Relating to Children/195. Punishment.

195. Punishment.

A person ('A') guilty of an offence involving sexual activity with a child family member ('B')<sup>1</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding either 14 years (where he is aged 18 or over at the time of the offence)<sup>2</sup> or five years (where he is aged under 18 at that time)<sup>3</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>5</sup>, or to both<sup>6</sup>. However, if A was aged 18 or over at the time of the offence and the touching<sup>7</sup> or, as the case may be, the touching to which the incitement<sup>8</sup> related involved either penetration<sup>9</sup> of B's anus or vagina<sup>10</sup> with a part of A's body or anything else<sup>11</sup>, penetration of B's mouth with A's penis<sup>12</sup>, penetration of A's anus or vagina with a part of B's body<sup>13</sup>, or penetration of A's mouth with B's penis<sup>14</sup>, the offence is punishable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>15</sup>.

1     Is an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 25 (sexual activity with a child family member) or s 26 (causing or inciting a child family member to engage in sexual activity): see PARA 191 ante.

2     Ibid ss 25(4)(b)(ii), 26(4)(b)(ii). As to proof of age see PARA 1470 post. ## (ii) Offences against Persons with a Mental Disorder Impeding Choice

197. Sexual activity with a mentally disordered person.

A person ('A') commits an offence<sup>1</sup> if:

- 150 (1) he intentionally touches<sup>2</sup> another person ('B')<sup>3</sup>;
- 151 (2) the touching is sexual<sup>4</sup>;
- 152 (3) B is unable to refuse because of or for a reason related to a mental disorder<sup>5</sup>; and
- 153 (4) A knows or could reasonably be expected to know that B has a mental disorder and that because of it or for a reason related to it B is likely to be unable to refuse<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the punishment of offences involving sexual activity with a mentally disordered person see PARA 201 post. A person may not be guilty of aiding, abetting or counselling the commission of this offence if he acts for the purpose of protecting the person in question: see the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 73; and PARA 164 ante.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(6) OFFENCES AGAINST MENTALLY DISORDERED PERSONS/(iv) Offences by Care Workers/211. Meaning of 'care worker'.

211. Meaning of 'care worker'.

For the purposes of the offences involving sexual activity with mentally disordered persons<sup>1</sup> by care workers<sup>2</sup>, a person is involved in the care of another if:

- 212 (1) that other person is accommodated and cared for in a care home<sup>3</sup>, community home<sup>4</sup>, voluntary home<sup>5</sup> or children's home<sup>6</sup> and the first person has functions to perform in the home in the course of employment<sup>7</sup> which have brought him or are likely to bring him into regular face to face contact with the other person<sup>8</sup>;
- 213 (2) that other person is a patient for whom services are provided by a National Health Service body<sup>9</sup> or an independent medical agency<sup>10</sup> or in an independent clinic<sup>11</sup> or an independent hospital<sup>12</sup> and the first person has functions to perform for the body or agency or in the clinic or hospital in the course of employment which have brought him or are likely to bring him into regular face to face contact with the other person<sup>13</sup>; or
- 214 (3) he is, whether or not in the course of employment, a provider of care, assistance or services to that other person in connection with that other person's mental disorder<sup>14</sup> and as such has had or is likely to have regular face to face contact with him<sup>15</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'mental disorder' see PARA 196 ante.

2 le sexual activity with a mentally disordered person (see the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 38; and PARA 207 ante), causing or inciting a mentally disordered person to engage in sexual activity (see s 39; and PARA 208 ante), sexual activity in the presence of a mentally disordered person (see s 40; and PARA 209 ante), and causing a mentally disordered person to watch a sexual act (see s 41; and PARA 210 ante).

3 For these purposes, a 'care home' is an establishment which is a care home for the purposes of the Care Standards Act 2000 (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 985): Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 42(5).

4 'Community home' has the meaning given by the Children Act 1989 s 53 (as amended) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 967 et seq): Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 42(5).

5 'Voluntary home' has the meaning given by the Children Act 1989 s 60(3) (as substituted) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 976): Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 42(5).

6 Ibid s 42(1), (2)(a).

7 For these purposes, 'employment' means any employment, whether paid or unpaid and whether under a contract of service or apprenticeship, under a contract for services, or otherwise than under a contract: ibid s 42(5).

8 Ibid s 42(2)(b).

9 'National Health Service body' means a health authority (see HEALTH SERVICES vol 54 (2008) PARAS 75-93), a National Health Service trust (see HEALTH SERVICES vol 54 (2008) PARAS 155-173), a primary care trust (see HEALTH SERVICES vol 54 (2008) PARAS 111-135) or a special health authority (see HEALTH SERVICES vol 54 (2008) PARAS 136-154): ibid s 42(5).

10 Ibid s 42(3)(a). 'Independent medical agency' has the meaning given by the Care Standards Act 2000 s 2(1), (5), (8) (as amended) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 985): Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 42(5).

11 'Independent clinic' has the meaning given by the Care Standards Act 2000 s 2(1), (4), (8) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 983): Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 42(5).

12 Ibid s 42(3)(b). 'Independent hospital' has the meaning given by the Care Standards Act 2000 s 2(1)-(6), (6)-(8) (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 983): Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 42(5).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(6) OFFENCES AGAINST MENTALLY DISORDERED PERSONS/(iv) Offences by Care Workers/212. Mens rea.

212. Mens rea.

For the purposes of the sexual offences that may be committed by care workers<sup>1</sup> in respect of mentally disordered persons<sup>2</sup> in their care (that is, the offences of sexual activity with a mentally disordered person<sup>3</sup>, causing or inciting a mentally disordered person to engage in sexual activity<sup>4</sup>, engaging in sexual activity in the presence of a mentally disordered person<sup>5</sup>, and causing a mentally disordered person to watch a sexual act<sup>6</sup>), in addition to requiring the defendant intentionally to do the thing specified by each individual offence<sup>7</sup> further provision is made as to the mens rea required in respect of the person's mental disorder. It is required that the defendant knows or could reasonably be expected to know that the person in question has a mental disorder<sup>8</sup>; and where in proceedings for such an offence it is proved that the person had a mental disorder, it is to be taken that the defendant knew or could reasonably have been expected to know that that person had a mental disorder unless sufficient evidence is adduced to raise an issue as to whether he knew or could reasonably have been expected to know it<sup>9</sup>.

213. Exceptions for spouses and civil partners and for pre-existing sexual relationships.

Conduct by a person which would otherwise be an offence involving sexual activity with a mentally disordered person<sup>1</sup> by a care worker<sup>2</sup> is not such an offence if:

- 215 (1) at the time the mentally disordered person is aged 16 or over<sup>3</sup> and the two are lawfully married to, or are civil partners of, each other<sup>4</sup>; or
- 216 (2) a sexual relationship existed between the two immediately before the care worker became involved in the other's care<sup>5</sup>.

The reference in the text to the care worker becoming involved in the other's care is a reference to that person becoming involved in the other's care in a way which falls within s 42 (see PARA 211 ante): s 44(1). This exception does not apply if at that time sexual intercourse between them would have been unlawful: s 44(2). In proceedings for an offence under any of ss 38-41 (see note 2 supra) it is for the defendant to prove that such a relationship existed at the time: s 44(3). See note 4 supra.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(6) OFFENCES AGAINST MENTALLY DISORDERED PERSONS/(iv) Offences by Care Workers/214. Punishment.

214. Punishment.

A care worker<sup>1</sup> ('A') guilty of the offence of sexual activity with a mentally disordered person in his care ('B')<sup>2</sup> or of causing or inciting a mentally disordered person in his care ('B') to engage in sexual activity<sup>3</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 10 years<sup>4</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>6</sup>, or to both<sup>7</sup>. If, however:

217 (1) the offence was one of sexual activity with B<sup>8</sup> and the touching<sup>9</sup> involved:

15

23. (a) penetration<sup>10</sup> of B's anus or vagina<sup>11</sup> with a part of A's body or anything else<sup>12</sup>;

24. (b) penetration of B's mouth with A's penis<sup>13</sup>;

25. (c) penetration of A's anus or vagina with a part of B's body<sup>14</sup>; or

26. (d) penetration of A's mouth with B's penis<sup>15</sup>; or

16

218 (2) the offence was one of causing or inciting B to engage in sexual activity<sup>16</sup> and the activity caused or incited<sup>17</sup> involved:

17

27. (a) penetration of B's anus or vagina<sup>18</sup>;

28. (b) penetration of B's mouth with a person's penis<sup>19</sup>;

29. (c) penetration of a person's anus or vagina with a part of B's body or by B with anything else<sup>20</sup>; or the summary procedure is not available<sup>22</sup> and the offence is punishable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>23</sup>.

30. (d) penetration of a person's mouth with B's penis<sup>21</sup>,

A care worker guilty of the offence of engaging in sexual activity in the presence of a mentally disordered person in his care<sup>24</sup> or of causing a mentally disordered person in his care to watch a sexual act<sup>25</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years<sup>26</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>27</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum, or to both<sup>28</sup>.

(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING

(i) Offences Relating to Prostitution and Pornography

215. Paying for sexual services of a child.

A person ('A') commits an offence if:

- 219 (1) he intentionally obtains for himself the sexual<sup>1</sup> services of another person ('B')<sup>2</sup>;
- 220 (2) before obtaining those services, he has made or promised payment<sup>3</sup> for those services to B or a third person, or knows that another person has made or promised such a payment<sup>4</sup>; and
- 221 (3) either:
  - 19 31. (a) B is under 18<sup>5</sup>, and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over<sup>6</sup>; or
  - 32. (b) B is under 13<sup>7</sup>.
- 20

A person guilty of such an offence against a person under 13 is liable on conviction on indictment to a term imprisonment for life<sup>8</sup> if the offence involved:

- 222 (i) penetration<sup>9</sup> of B's anus or vagina<sup>10</sup> with a part of A's body or anything else<sup>11</sup>;
- 223 (ii) penetration of B's mouth with A's penis<sup>12</sup>;
- 224 (iii) penetration of A's anus or vagina with a part of B's body or by B with anything else<sup>13</sup>; or
- 225 (iv) penetration of A's mouth with B's penis<sup>14</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence against a person under 16 is liable on conviction on indictment to a term of imprisonment not exceeding 14 years, if the offence involved penetrative activity (as described above)<sup>15</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence not involving such penetrative activity against a person under 16 is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>16</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>17</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>18</sup>, or to both<sup>19</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence against a person under 18 (that is, aged 16 or 17) is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years<sup>20</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>21</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum, or to both<sup>22</sup>.

Causing, inciting, controlling, arranging or facilitating child prostitution or pornography.

216. Causing, inciting, controlling, arranging or facilitating child prostitution or pornography.

A person ('A') commits an offence if he intentionally:

- 226 (1) causes or incites<sup>1</sup> another person ('B') to become a prostitute<sup>2</sup>, or to be involved in pornography<sup>3</sup>, in any part of the world<sup>4</sup>;
- 227 (2) controls any of the activities of another person ('B') relating to B's prostitution<sup>5</sup> or involvement in pornography in any part of the world<sup>6</sup>; or
- 228 (3) arranges or facilitates the prostitution or involvement in pornography in any part of the world of another person ('B')<sup>7</sup>; and either:

- 229 (a) B is under 18<sup>8</sup>, and A does not reasonably believe that B is 18 or over<sup>9</sup>; or
- 230 (b) B is under 13<sup>10</sup>.

A person guilty of any of these offences is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>11</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>12</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>13</sup>, or to both<sup>14</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'causes' see PARA 171 note 1 ante; and as to incitement see PARA 65 ante.

2 'Prostitute' means a person who, on at least one occasion and whether or not compelled to do so, offers or provides sexual services to another person in return for payment or a promise of payment to himself or herself or a third person: Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 51(2). For the meaning of 'payment' see PARA 215 note 3 ante. As to prostitutes at common law see PARA 224 note 1 post.

3 For these purposes, a person is involved in pornography if an indecent image of that person is recorded; and similar expressions, and 'pornography', are to be interpreted accordingly: ibid s 51(1). For the meaning of 'image' see PARA 175 note 3 ante.

A person commits an offence if he intentionally:

- 231 (1) causes or incites<sup>1</sup> another person to become a prostitute<sup>2</sup> in any part of the world<sup>3</sup>; or
- 232 (2) controls any of the activities of another person relating to that person's prostitution<sup>4</sup> in any part of the world<sup>5</sup>, and he does so for or in the expectation of gain<sup>6</sup> for himself or a third person<sup>7</sup>.

A person guilty of one of these offences is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years<sup>8</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>10</sup>, or to both<sup>11</sup>.

TEXT AND NOTE 4--Activities may be controlled without compulsion, force, or coercion: it suffices for the defendant to instruct or direct the complainant to carry out the activity of prostitution or to do it in a certain way: R v Massey [2007] EWCA Crim 2664, [2008] 2 All ER 969.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING/ (ii) Brothels/218. Keeping a brothel.

(ii) Brothels

218. Keeping a brothel.

It is an offence for a person to keep a brothel<sup>1</sup> or to manage<sup>2</sup>, or act or assist in the management<sup>3</sup> of a brothel<sup>4</sup>. The offence is triable summarily<sup>5</sup>; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable on a first conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>6</sup>, or to both; or after a previous conviction<sup>7</sup> to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>8</sup>, to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale, or to both<sup>9</sup>.

1 Whether the premises constitute a brothel is a question of fact and degree: Stevens and Stevens v Christy (1987) 151 JP 366, DC. A brothel is a place resorted to by persons of opposite sexes where the women offer themselves as participants in physical acts of indecency for sexual gratification of men. It is not essential that there is evidence that normal sexual intercourse is provided on the premises: Kelly v Purvis [1983] QB 663, 76 Cr App Rep 165, DC (evidence of masturbation provided for clients), explaining Winter v Wolfe [1931] 1 KB 549, CCA, and R v Holland, Lincolnshire Justices (1882) 46 JP 312. See, however, note 4 infra. Premises frequented by men for intercourse with only one woman are not a brothel (Singleton v Ellison [1895] 1 QB 607; Mattison v Johnson (1916) 85 LJB 741) whether the woman is the tenant or not (Caldwell v Leech (1913) 109 LT 188). Where two women use the premises for prostitution, the fact that one is the tenant does not prevent the premises from being a brothel: Gorman v Standen, Palace-Clark v Standen [1964] 1 QB 294, 48 Cr App Rep 30, DC. Where prostitutes use the premises, with two receptionists, as a team, but never more than one prostitute is present on any given day, the premises are being used as a brothel: Stevens and Stevens v Christy supra. It is not necessary to prove that the women using the premises are known to the police as prostitutes or that payments are made to them (Winter v Wolfe supra; Kelly v Purvis supra); but evidence that the women are prostitutes is admissible on the question of whether the premises are a brothel provided that the fact of the women being prostitutes is within the personal knowledge of any deponent who makes the assertion (R v Korie [1966] 1 All ER 50). Nor is it necessary that the use of the premises should have caused a nuisance to neighbours (R v Holland, Lincolnshire Justices supra) or that indecency or disorderly conduct should be apparent from outside (R v Rice and Wilton (1866) LR 1 CCR 21). Where premises are used by more than one prostitute for her trade, the question of whether the premises or part of the premises are or is a brothel is a question of fact in each case to be deduced from the circumstances as a whole; the mere fact that individual rooms were let under separate tenancies for exclusive occupation by one woman does not of itself preclude the whole or part of a house from being a brothel: Donovan v Gavin [1965] 2 QB 648, [1965] 2 All ER 611, DC. See also Durose v Wilson (1907) 71 JP 263 (numbers of flats in block each let to and used by one woman for prostitution; held to be a brothel); Abbott v Smith [1965] 2 QB 662n, [1964] 3 All ER 762 (house let off in single room apartments with exclusive occupation; held to be a brothel). Cf Strath v Foxon [1956] 1 QB 67, 39 Cr App Rep 162, DC (three-storey house, two floors and one floor let separately to prostitutes; held not to be a brothel).

2 'Managing a brothel' means taking an active part in the running of the business; and to establish 'management' evidence must show something suggesting control in contrast to purely menial and routine duties: Abbott v Smith [1965] 2 QB 662n, [1964] 3 All ER 762. Evidence by police officers of conversations in the absence of the accused in which immoral services are offered by women employed at the premises, as masseuses, is admissible to show the purpose for which the premises are used: such evidence is not hearsay, since the truth of the statements alleged to have been made is not in point; the relevance of the evidence lies in the fact that such offers are made: Woodhouse v Hall (1980) 72 Cr App Rep 39, DC; R v Wilson (Donald) (1983) 78 Cr App Rep 247, CA.

3 It is not a necessary condition for assisting in the management of a brothel that the defendant actually exercises some control over the brothel or carries out some specific act of management; 'assisting' is a wider concept, and the question is one of fact in each case: Jones v DPP (1992) 96 Cr App Rep 130, DC (defendants had taken advertisements to the post office, and even paid for them; held to be clear evidence of assisting in the management of a brothel). See Gorman v Standen, Palace-Clark v Standen [1964] 1 QB 294, [1963] 3 All ER 627, DC (the mere fact that a woman participates in the activities being conducted in the brothel does not make her a person assisting in the management of a brothel). Where women in a massage parlour not only performed lewd acts, but (inter alia) discussed the nature of the acts to be performed and negotiated the terms of payment for their services, they were assisting in the management of a brothel; the tasks went considerably beyond the menial tasks, such as cleaning and removing rubbish from the premises, which could be done without taking part in the management: Elliott v DPP, Dublides v DPP (1989) Times, 19 January.

4 Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 33. It is also an offence to keep a brothel for the purposes of prostitution: see s 33A (as added); and PARA 219 post. As to prostitution at common law see PARA 224 note 1 post. For the purposes of s 33, s 33A (as added), s 34, s 35 (see PARAS 219-220 post), premises are to be treated as a brothel if people resort to them for the purpose of lewd homosexual practices in circumstances in which resort to them for lewd heterosexual practices would have led to their being treated as a brothel for the purposes of those provisions: Sexual Offences Act 1967 s 6. If the information charges a single transaction, taking place over a period of time within the previous six months, it will not be bad for duplicity: Anderton v Cooper (1980) 145 JP 128, DC. As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 post. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

7 A previous conviction under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 ss 34-36 (s 36 as amended) (see PARAS 220-221 post) is to be taken into account: see s 37(1), (4), (5), Sch 2 para 33.

8 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). ## 219. Keeping a brothel used for prostitution.

It is an offence for a person to keep, or to manage, or act or assist in the management of, a brothel<sup>1</sup> to which people resort for practices involving prostitution<sup>2</sup> (whether or not also for other practices)<sup>3</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to a term of imprisonment not exceeding seven years<sup>4</sup>, or on summary conviction to a term of imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>6</sup>, or to both<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to keeping a brothel, and the management of a brothel, see PARA 218 notes 1-4 ante.

2 For the meanings of 'prostitute' and 'prostitution' see PARA 216 note 2 ante (definition applied by the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 33A(2) (s 33A, Sch 2 para 33A added by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 55)). As to prostitution at common law see PARA 224 note 1 post.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING/ (ii) Brothels/220. Use of premises as a brothel.

220. Use of premises as a brothel.

It is an offence for the lessor or landlord of any premises or his agent either to let the whole or part of the premises with the knowledge that it is to be used, in whole or in part, as a brothel<sup>1</sup> or, where the whole or part of the premises is used as a brothel, to be wilfully a party to that use continuing<sup>2</sup>. It is also an offence for the tenant<sup>3</sup> or occupier, or person in charge, of any premises knowingly to permit the whole or part of the premises to be used as a brothel<sup>4</sup>. Where the tenant or occupier of any premises is so convicted and either the lessor or landlord, after having the conviction brought to his notice, fails to exercise his statutory rights<sup>5</sup> in relation to the lease or contract under which the premises are held by the person convicted, or the lessor or landlord, after exercising his statutory rights so as to determine that lease or contract, grants a new lease or enters into a new contract of tenancy of the premises to, with or for the benefit of the same person, without having all reasonable provisions to prevent the recurrence of the offence inserted in the new lease or contract, then, if subsequently an offence under these provisions is committed in respect of the premises during the subsistence of the lease or contract or during the subsistence of the new lease or contract, the lessor or landlord is deemed to be a party to that offence unless he shows that he took all reasonable steps to prevent the recurrence of the offence<sup>6</sup>.

These offences are triable summarily<sup>7</sup>; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable on a first conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months<sup>8</sup>, or to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>9</sup>, or to both; or after a previous conviction<sup>10</sup> to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>11</sup>, to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale, or to both<sup>12</sup>.

8 As from a day to be appointed the Secretary of State may by order either provide that this offence is no longer to be punishable by imprisonment or extend the maximum term of imprisonment for this offence to a maximum term of 51 weeks: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(1), (2), (7) (not yet in force). Any such order may make such supplementary, incidental, or consequential provision as the Secretary of State considers necessary or expedient, including provision amending any relevant enactment (s 281(3) (not yet in force)), but may not affect the penalty for any offence committed before the commencement of that order (s 281(6)(a) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed and no such order had been made.

9 As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

10 A previous conviction under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 33 (see PARA 218 ante), s 34, s 35 or s 36 (as amended) (see PARA 221 post), is to be taken into account: see s 37(1), (4), (5), Sch 2 paras 34, 35.

11 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). SEXUAL OFFENCES/(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING/ (iii) Disorderly Houses/223. Disorderly houses.

(iii) Disorderly Houses

223. Disorderly houses.

A person commits an indictable offence at common law who keeps<sup>1</sup> a common, ill-governed and disorderly house<sup>2</sup>. A house found to be kept open to, and frequented by, persons who conduct themselves in such a manner as to violate law and good order is a disorderly house<sup>3</sup>. Where, however, the essence of the charge is the taking place of indecent performances or exhibitions, the fact that persons resorting to the premises are merely spectators does not prevent the premises constituting a disorderly house<sup>4</sup>; nor need disorderly conduct be visible from the exterior of the house<sup>5</sup>; nor need there be any spectators when the performance, exhibition or service is performed for one client<sup>6</sup>. A disorderly house may amount to a common nuisance, but this is not an essential ingredient of the offence<sup>7</sup>.

Where indecent performances or exhibitions are alleged as rendering premises a disorderly house, it must be proved that the matters performed or exhibited there are of such a character that their performance or exhibition in a place of common resort would amount to an outrage of public decency, tend to corrupt or deprave, or be otherwise calculated to injure the public interest so as to call for condemnation and punishment<sup>8</sup>. The defendant must have knowledge of the use to which the premises are put<sup>9</sup>.

The penalty for keeping a disorderly house is a fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court<sup>10</sup>. Any person who acts or behaves as master or mistress, or as the person having the care, government or management, of any bawdy-house, or other disorderly house, is deemed and taken to be the keeper of it, and is liable to be prosecuted and punished as such, notwithstanding that that person is not in fact the real owner or keeper<sup>11</sup>.

1 'Keep' involves an element of habitual keeping or persistence: Moore v DPP [1992] QB 125, [1991] 4 All ER 521, 94 Cr App Rep 173, DC (single performance of indecent exhibition insufficient).

months were upheld; it depends upon nature of exhibition); R v Brady, R v Ram [1964] 3 All ER 616n, 47 Cr App Rep 196, CCA (fines imposed). In Moore v DPP [1992] QB 125, [1991] 4 All ER 521, 94 Cr App Rep 173, DC, the offence of keeping a disorderly house was treated as triable either way. If the offence is charged as a species of public nuisance (which is triable either way by virtue of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17, Sch 1 para 1 (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 655)) this is correct, but keeping a disorderly house does not necessarily amount to a public nuisance (see R v Quinn, R v Bloom [1962] 2 QB 245, 45 Cr App Rep 279, CCA; and the text and note 7 supra).

11 Disorderly Houses Act 1751 s 8 (amended by the Betting and Gaming Act 1960 s 15, Sch 6 Pt I). This does not, however, apply in relation to premises which are 'relevant premises' (ie, generally, licensed premises) for the purposes of the Licensing Act 2003 Pt 7 (ss 136-159) (offences): see the Licensing Act 2003 ss 159, 198, Sch 6 para 2; and LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 132 et seq. The offence is triable either way: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 2; para 1103 post; and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 661.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING/(iv) Solicitation by Prostitutes/224. Prostitute loitering or soliciting.

(iv) Solicitation by Prostitutes

224. Prostitute loitering or soliciting.

It is an offence for a common prostitute<sup>1</sup> (whether male or female) to loiter or solicit<sup>2</sup> in a street<sup>3</sup> or public place<sup>4</sup> for the purpose of prostitution<sup>5</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale<sup>6</sup> or, for an offence committed after a previous conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>7</sup>.

1 'Common prostitute' includes a person who offers his or her body for purposes amounting to common lewdness in return for payment; there need not be an act of ordinary sexual intercourse: see R v De Munck [1918] 1 KB 635, CCA (procuring a woman to become a common prostitute, contrary to the Criminal Law Amendment Act 1885 s 2(2) (repealed)); Kelly v Purvis [1983] QB 663, 76 Cr App Rep 165, DC (keeping etc a brothel, contrary to the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 33 (see PARA 218 ante)); R v Morris-Lowe [1985] 1 All ER 400, 80 Cr App Rep 114, CA (attempting to procure a woman to become a common prostitute, such procuring being an offence contrary to the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 22 (repealed)). 'Prostitution' is not confined to cases where a person offers his or her body for lewdness in a passive way but includes cases where a person offers his or her body as a participant in physical acts of indecency for the sexual gratification of men: see R v Webb [1964] 1 QB 357, [1963] 3 All ER 177, CCA (procuring a woman to become a common prostitute and living off immoral earnings contrary to the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 30 (repealed)); Kelly v Purvis supra. Persuading a person for reward to offer himself or herself for lewdness with the defendant alone does not constitute the offence because that person would not commonly offer himself or herself for lewdness and therefore not be a common prostitute: R v Morris-Lowe supra. In R v McFarlane [1994] QB 419, 99 Cr App Rep 8, CA, it was held (in relation to the offence of living off immoral earnings) that the essence of prostitution is the making of an offer of sexual services for reward, and that it is immaterial that the person making the offer does not intend to perform them and does not do so. Note that all these cases were decided before the present offence was extended to include males by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 56, Sch 1 para 2.

2 'Soliciting' involves the physical presence of the prostitute and conduct on his or her part amounting to an importuning of prospective customers; a prostitute who displays an advertisement in a street or public place that he or she is available as a prostitute does not 'solicit': Weisz v Monahan [1962] 1 All ER 664, [1962] 1 WLR 262, DC; Burge v DPP [1962] 1 All ER 666n. A female prostitute sitting scantily clad at a window bathed in red light and in an area where prostitutes were sought was held to be 'soliciting' in the sense of tempting or alluring prospective customers to come in for prostitution and projecting her solicitation to passers by: Behrendt v Burridge [1976] 3 All ER 285, [1977] 1 WLR 29, DC. See also Knight v Fryer [1976] Crim LR 322, DC; and note 3 infra.

3 For these purposes, 'street' includes any bridge, road, lane, footway, subway, square, court, alley or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not, which is for the time being open to the public; and the doorways and entrances of premises abutting on a street and any ground adjoining and open to a street, are treated as forming part of the street: Street Offences Act 1959 s 1(4). Conduct amounting to soliciting by prostitutes on a balcony or at a window overlooking the street is 'soliciting in the street': Smith v Hughes [1960] 2 All ER 859, [1960] 1 WLR 830, DC; Behrendt v Burridge [1976] 3 All ER 285, [1977] 1 WLR 29, DC.

4 'Public place' is not defined in the Street Offences Act 1959, but must presumably be construed ejusdem generis with the extended definition of 'street': see note 3 supra. In R v Wellard (1884) 14 QBD 63 at 66-67, CCR, Grove J said 'A public place is one where the public go, no matter whether they have a right to go or not'. See also R v Collinson (1931) 23 Cr App Rep 49, CCA (field to which the public was temporarily admitted held to be a public place); Elkins v Cartledge [1947] 1 All ER 829, DC (an enclosure at the rear of a public house where cars were parked held to be a public place).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING/ (iv) Solicitation by Prostitutes/225. Application to court by a person cautioned for loitering or soliciting.

225. Application to court by a person cautioned for loitering or soliciting.

Where in respect of his conduct in a street<sup>1</sup> or public place<sup>2</sup> a person is cautioned<sup>3</sup> by a constable that if he persists in such conduct it may result in his being charged with an offence<sup>4</sup>, he may apply to a magistrates' court<sup>5</sup> for an order directing that no entry is to be made in respect of that caution in any record maintained by the police of those so cautioned and that any such entry already made is to be expunged<sup>6</sup>. The court must make the order unless satisfied that on the occasion when the person was cautioned he was loitering or soliciting in a street or public place for the purpose of prostitution<sup>7</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'street' see PARA 224 note 3 ante (definition applied by the Street Offences Act 1959 s 2(4)).

2 As to the meaning of 'public place' see PARA 224 note 4 ante.

3 As to cautions see PARA 959 post. Pursuant to a system under the Street Offences Act 1959 s 2 (as amended) a person who has not previously been convicted of loitering or soliciting for the purpose of prostitution is not charged unless he or she has been cautioned by the police on at least two occasions and such cautions have been formally recorded. See Collins v Wilcock [1984] 3 All ER 374, 79 Cr App Rep 229, DC. The Street Offences Act 1959 does not confer power on a police officer to stop and detain a person who is a prostitute for the purpose of giving a cautioning: Collins v Wilcock supra.

4 Ie under the Street Offences Act 1959 s 1 (as amended): see PARA 224 ante.

5 Application must be made not later than 14 clear days after the caution (ibid s 2(1)) and must be by way of complaint against the chief officer of police for the area in which the person is cautioned or against such officer of police as the chief officer of police may designate for the purpose in relation to that area or any part of it (s 2(2) (amended by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 154(1), Sch 7 para 30; and the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 56, Sch 1 para 3(1), (4))). As to chief officers of police and their functions see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 178 et seq.

6 Street Offences Act 1959 s 2(1) (amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Sch 1 para 3(3)). Subject to any provision to the contrary in rules made under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 144 (see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 588), on the hearing of any such complaint the procedure is the same as if it were a complaint by the police officer against the person, except that this does not affect the operation of ss 55-57 (non-attendance of parties to a complaint: see MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 701, 703-704): Street Offences Act 1959 s 2(2) (as amended: see note 5 supra).

The application must be heard and determined in private unless the person desires that the proceedings be conducted in public: s 2(3) (amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Sch 1 para 3(5)).

7 Street Offences Act 1959 s 2(1) (amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Sch 1 para 3(1), (3)).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING/ (iv) Solicitation by Prostitutes/226. Placing of advertisement relating to prostitution.

226. Placing of advertisement relating to prostitution.

A person commits an offence if he places on or in the immediate vicinity of a public telephone<sup>1</sup> an advertisement relating to prostitution<sup>2</sup> and he does so with the intention that the advertisement should come to the attention of any other person or persons<sup>3</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup>, to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale<sup>5</sup>, or to both<sup>6</sup>.

1 'Public telephone' means any telephone which is located in a public place and made available for use by the public, or a section of the public; and where such a telephone is located in or on, or attached to, a kiosk, booth, acoustic hood, shelter or other structure, that structure: Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 46(5). 'Public place' means any place to which the public has or is permitted to have access, whether on payment or otherwise, other than any place to which children under the age of 16 years are not permitted to have access, whether by law or otherwise, and any premises which are wholly or mainly used for residential purposes: ss 46(5), 47(2).

The Secretary of State may by order provide for s 46 to apply in relation to any public structure of a description specified in the order as it applies in relation to a public telephone: s 47(1). For these purposes, 'public structure' means any structure that is provided as an amenity for the use of the public or a section of the public and is located in a public place: s 47(2). The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument (s 47(4)) but no such order may be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, each House of Parliament (s 47(5)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such orders had been made.

2 Ibid s 46(1)(a). As to the meaning of 'prostitution' at common law see PARA 224 note 1 ante. For these purposes, an advertisement is an advertisement relating to prostitution if it is for the services of a prostitute, whether male or female (s 46(2)(a)) or indicates that premises are premises at which such services are offered (s 46(2)(b)). In any proceedings for an offence, any advertisement which a reasonable person would consider to be an advertisement relating to prostitution is presumed to be such an advertisement unless it is shown not to be: s 46(3).

3 Ibid s 46(1)(b).

4 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING/ (iv) Solicitation by Prostitutes/227. Soliciting for the purpose of prostitution.

227. Soliciting for the purpose of prostitution.

A person commits an offence if he solicits another person, or different persons, for the purpose of prostitution<sup>1</sup> either from a motor vehicle<sup>2</sup> while it is in a street<sup>3</sup> or public place<sup>4</sup> or in a street or public place while in the immediate vicinity of a motor vehicle that he has just got out of or off<sup>5</sup>, persistently<sup>6</sup> or in such manner or in such circumstances as to be likely to cause annoyance to the person (or any of the persons) solicited, or nuisance to other persons in the neighbourhood<sup>7</sup>. A person also commits an offence if in a street or public place he persistently solicits another person, or different persons, for the purpose of prostitution<sup>8</sup>. A person guilty of either of these offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>9</sup>.

1 For these purposes, references to a person soliciting another person for the purpose of prostitution are references to his soliciting that person for the purpose of obtaining that person's services as a prostitute: Sexual Offences Act 1985 s 4(1) (amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 56, Sch 1 para 4(1), (5)(b)-(e)). As to the meanings of 'prostitute' and 'solicit' at common law see PARA 224 notes 1, 2 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'motor vehicle' see the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 185(1); and ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 210 (definition applied by the Sexual Offences Act 1985 s 1(3) (amended by the Road Traffic (Consequential Provisions) Act 1988 s 4, Sch 3 para 29)).

3 For these purposes, 'street' includes any bridge, road, lane, footway, subway, square, court, alley or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not, which is for the time being open to the public; and the doorways and entrances of premises abutting on a street, and any ground adjoining and open to a street, are to be treated as forming part of the street: Sexual Offences Act 1985 s 4(4).

4 Ibid s 1(1)(a) (s 1(1) amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Sch 1 para 4(1), (3)). As to the meaning of 'public place' see PARA 224 note 4 ante.

5 Sexual Offences Act 1985 s 1(1)(b) (as amended: see note 4 supra).

6 There must be a degree of repetition, either of invitations to one person or to different persons, but two invitations may be sufficient to support a charge: see Dale v Smith [1967] 2 All ER 1133, [1967] 1 WLR 700, DC (decided under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 32 (repealed)).

7 Sexual Offences Act 1985 s 1(1) (as amended: see note 4 supra). In convicting a person of 'kerb-crawling' contrary to s 1 (as amended), justices are entitled to apply their local knowledge of the area where the offence occurred and conclude that his activities would have been likely to cause a nuisance to other persons in the neighbourhood even though there was no direct evidence that a nuisance had actually been caused to anyone: Paul v DPP (1989) 90 Cr App Rep 173, DC.

8 Sexual Offences Act 1985 s 2(1) (amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Sch 1 para 4(1), (4)). There must be more than one act of soliciting in order to establish the element of persistence: Darroch v DPP (1990) 91 Cr App Rep 378, [1990] Crim LR 814, DC. To prove soliciting, the prosecution must prove that the defendant gave some indication, by act or words, to the prostitute, that he required the prostitute's services: Darroch v DPP supra (act of persistently driving a motor vehicle round an area frequented by prostitutes did not constitute an act of soliciting a woman for the purposes of prostitution; thus although there had been one act of soliciting, beckoning to a prostitute, there had not been persistent soliciting).

9 Sexual Offences Act 1985 ss 1(2), 2(2) (amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1993). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

228. Trafficking into, from or within the United Kingdom for sexual exploitation.

A person commits an offence<sup>1</sup> if he intentionally arranges or facilitates the arrival in<sup>2</sup>, the departure from<sup>3</sup>, or travel within<sup>4</sup>, the United Kingdom<sup>5</sup> of another person ('B') and either:

- 233 (1) he intends to do anything to or in respect of B, after his arrival or departure or during or after the journey, and in any part of the world, which if done will involve the commission of an applicable sexual offence<sup>6</sup>; or
- 234 (2) he believes that another person is likely to do something to or in respect of B, after his arrival or departure or during or after the journey, and in any part of the world, which if done will involve the commission of an applicable sexual offence<sup>7</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>8</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>10</sup>, or to both<sup>11</sup>.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(7) OFFENCES RELATING TO PROSTITUTION AND SEX TRAFFICKING/(v) Sex Trafficking Offences/229A. Forfeiture and detention of vehicles etc.

229A. Forfeiture and detention of vehicles etc.

1. Forfeiture of land vehicle, ship or aircraft

The following provisions<sup>1</sup> apply if a person is convicted on indictment of a sex trafficking offence<sup>2</sup>. The court may order the forfeiture of a land vehicle<sup>3</sup> used or intended to be used in connection with the offence if the convicted person (1) owned the vehicle<sup>4</sup> at the time the offence was committed; (2) was at that time a director, secretary or manager of a company which owned the vehicle; (3) was at that time in possession of the vehicle under a hire-purchase agreement; (4) was at that time a director, secretary or manager of a company which was in possession of the vehicle under a hire-purchase agreement; or (5) was driving the vehicle in the course of the commission of the offence<sup>5</sup>. The court may order the forfeiture of a ship or aircraft used or intended to be used in connection with the offence if the convicted person (a) owned the ship or aircraft at the time the offence was committed; (b) was at that time a director, secretary or manager of a company which owned the ship or aircraft; (c) was at that time in possession of the ship or aircraft under a hire-purchase agreement; (d) was at that time a director, secretary or manager of a company which was in possession of the ship or aircraft under a hire-purchase agreement; (e) was at that time a charterer of the ship or aircraft; or (f) committed the offence while acting as captain<sup>6</sup> of the ship or aircraft<sup>7</sup>. Where a person who claims to have an interest in a land vehicle, ship or aircraft applies to a court to make representations on the question of forfeiture, the court may not make an order under the above provisions in respect of the vehicle, ship or aircraft unless the person has been given an opportunity to make representations<sup>8</sup>.

<sup>4</sup> In the 2003 Act ss 60A and 60B, a reference to being an owner of a vehicle, ship or aircraft includes a reference to being any of a number of persons who jointly own it: s 60C(2).

But in a case to which head (a) or (b) in the TEXT does not apply, forfeiture may be ordered only (1) in the case of a ship, if s 60A(5) or (6) applies; (2) in the case of an aircraft, if s 60A(5) or (7) applies: s 60A(4). Section 60A(5) applies where a person who, at the time the offence was committed, owned the ship or aircraft or was a director, secretary or manager of a company which owned it, knew or ought to have known of the intention to use it in the course of the commission of an offence under ss 57-59: s 60A(5). Section 60A(6) applies where a ship's gross tonnage is less than 500 tons: s 60A(6). Section 60A(7) applies where the maximum weight at which an aircraft (which is not a hovercraft) may take off in accordance with its certificate of airworthiness is less than 5,700 kilogrammes: s 60A(7).

8 Ibid s 60A(8).

2. Detention of land vehicle, ship or aircraft

If a person has been arrested for an offence<sup>1</sup>, a constable or a senior immigration officer<sup>2</sup> may detain a relevant vehicle<sup>3</sup>, ship or aircraft (1) until a decision is taken as to whether or not to charge the arrested person with that offence; (2) if the arrested person has been charged, until he is acquitted, the charge against him is dismissed or the proceedings are discontinued; or (3) if he has been charged and convicted, until the court<sup>4</sup> decides whether or not to order forfeiture of the vehicle, ship or aircraft<sup>5</sup>. A person (other than the arrested person) may apply to the court for the release of a land vehicle, ship or aircraft on the grounds that (a) he owns the vehicle, ship or aircraft; (b) he was, immediately before the detention of the vehicle, ship or aircraft, in possession of it under a hire-purchase agreement; or (c) he is a charterer of the ship or aircraft<sup>6</sup>. The court to which an application is made<sup>7</sup> may, on such security or surety being tendered as it considers satisfactory, release the vehicle, ship or aircraft on condition that it is made available to the court if (i) the arrested person is convicted; and (ii) an order for its forfeiture is made<sup>8</sup>.

1 ie an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss 57-59 (see PARA 228).

2 In ibid s 60B, 'senior immigration officer' means an immigration officer (appointed or employed as such under the Immigration Act 1971) not below the rank of chief immigration officer: 2003 Act s 60C(6) (added by Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006 Sch 4 para 2).

3 A vehicle, ship or aircraft is a relevant vehicle, ship or aircraft, in relation to an arrested person if it is a land vehicle, ship or aircraft which the constable or officer concerned has reasonable grounds for believing could, on conviction of the arrested person for the offence for which he was arrested, be the subject of an order for forfeiture made under the 2003 Act s 60A (see PARA 229A.1): s 60B(2). For the meaning of 'ship', 'aircraft' and 'land vehicle' see PARA 229A.1.

4 In ibid s 60B, 'court' means (1) in relation to England and Wales (a) if the arrested person has not been charged, or he has been charged but proceedings for the offence have not begun to be heard, a magistrates' court; (b) if he has been charged and proceedings for the offence are being heard, the court hearing the proceedings; (2) in relation to Northern Ireland (i) if the arrested person has not been charged, a magistrates' court for the county court division in which he was arrested; (ii) if he has been charged but proceedings for the offence have not begun to be heard, a magistrates' court for the county court division in which he was charged; (iii) if he has been charged and proceedings for the offence are being heard, the court hearing the proceedings: s 60B(5).

7 Under ibid s 60B(3).

8 Under ibid s 60A (see PARA 229A.1): s 60B(4).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(8) PREPARATORY OFFENCES/230. Administering a substance with intent.

(8) PREPARATORY OFFENCES

230. Administering a substance with intent.

A person commits an offence if he intentionally administers a substance to, or causes a substance to be taken by<sup>1</sup>, another person knowing that that person does not consent<sup>2</sup> and with the intention of stupefying or overpowering him so as to enable any person to engage in a sexual<sup>3</sup> activity that involves him<sup>4</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years<sup>5</sup> and on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>6</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>7</sup>, or to both<sup>8</sup>.

1 See the Offences against the Person Act 1861 ss 23, 24; and PARA 124 ante.

2 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 61(1)(a). As to consent, and the evidential presumptions applicable in sexual assault cases, see PARA 163 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'sexual' see PARA 162 ante.

4 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 61(1)(b).

5 Ibid s 61(2)(b).

6 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(8) PREPARATORY OFFENCES/231. Committing an offence with intent to commit a sexual offence.

231. Committing an offence with intent to commit a sexual offence.

A person commits an offence if he commits any offence with the intention of committing a relevant sexual offence<sup>1</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years<sup>2</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>4</sup>, or to both<sup>5</sup>. However, if the offence is committed by kidnapping or false imprisonment, the offender is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life<sup>6</sup>.

1 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 62(1). A 'relevant sexual offence' is any offence under Pt 1 (ss 1-79) (as amended) (including an offence of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring such an offence): ss 62(2), 63(2).

2 Ibid s 62(4)(b). For sentencing guidelines in respect of battery with intent to commit a sexual offence see R v Wisniewski [2004] EWCA Crim 3361, [2005] Crim LR 403.

3 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). SEXUAL OFFENCES/(8) PREPARATORY OFFENCES/232. Trespass with intent to commit a sexual offence.

232. Trespass with intent to commit a sexual offence.

A person commits an offence if:

- 235 (1) he is a trespasser<sup>1</sup> on any premises<sup>2</sup>;
- 236 (2) he intends to commit a relevant sexual offence<sup>3</sup> on the premises<sup>4</sup>; and
- 237 (3) he knows that, or is reckless as to whether, he is a trespasser<sup>5</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years<sup>6</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>7</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>8</sup>, or to both<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the nature of trespass on land see TORT vol 97 (2010) PARA 562 et seq.

2 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 63(1)(a). For these purposes, 'premises' includes a structure or part of a structure; and 'structure' includes a tent, vehicle or vessel or other temporary or movable structure: s 63(2). In a legal sense, 'premises' means the subject-matter of the habendum in a lease. This covers any sort of property of which a lease can be granted: a building or land with a building on part of it or land without a building on it provided that it has a defined boundary: Andrews v Andrews and Mears [1908] 2 KB 567 at 570 ('premises' in workmen's compensation legislation); Whitley v Stumbles [1930] AC 544, HL; Bracey v Read [1963] Ch 88, [1962] 3 All ER 472 (landlord and tenant legislation).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(9) MISCELLANEOUS SEXUAL OFFENCES/234. Voyeurism.

234. Voyeurism.

A person commits an offence if:

- 238 (1) for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification, he observes<sup>1</sup> another person doing a private act<sup>2</sup> and knows that the other person does not consent<sup>3</sup> to being observed for his sexual gratification<sup>4</sup>;
- 239 (2) he installs equipment, or constructs or adapts a structure<sup>5</sup> or part of a structure, with the intention of enabling himself or another person to commit the above offence<sup>6</sup>;
- 240 (3) he operates equipment with the intention of enabling another person to observe, for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification, a third person doing a private act<sup>7</sup> and he knows that that third person does not consent to his operating equipment with that intention<sup>8</sup>; or
- 241 (4) he records another person doing a private act<sup>9</sup> and does so with the intention that he or a third person will, for the purpose of obtaining sexual gratification, look at an image<sup>10</sup> of that person doing the act<sup>11</sup>, and knowing that the person doing the act does not consent to his recording the act with that intention<sup>12</sup>.

A person guilty of any of these offences is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years<sup>13</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>14</sup>, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>15</sup>, or to both<sup>16</sup>.

1 As to references to 'observation' see PARA 175 note 3 ante.

2 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 67(1)(a). For these purposes, a person is doing a private act if he is in a place which, in the circumstances, would reasonably be expected to provide privacy, and either his genitals, buttocks or breasts are exposed or covered only with underwear (s 68(1)(a)), he is using a lavatory (s 68(1)(b)), or he is doing a sexual act not of a kind ordinarily done in public (s 68(1)(c)).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(9) MISCELLANEOUS SEXUAL OFFENCES/237. Sexual activity in a public lavatory.

237. Sexual activity in a public lavatory.

A person commits an offence if he is in a lavatory to which the public or a section of the public has or is permitted to have access, whether on payment or otherwise<sup>1</sup>, and he intentionally engages in an activity<sup>2</sup> which is sexual<sup>3</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup>, to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale<sup>5</sup>, or to both<sup>6</sup>. Sexual activity in any public place can also constitute the offence of outraging public decency<sup>7</sup> or the public order offence of causing harassment, alarm or distress<sup>8</sup>.

1 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 71(1)(a). Whether a lavatory is one to which 'the public or any section of the public has or is permitted to have access' is a question of fact and degree: R v Waters (1963) 47 Cr App Rep 149, CCA (decided under the Road Traffic Act 1960 s 6 (repealed)). If the public or any section of it has access to a place by express or implied permission, it is irrelevant that the occupier of the premises has the right to refuse entry or restrict who may enter: Lawrenson v Oxford [1982] Crim LR 185, DC (decided under the Public Order Act 1936 s 5 (repealed)). If the public or a section of the public is not permitted to have access to a lavatory, it can nevertheless satisfy the present requirement (on the ground that the public or a section of it has access) if there is nothing to prevent access by it: see Knox v Anderton (1983) 76 Cr App Rep 156, 147 JP 340, DC (decided under the Prevention of Crime Act 1953 s 1).

It is sufficient that the public or any section of the public has or is permitted to have access to the lavatory at the material time. Thus a lavatory which is open for public use at certain times but closed at others is within the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 71(1)(a) when it is open but not when it is closed: Sandy v Martin [1974] Crim LR 258, DC (decided under the Road Traffic Act 1972 s 6 (repealed)); Marsh v Arscott (1982) 75 Cr App Rep 211, DC (decided under the Public Order Act 1936 s 5 (repealed)).

2 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 71(1)(b).

3 Ibid s 71(1)(c). For these purposes, an activity is sexual if a reasonable person would, in all the circumstances but regardless of any person's purpose, consider it to be sexual: s 71(2).

4 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

(10) PROTECTION OF ANONYMITY OF VICTIMS OF SEXUAL OFFENCES

238. Protection of victims of sexual offences.

Where allegations are made regarding the commission of certain sexual offences the alleged victims of those offences are entitled to have their identities protected<sup>1</sup>. The offences in relation to which this entitlement arises are rape<sup>2</sup> and other substantive offences under the Sexual Offences Act 2003<sup>3</sup>, that is to say, any of the statutory offences of sexual assault<sup>4</sup>, causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent<sup>5</sup>, any of the offences involving rape and sexual assault of a child aged under 13<sup>6</sup> and other offences involving sexual activity with a child (including arranging or facilitating the commission of a child sex offence and meeting a child following sexual grooming)<sup>7</sup>, abuse of a position of trust<sup>8</sup>, familial child sex offences<sup>9</sup>, offences against mentally disordered persons (including offences by care workers)<sup>10</sup>, abuse of children through prostitution or pornography<sup>11</sup>, exploitation of prostitution<sup>12</sup>, trafficking<sup>13</sup>, administering a substance, committing an offence or trespassing with intent to commit a sexual offence<sup>14</sup>, exposure<sup>15</sup>, voyeurism<sup>16</sup>, sexual penetration of a corpse<sup>17</sup>. However, the offences relating to sex with an adult relative<sup>18</sup>, intercourse with an animal<sup>19</sup>, and sexual activity in a public lavatory<sup>20</sup> are excluded from protection under these provisions. The entitlement to anonymity also arises in respect of a number of offences which have been repealed<sup>21</sup>, in respect of any attempt<sup>22</sup>, conspiracy<sup>23</sup> or incitement of another<sup>24</sup> to commit, and aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of<sup>25</sup>, any of the offences or former offences in respect of which protection is afforded<sup>26</sup>, and in respect of corresponding service offences<sup>27</sup> and offences against the law of Northern Ireland<sup>28</sup>.

21 le burglary with intent to rape (which has been abolished) (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 2(1)(ab) (as added: see note 2 supra)), intercourse with a mentally handicapped person by hospital staff (ie an offence under the Mental Health Act 1959 s 128 (repealed)) (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 2(1)(b)), any offence under the Indecency with Children Act 1960 s 1 (repealed) (indecent conduct towards young child) (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 2(1)(c)), any offence under the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 54 (repealed) (incitement by man of his grand-daughter, daughter or sister under the age of 16 to commit incest with him) (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 2(1)(d)), and any offence under the provisions of the Sexual Offences Act 1956 relating to intercourse by force or intimidation, intercourse with girls under 16 or defectives, incest, unnatural offences, assaults, and abduction of a woman by force (ie ss 2-7, 9-12, 14-17 (all repealed)) (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 2(1)(a), (2)(a)-(n) (s 2(2)(n) as added: see note 2 supra)).

However, the anonymity provisions do not apply:

24 (1) to a woman against whom an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 10 (repealed) (incest by a man), or an attempt to commit that offence, is alleged to have been committed if she is accused of having committed an offence under s 11 (repealed) (incest by a woman), or an attempt to commit that offence, against the man who is alleged to have committed the offence under s 10 (repealed) against her (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 4(1), (2));

25 (2) to a man against whom an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 11 (repealed), or an attempt, is alleged to have been committed if he is accused of having committed an offence under s 10 (repealed) against the woman who is alleged to have committed the offence under s 11 (repealed) against him (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 4(3)); or

26 (3) to a person against whom an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 12 (repealed) (buggery), or an attempt to commit that offence, is alleged to have been committed if that person is accused of having committed an offence under s 12 (repealed) against the person who is alleged to have committed the offence under s 12 (repealed) against him (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 4(4)), subject to the proviso that these provisions do not affect the operation of the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 in relation to anything done at any time before the first-mentioned person is accused (s 4(5)-(7))). These provisions also apply in respect of corresponding service offences and offences under Northern Ireland law: see s 4(8) (added by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 Sch 2 paras 6, 10; and amended by the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2003, SI 2003/1247, art 36(1), Sch 1 para 13); and the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 4(9) (added by the Armed Forces Act 2001 s 34, Sch 6 para 2). 'Service offence' means an offence against the Army Act 1955 s 70, the Air Force Act 1955 s 70 or the Naval Discipline Act 1957 s 42 (as amended) (see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 422).

24 Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 2(1)(g) (as added: see note 23 supra).

25 Ibid s 2(1)(h) (as added: see note 2 supra).

26 Where it is alleged or there is an accusation that an offence of conspiracy or incitement of another to commit either rape or one of the former offences in respect of which protection is afforded has been committed, or that an offence of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of an offence of incitement of another to commit such an offence has been committed, the person against whom the substantive offence is alleged to have been intended to be committed is to be regarded as the person against whom the conspiracy or incitement is alleged to have been committed: ibid s 6(2A) (added by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 Sch 9 para 52(3)(a); and amended by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 Sch 2 paras 6, 12(1), (3)). 'The substantive offence' means the offence to which the alleged conspiracy or incitement related: Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 6(2A) (as so added). As to references to an accusation alleging an offence see PARA 239 note 2 post.

27 Ibid s 2(4) (added by the Armed Forces Act 2001 s 34, Sch 6 para 1). The Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 has effect with modifications in respect of service offences: see s 7 (as amended).

28 See ibid s 2(3) (as substituted (see note 2 supra); amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 139, Sch 6 para 31(1), (3), and by the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 2003, SI 2003/1247, Sch 1 para 12(a)).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(10) PROTECTION OF ANONYMITY OF VICTIMS OF SEXUAL OFFENCES/239. Victims' right to anonymity.

239. Victims' right to anonymity.

Where an allegation has been made that a relevant sexual offence<sup>1</sup> has been committed against a person<sup>2</sup>, until such time as a person has been accused of the offence<sup>3</sup> no matter relating to the alleged victim<sup>4</sup> may during his lifetime be included in any publication<sup>5</sup> if it is likely to lead members of the public to identify that person as the person against whom the offence is alleged to have been committed<sup>6</sup>. Where a person is accused of such an offence, no matter likely to lead members of the public to identify a person as the person against whom the offence is alleged to have been committed ('the complainant') may during the complainant's lifetime be included in any publication<sup>7</sup> (although this is subject to the power of a trial judge to give a direction lifting a victim's anonymity where so to do is in the public interest or is conducive to the conduct of the trial or where the protection of the victim's identity imposes a substantial and unreasonable restriction on the reporting of proceedings<sup>8</sup>). Violation of these provisions is an offence<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the offences in respect of which the victim has a right to anonymity under the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 see PARA 238 ante.

2 Where it is alleged that an offence to which the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 applies has been committed, the fact that any person has consented to an act which, on any prosecution for that offence, would fall to be proved by the prosecution, does not prevent that person from being regarded as a person against whom the alleged offence was committed (s 6(2)(a)), and where a person is accused of an offence of incest or buggery (both now abolished), the other party to the act in question is taken to be a person against whom the offence was committed even though he consented to that act (s 6(2)(b)). For these purposes, a person is accused of an offence (other than a service offence) if an information is laid, or (in Northern Ireland) a complaint is made, alleging that he has committed the offence, he appears before a court charged with the offence, a court before which he is appearing sends him to the Crown Court for trial on a new charge alleging the offence, or a bill of indictment charging him with the offence is preferred before a court in which he may lawfully be indicted for the offence: s 6(3) (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 168(1), Sch 9 para 52(3)(b); the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 48, Sch 2 paras 6, 12(1), (4); the Armed Forces Act 2001 s 34, Sch 6 para 3(1), (3); and the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 41, Sch 3 para 63). References in the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 6(2A) (as added and amended) (see PARA 238 note 26 ante) and in s 3 (as amended) (see PARA 241 post) to an accusation alleging an offence are to be construed accordingly: s 6(3) (as so amended). For the meaning of 'service offence' see PARA 238 note 21 ante. A person is accused of a service offence if he is treated by the Army Act 1955 s 75(4) (as substituted), the Air Force Act 1955 s 75(4) (as substituted) or the Naval Discipline Act 1957 s 47A(4) (as added) (see ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 338) as charged with the offence; and references in the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 3 (as amended) (see PARA 241 post) to an accusation alleging an offence are to be construed accordingly: s 6(3A) (added by the Armed Forces Act 2001 Sch 6 para 3(1), (4)). As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 post. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 1(3)(a) (ss 1(1), (2), 6(1) amended, and s 1(3) substituted, by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 Sch 2 paras 6, 7(1)-(4), 12(1), (2)).

4 As to the matters relating to alleged victims in respect of which these provisions apply see PARA 240 post.

5 'Publication' includes any speech, writing, relevant programme or other communication in whatever form, which is addressed to the public at large or any section of the public (and for this purpose every relevant programme is taken to be so addressed), but does not include an indictment or other document prepared for use in particular legal proceedings: Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 6(1) (as amended: see note 3 supra). 'Relevant programme' means a programme included in a programme service, within the meaning of the Broadcasting Act 1990 (see s 201 (as amended); and TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND BROADCASTING vol 45(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 328); Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 6(1) (as so amended).

NOTE 2--Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 6(3), (3A) further amended: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 127.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/3. SEXUAL OFFENCES/(10) PROTECTION OF ANONYMITY OF VICTIMS OF SEXUAL OFFENCES/240. Matters in respect of which right to anonymity applies.

240. Matters in respect of which right to anonymity applies.

The matters relating to a person in respect of which he has a right to anonymity<sup>1</sup> as the victim of an alleged sexual offence<sup>2</sup> include in particular:

- 252 (1) his name<sup>3</sup>;
- 253 (2) his address<sup>4</sup>;
- 254 (3) the identity of any school or other educational establishment attended by him<sup>5</sup>;
- 255 (4) the identity of any place of work<sup>6</sup>; and
- 256 (5) any still or moving picture<sup>7</sup> of him<sup>8</sup>.

Nothing in these provisions, however, prohibits the inclusion in a publication of matter consisting only of a report of criminal proceedings other than proceedings at, or intended to lead to, or on an appeal arising out of, a trial at which the defendant is charged with the offence<sup>9</sup>.

1 He under the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 1(1) or s 1(2) (as amended) (see PARA 239 ante), if the inclusion of those matters in any publication is likely to have the result mentioned in that provision. As to the meaning of 'publication' see PARA 239 note 5 ante.

2 As to the offences in respect of which the victim has a right to anonymity under the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 see PARA 238 ante.

3 Ibid s 1(3A)(a) (s 1(3A) added, and s 1(4) amended, by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 48, Sch 2 paras 6, 7(1), (4), (5)).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(10) PROTECTION OF ANONYMITY OF VICTIMS OF SEXUAL OFFENCES/241. Power to displace anonymity.

241. Power to displace anonymity.

If a person who has been convicted of an offence and has given notice of an appeal against the conviction, or notice of an application for leave so to appeal, applies to the appellate court for a direction and satisfies the court: (a) that the direction is required for the purpose of obtaining evidence in support of the appeal<sup>12</sup>; and (b) that the applicant is likely to suffer substantial injustice if the direction is not given<sup>13</sup>, the court must direct that the provisions relating to anonymity<sup>14</sup> are not, by virtue of an accusation which alleges an offence<sup>15</sup> specified in the direction, to apply in relation to a complainant so specified<sup>16</sup>.

Any such direction does not affect the operation of the provisions relating to anonymity at any time before the direction is given<sup>17</sup>.

1 As to the offences in respect of which the victim has a right to anonymity under the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 see PARA 238 ante.

2 'Judge' means: (1) in the case of an offence which is to be tried summarily or for which the mode of trial has not been determined, any justice of the peace (ibid s 3(6)(a) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 (Consequential Provisions) Order 2005, SI 2005/886, art 2, Schedule para 49)); and (2) in any other case, any judge of the Crown Court in England and Wales (Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 3(6)(b) (amended by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 s 48, Sch 2 paras 6, 9(1), (2))).

3 As to the provisions relating to anonymity see the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 1 (as amended); and PARAS 239-240 ante.

4 As to references to an accusation alleging an offence see PARA 239 note 2 ante.

5 Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 3(1). As to the meaning of 'the complainant' see PARA 239 ante.

6 If, after the commencement of a trial at which a person is charged with an offence, a new trial of the person for that offence is ordered, the commencement of any previous trial is disregarded: ibid s 3(7).

7 Ibid s 3(1)(a).

8 Ibid s 3(1)(b).

- 10 Ibid s 3(2)(b).
- 11 Ibid s 3(3).
- 12 Ibid s 3(4)(a).
- 13 Ibid s 3(4)(b).
- 14 See note 3 supra.
- 15 Is an offence listed in the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 2(1) (see PARA 238 ante).
- 16 Ibid s 3(4).
- 17 Ibid s 3(5).

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(10) PROTECTION OF ANONYMITY OF VICTIMS OF SEXUAL OFFENCES/242. Offences relating to violation of anonymity provisions, and defences.

242. Offences relating to violation of anonymity provisions, and defences.

If any matter<sup>1</sup> is included in a publication<sup>2</sup> in contravention of the provisions relating to anonymity<sup>3</sup>, any proprietor, editor and publisher of the newspaper or periodical<sup>4</sup>, any body corporate or Scottish partnership engaged in providing the programme service in which the programme is included<sup>5</sup>, any person having functions in relation to the programme corresponding to those of an editor of a newspaper<sup>6</sup>, or any other person publishing the publication in question<sup>7</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale<sup>8</sup>.

Where a person is charged with an offence of violating the anonymity provisions<sup>9</sup> it is a defence to prove<sup>10</sup>:

- 257 (1) that the publication in which the matter appeared was one in respect of which the person against whom the offence is alleged to have been committed had given written consent<sup>11</sup> to the appearance of matter of that description<sup>12</sup>;
- 258 (2) that at the time of the alleged offence he was not aware and neither suspected nor had reason to suspect that the publication included the matter in question<sup>13</sup>; or
- 259 (3) that at the time of the alleged offence he was not aware and neither suspected nor had reason to suspect that the allegation in question had been made<sup>14</sup>.

Proceedings for such an offence may be instituted only by or with the consent of the Attorney General<sup>15</sup>.

1 As to the matters relating to alleged victims in respect of which the provisions relating to anonymity apply see PARA 240 post. As to the offences in respect of which the victim has a right to anonymity under the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 see PARA 238 ante.

2 As to the meaning of 'publication' see PARA 239 note 5 ante.

3 As to the provisions relating to anonymity see PARAS 239-240 ante.

4 Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 5(1)(a) (s 5(1) substituted, s 5(2)-(4) amended, and s 5(5A) added, by the Youth Justice and Criminal Evidence Act 1999 ss 48, 67(3), Sch 2 paras 6, 11(1)-(7), Sch 6). This provision applies only where the publication is in a newspaper or periodical: Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 5(1)(a) (as so substituted). A financial backer with no editorial input or knowledge is nonetheless a publisher for these purposes: see Brown v DPP (1998) 162 JP 333, 142 Sol Jo LB 132, DC.

5 Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 5(1)(b)(i) (as substituted: see note 4 supra). This provision applies only where the publication is in a relevant programme: s 5(1)(b)(i) (as so substituted). For the meaning of 'relevant programme' see PARA 239 note 5 ante.

6 Ibid s 5(1)(b)(ii) (as substituted: see note 4 supra). This provision applies only where the publication is in a relevant programme: s 5(1)(b)(ii) (as so substituted).

7 Ibid s 5(1)(c) (as substituted: see note 4 supra).

8 Ibid s 5(1) (as substituted: see note 4 supra). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142. Where an offence committed by a body corporate is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of, or to be attributable to any neglect on the part of a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate or a person purporting to act in any such capacity, he as well as the body corporate is guilty of an offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly: s 5(6). A 'director' means, in relation to a body corporate whose affairs are managed by its members, a member of the body corporate: s 5(7). See PARA 38 ante. The scheme in ss 1, 5 (both as amended) is not incompatible with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 10 (freedom of expression): O'Riordan v DPP [2005] EWHC 1240 (Admin), (2005) Times, 31 May, DC. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

9 It is an offence under the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 5 (as amended).

10 As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the European Convention on Human Rights art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 et seq post.

11 Written consent is not a defence if it is proved that any person interfered unreasonably with the peace or comfort of the person giving the consent, with intent to obtain it, or that the person was under the age of 16 when it was given: Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992 s 5(3) (as amended: see note 4 supra).

12 Ibid s 5(2) (as amended: see note 4 supra).

13 Ibid s 5(5) (as amended: see note 4 supra).

14 Ibid s 5(5A) (as added: see note 4 supra).

15 Ibid s 5(4) (as amended: see note 4 supra). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1065 post.

SEXUAL OFFENCES/(11) OFFENCES COMMITTED ABROAD/243. Sexual offences committed outside the United Kingdom.

(11) OFFENCES COMMITTED ABROAD

243. Sexual offences committed outside the United Kingdom.

Any act done by a person in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup> which constituted an offence under the law in force in that country or territory<sup>2</sup> and would constitute a specified sexual offence under the law of England and Wales if it had been done in England and Wales<sup>3</sup> constitutes an offence under the law of England and Wales<sup>4</sup>. The offences are:

- 260 (1) where the victim of the offence was aged under 16 at the time of the offence<sup>5</sup>, any of the statutory offences of rape<sup>6</sup>, sexual assault<sup>7</sup>, causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent<sup>8</sup>, and any of the offences involving abuse of a position of trust<sup>9</sup>, familial child sex offences<sup>10</sup>, offences against mentally disordered persons (including offences by care workers)<sup>11</sup>, abuse of children through prostitution or pornography<sup>12</sup>, and administering a substance with intent to commit a sexual offence<sup>13</sup>;
- 261 (2) any of the offences involving rape and sexual assault of a child aged under 13<sup>14</sup>, and other offences involving sexual activity with a child under 16 (including arranging or facilitating the commission of a child sex offence and meeting a child following sexual grooming)<sup>15</sup>;
- 262 (3) committing an offence, or trespassing, with intent to commit a sexual offence<sup>16</sup> against a person aged under 16<sup>17</sup>; and
- 263 (4) an offence relating to the taking, possession etc of indecent photographs of children<sup>18</sup>.

References to any of these offences include a reference to an attempt, conspiracy or incitement to commit that offence, or to aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring its commission<sup>19</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2 Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 72(1)(a). In the Crown Court the question whether this condition is met is to be decided by the judge alone (s 72(6)): otherwise, it is to be taken to be met unless, not later than rules of court may provide, the defendant serves on the prosecution a notice stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the act in question, the condition is not in his opinion met (s 72(4)(a)), showing his grounds for that opinion (s 72(4)(b)), and requiring the prosecution to prove that it is met (s 72(4)(c)), although the court may, if it thinks fit, permit the defendant to require the prosecution to prove that the condition is met without service of such a notice (s 72(5)). An act punishable under the law in force in any country or territory constitutes an offence under that law for these purposes, however it is described in that law: s 72(3). As to rules of court see PARA 65 note 1 ante.

3 Ibid s 72(1)(b).

4 Proceedings by virtue of these provisions may be brought only against a person who was on 1 September 1997, or has since become, a British citizen or resident in the United Kingdom: Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 72(2). As to British citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 23-43. As to residence see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 134 et seq.

5 As to proof of age see PARA 1470 post. See also the Children and Young Persons Act 1933 s 99(2) (as amended) (which provides that where a charge or indictment alleges that a person in respect of whom an offence has been committed is under a specified age, there is a rebuttable presumption that the person is under that age); and CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1243.

6 Ie an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 1 (see PARA 165 ante): Sch 2 para 1(b).

7 Ie an offence of assault by penetration under ibid s 2 (see PARA 167 ante) or sexual assault under s 3 (see PARA 169 ante): Sch 2 para 1(b).

8 Ie an offence under ibid s 4 (see PARA 171 ante): Sch 2 para 1(b).

9 Ie an offence under ibid ss 16-19 (see PARAS 180-183 ante): Sch 2 para 1(b).

10 Ie an offence under ibid ss 25, 26 (see PARA 191 ante): Sch 2 para 1(b).

11 Ie an offence under ibid ss 30-41 (see PARAS 197-214 ante): Sch 2 para 1(b).

12 Ie an offence under ibid ss 47-50 (see PARAS 215-216 ante): Sch 2 para 1(b).

13 Ie an offence under ibid s 61 (see PARAS 215-216 ante): Sch 2 para 1(b).

14 Ie an offence under ibid ss 5-8 (see PARAS 166-172 ante): Sch 2 para 1(a).

15 Ie an offence under ibid ss 9-15 (see PARAS 173-179 ante): Sch 2 para 1(a).

16 Ie an offence under ibid s 62 or s 63 (see PARAS 231-232 ante): Sch 2 para 1(c).

17 Ibid Sch 2 para 1(c).

18 Ie an offence under the Protection of Children Act 1978 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 757 post) or the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 160 (as amended) (see PARA 758 post) in relation to a photograph or pseudo-photograph showing a child under 16: Sexual Offences Act 2003 Sch 2 para 1(d).

19 See ibid Sch 2 para 3. Where any act done by a person in England and Wales in respect of a child would amount to the offence of incitement to commit a specified sexual offence but for the fact that what he had in view would not be an offence triable in England and Wales (Sexual Offences (Conspiracy and Incitement) Act 1996 s 2(1)(a)), the whole or part of what he had in view was intended to take place in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom (s 2(1)(b)), and what he had in view would involve the commission of an offence under the law in force in that country or territory (s 2(1)(c)), then what he had in view is treated as that specified sexual offence for the purposes of any charge of incitement brought in respect of that act (s 2(2)(a)) and any such charge is accordingly triable in England and Wales (s 2(2)(b)).

The specified offences for these purposes are (by virtue of Schedule para 1(1)(b) (substituted by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 139, Sch 6 para 35)) any offence of:

27 (1) rape (ie an offence under the Sexual Offences Act 2003 s 1: see PARA 165 ante);

28 (2) assault by penetration (ie an offence under s 2: see PARA 167 ante);

29 (3) sexual assault (ie an offence under s 3: see PARA 169 ante);

30 (4) causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent (ie an offence under s 4: see PARA 171 ante);

31 (5) rape of a child under 13 (ie an offence under s 5: see PARA 177 ante);

32 (6) assault of a child under 13 by penetration (ie an offence under s 6: see PARA 168 ante);

33 (7) sexual assault of a child under 13 (ie an offence under s 7: see PARA 170 ante);

34 (8) causing or inciting a child under 13 to engage in sexual activity (ie an offence under s 8: see PARA 172 ante);

35 (9) sexual activity with a child (ie an offence under s 9: see PARA 173 ante);

36 (10) causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity (ie an offence under s 10: see PARA 174 ante);

- 37 (11) engaging in sexual activity in the presence of a child (ie an offence under s 11: see PARA 175 ante);
- 38 (12) causing a child to watch a sexual act (ie an offence under s 12: see PARA 176 ante);
- 39 (13) arranging or facilitating the commission of a child sex offence (ie an offence under s 14: see PARA 178 ante);
- 40 (15) meeting a child following sexual grooming (ie an offence under s 15: see PARA 179 ante);
- 41 (16) any of the offences involving abuse of a position of trust (ie any offence under ss 16-19: see PARAS 180-183 ante); and
- 42 (17) familial child sex offences (ie any offence under ss 25, 26: see PARA 191 ante).

These provisions apply only where the victim of the offence has not attained the age of 16 years: Sexual Offences (Conspiracy and Incitement) Act 1996 s 5, Schedule para 1(2) (amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 Sch 6 para 35). In any proceedings in respect of any offence triable by virtue of these provisions it is immaterial to guilt whether or not the accused was a British citizen at the time of any act or other event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence: Sexual Offences (Conspiracy and Incitement) Act 1996 s 3(6) (s 3(1), (2), (6), (9) amended by the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 s 9(1), (2), Sch 1 para 9(1), (2)(a), (b), (d), (f), Sch 2 Pt II). As to British citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 23-43.

Any act of incitement by means of a message (however communicated) is treated as done in England and Wales if the message is sent or received in England and Wales: Sexual Offences (Conspiracy and Incitement) Act 1996 s 2(3). References to an offence of incitement to commit a specified sexual offence include an offence triable in England and Wales as such an incitement by virtue of these provisions (without prejudice to the Sexual Offences (Conspiracy and Incitement) Act 1996 s 2(2): s 3(8). This applies to references in any enactment, instrument or document (except those in s 2 and the Criminal Law Act 1977 Pt I (ss 1-5) (as amended) (see PARAS 67-71 ante)): Sexual Offences (Conspiracy and Incitement) Act 1996 s 3(9) (as so amended).

Conduct punishable under the law in force in any country or territory is an offence under that law for these purposes, however it is described in that law: s 3(1) (as so amended). In the Crown Court the question of whether what the person had in view would involve the commission of an offence under the law in force in the country or territory in question is to be decided by the judge alone (s 3(5)); otherwise, this condition is to be taken to be satisfied unless, not later than rules of court may provide, the defence serves on the prosecution a notice stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to what the accused had in view, the condition is not in its opinion satisfied (s 3(2)(a) (as so amended)), showing the grounds for that opinion (s 3(2)(b)), and requiring the prosecution to show that it is satisfied (s 3(2)(c)), although the court may, if it thinks fit, permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is met without service of such a notice (s 3(4)). As to rules of court see PARA 65 note 1 ante.

244-281 The notification requirements and relevant offenders ... Appeals against order for variation, renewal or discharge

Material relating to this part has been revised and published under the title SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 360-367, and 496 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/282. Meaning of 'theft'.

4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY

(1) THEFT

282. Meaning of 'theft'.

It is immaterial whether the appropriation is made with a view to gain or is made for the thief's own benefit<sup>8</sup>.

A person guilty of theft is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'dishonestly' see PARA 283 post. The Theft Act 1968 ss 2-6 (see PARAS 283-290 post) have effect as regards the interpretation and operation of s 1 and, except where otherwise provided by the Theft Act 1968, apply only for the purposes of s 1: s 1(3).

2 For the meaning of 'appropriation' see PARA 284 post.

3 As to property which is susceptible of theft see PARAS 285-288 post.

4 For the meaning of 'belonging to another' see PARA 289 post.

5 For the meaning of 'intention of permanently depriving' see PARA 290 post.

6 Theft Act 1968 s 1(1). Section 1(1) is not to be construed as though it contained the words 'without having the consent of the owner' or words to that effect: Lawrence v Metropolitan Police Comr [1972] AC 626, 55 Cr App Rep 471, HL; applied in DPP v Gomez [1993] AC 442, 96 Cr App Rep 359, HL. The offences of theft and obtaining property by deception (see PARA 310 post) are not mutually exclusive, and sometimes the same facts may support a charge of either offence: see Lawrence v Metropolitan Police Comr supra; DPP v Gomez supra. It is possible for a person to be acquitted on a charge of theft but convicted on a charge of false accounting (see PARA 316 post) where the charges are founded on the same facts: see R v Eden (1971) 55 Cr App Rep 193, CA. It is possible in law for a person to steal and dishonestly handle the same goods: R v Dolan (1975) 62 Cr App Rep 36 at 39, CA, per Scarman LJ. Theft and handling (see PARA 302 post) may be charged as alternatives where there is a real possibility that at the trial the evidence may support one rather than the other; the jury should be directed that the defendant may not be convicted of both offences on the same facts: R v Shelton (1986) 83 Cr App Rep 379 at 384, CA, per Lawton LJ. See also R v Woods [1969] 1 QB 447, 53 Cr App Rep 30, CA; R v Smythe (1980) 72 Cr App Rep 8, CA.

Evidence of dispatch or receipt may be given by statutory declaration in proceedings for theft of anything in the course of transmission, whether by post or otherwise: see PARA 1536 post.

Any number of persons may be charged in one indictment with the same theft: see PARA 1303 note 1 post; and see also PARA 1223 post. It is unnecessary for the prosecution to prove that all the articles specified in the particulars of offence in the indictment have been stolen, but the sentence should relate only to the articles proved to have been stolen: Machent v Quinn [1970] 2 All ER 255, DC. If on the trial of an indictment for theft the jury is not satisfied that the defendant committed theft but it is proved that he committed an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 12(1) (taking a motor vehicle or other conveyance without authority: see PARA 298 post), the jury may find him guilty of the latter offence: see s 12(4); and PARA 298 post. As to the general power to bring in an alternative verdict see PARA 1335 post.

As to jurisdiction to prosecute offences of stealing a mail bag, postal packet etc in the course of transmission between places in different jurisdictions within the British postal area but outside England and Wales see PARA 292 post.

Theft is a specified offence for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(2) (as amended) (power to search for prohibited articles): see PARA 860 et seq post.

7 Theft Act 1968 s 1(1). An offence under s 1 is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a). For the extended territorial scope of theft in connection with acts in relation to or by means of nuclear material see the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983; and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1583. Theft is a penalty offence for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 1 (ss 1-49) (as amended): see PARA 586 post. Stealing is a constituent of certain other offences eg robbery (see PARA 293 post) and burglary (see PARA 294 post). As to the offence of going equipped for stealing etc see PARA 296 post.

8 See the Theft Act 1968 s 1(2).

10 See the Theft Act 1968 s 7 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 26(1)); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1). As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for theft has in his possession a firearm or imitation firearm see PARA 677 ante.

For sentencing guidelines in cases of theft see R v Barrick (1985) 81 Cr App Rep 78, CA; R v Trevor Clark [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 137, CA; R v Roach [2001] EWCA Crim 992, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 43 (breach of trust); R v Dhunay (1986) 8 Cr App Rep (S) 107, CA (airport baggage handlers); R v Stewart [1987] 2 All ER 383, 85 Cr App Rep 66, CA; R v Graham, R v Whatley [2004] EWCA Crim 2755, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 640 (fraudulent obtaining of welfare benefits); R v Page, R v Maher, R v Stewart [2004] EWCA Crim 3358, (2004) Times, 23 December (shoplifting). As to disqualification for driving and endorsement of licence where the defendant is convicted of stealing or attempting to steal a motor vehicle see the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 ss 34(2), 97(2), Sch 2 Pt II (as amended); and ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1060.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/283. Dishonesty.

283. Dishonesty.

A person's appropriation<sup>1</sup> of property belonging to another is not to be regarded as dishonest if he appropriates it in the belief<sup>2</sup>: (1) that he has in law the right to deprive the other of it on behalf of himself or of a third person<sup>3</sup>; or (2) that he would have the other's consent if the other knew of the appropriation and the circumstances of it<sup>4</sup>; or (3) that the person to whom the property belongs cannot be discovered by taking reasonable steps<sup>5</sup>, except where the property came to him as a trustee or personal representative<sup>6</sup>.

In determining whether the defendant acted dishonestly in cases not involving a belief in head (1), (2) or (3) above, the test is: (a) whether his actions were dishonest according to the ordinary standards of reasonable and honest people; and (b) if so, whether he himself realised that his actions were, according to those standards, dishonest<sup>7</sup>.

A person's appropriation of property may be dishonest notwithstanding that he is willing to pay for the property<sup>8</sup>. Dishonesty must exist at the time of the appropriation<sup>9</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> If a belief in head (1), (2) or (3) in the text is alleged, it is irrelevant as a matter of law that it is unreasonable: R v Holden [1991] Crim LR 478, CA.

<sup>3</sup> Theft Act 1968 s 2(1)(a). The test of dishonesty is the mental element of belief; and if a person believes that he has a right within the meaning of s 2(1)(a), albeit there is none, no offence is committed: R v Turner (No 2) [1971] 2 All ER 441, 55 Cr App Rep 336, CA. If the defendant genuinely believes that he has the right in law to deprive another of the property, he cannot be convicted of theft even though he knows that he has no legal right to appropriate it in the way which he does, eg by the use of force: R v Robinson [1977] Crim LR 173, CA.

<sup>4</sup> Theft Act 1968 s 2(1)(b). A person is not to be regarded as acting dishonestly if he appropriates another's property believing that the other person, with full knowledge of the circumstances, agreed to the appropriation: Lawrence v Metropolitan Police Comr [1972] AC 626, 55 Cr App Rep 471, HL. However, the belief must be an honest one in a true consent, honestly obtained: R v Lawrence [1971] 1 QB 373 at 377, [1970] 3 All ER 933 at 936, CA; A-G's Reference (No 2 of 1982) [1984] QB 624 at 641, [1984] 2 All ER 216 at 224, CA.

<sup>5</sup> Theft Act 1968 s 2(1)(c). See also PARA 284 post. If a person finds property that has been lost, or is believed by him to have been lost, and appropriates it with the intent to take entire dominion over it, believing that the owner cannot be found, he lacks the mens rea for theft; but if he appropriates it with the like intent, but believing that the owner can be found, he commits theft.

<sup>6</sup> Ibid s 2(1)(c). Property which comes to a person acting in the capacity of a trustee or legal personal representative is held by him for the benefit of the beneficiaries of the trust or estate of the deceased and not for his own benefit. If the beneficiary cannot be discovered or dies intestate and leaves nobody in whom his interest can vest, his estate will vest in the Crown as bona vacantia, unless the trust instrument or the will clearly shows that the trustee or the personal representative is to take beneficially. Accordingly, if the trustee or personal representative appropriates bona vacantia when he knows he has no right to do so, he commits the offence of theft against the Crown: see TRUSTS vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARA 1089 et seq. As to bona vacantia generally see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 933 et seq; CROWN PROPERTY vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 235 et seq.

Ghosh if the conduct is obviously dishonest: R v Forrester [1992] Crim LR 792, CA, or if the defendant does not raise the possibility that he thought that his conduct would be regarded as dishonest by reasonable people: R v Brennan [1990] Crim LR 118, CA. There is no need to give a direction if there is no dispute about whether ordinary people would have different views as to whether what he was doing was honest or not: R v Wood [2002] EWCA Crim 832, [2002] 4 Archbold News 3. A judge who has to give a direction involving the definition in R v Ghosh supra should use the exact words used by the Court of Appeal: R v Hyam [1997] Crim LR 439, CA.

284. Appropriation.

Any assumption by a person of the rights of an owner<sup>1</sup> amounts to an appropriation<sup>2</sup>, and this includes, where he has come by the property, innocently or not, without stealing it<sup>3</sup>, any later assumption of a right to it by keeping or dealing with it as an owner<sup>4</sup>.

Where property or a right or interest in property is or purports to be transferred for value to a person acting in good faith, no later assumption by him of rights which he believed himself to be acquiring amounts to theft by reason of any defect in the transferor's title<sup>5</sup>.

1 There need not be an assumption of all the rights of an owner; an assumption of any of the right of the owner suffices: R v Morris, Anderton v Burnside [1984] AC 320, 77 Cr App Rep 309, HL; approved on this point in DPP v Gomez [1993] AC 442 at 458, 96 Cr App Rep 359 at 366, HL, per Lord Keith of Kinkel (giving the majority opinion). It follows that presenting a cheque or sending instructions to another's bank to draw on that person's account amounts to an appropriation, because such conduct is the exercise of one of the rights of the owner of the bank credit, the right to have his cheques or instructions relating to the account met, whether or not the account was in fact debited: R v Governor of Pentonville Prison, ex p Osman [1989] 3 All ER 701, 90 Cr App Rep 281, DC (not following R v Kohn (1979) 69 Cr App Rep 395, CA ('completion of theft does not take place until the transaction has gone through to completion')); R v Ngan [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 331, CA. It is immaterial that such an assumption has no legally efficacious result: Chan Man-sin v A-G of Hong Kong [1988] 1 All ER 1, [1988] 1 WLR 196, PC (use of forged cheques an appropriation of debts by owners' bank to owners, even though bank had no authority to honour such cheques).

2 There may be an assumption of a right of the owner, and therefore an appropriation, even though the owner consents to or authorises the act in question: DPP v Gomez [1993] AC 442, 96 Cr App Rep 359, HL (applying Lawrence v Metropolitan Police Comr [1972] AC 626, 55 Cr App Rep 471, HL; and disapproving R v Morris supra on this point). The decision in R v Gomez supra applies whether or not the consent is induced by fraud: R v Hinks [2001] 2 AC 241 at 251, [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 252 at 262, HL, per Lord Steyn (giving the majority opinion).

It follows from DPP v Gomez supra that those who control a company can appropriate its property: DPP v Gomez supra at 496 and 397 per Lord Browne-Wilkinson. However, in most cases such people who deal with the company's property are not guilty of theft because their appropriation is not dishonest: R (on the application of A) v Snaresbrook Crown Court (2001) 165 JPN 495, DC.

'Appropriation' is an 'objective description done irrespective of the mental state' of the defendant: DPP v Gomez supra at 495 and 396 per Lord Browne-Wilkinson; and see also R v Gallasso (1992) 98 Cr App Rep 284, CA.

Appropriation may also occur when a person not in possession of property assumes the rights of an owner even though he does not take or touch it at all (see eg R v Pitham, R v Hehl (1976) 65 Cr App Rep 45, CA (offer to sell another's property held to amount to a completed theft)).

Where a person receives property simultaneously with his acquisition of another's full proprietary interest he appropriates it by taking physical possession of it; it is irrelevant that the other does not retain, beyond the instant of the alleged theft, some proprietary interest or the right to recover some proprietary interest in the property: R v Hinks supra at 253 and 265 per Lord Steyn.

A person can appropriate property simply by making a contract for the sale to him of goods which directly results in him obtaining the ownership (but not at that stage possession) of them: Dobson v General Accident, Fire and Life Assurance Corp plc [1990] 1 QB 274 at 280-281, [1989] 3 All ER 927 at 931, CA, per Parker LJ.

An act which is lawful in civil law may constitute an appropriation, and a person who has acquired an indefeasible right to property appropriates it by receiving it: R v Hinks supra.

Despite the decision in R v Gomez supra whereby any dishonest assumption of a right of the owner with the necessary intent is theft, an appropriation can be a continuous course of action: R v Atakpu [1994] QB 69, 98 Cr App Rep 254, CA; R v Lockley [1995] Crim LR 656, CA. It can be left to the common sense of the jury to decide that the appropriation could continue for so long as the thief can sensibly be regarded as in the act of stealing, ie so long as he is 'on the job': R v Atakpu supra.

A person cannot be convicted of theft unless it is proved that he appropriated a specific piece of property: R v Navvabi [1986] 3 All ER 102, [1986] 1 WLR 1311, CA (use of cheques backed by guarantee card resulted in bank being obliged to honour them; no theft of amount paid by bank because no assumption of rights of owner over that part of the bank's funds to which the cheques corresponded). Deceiving an owner into doing something with his property does not in itself amount to an appropriation of property: R v Briggs (Linda) [2003] EWCA Crim 3662, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 451.

Other examples of appropriation include: removal of goods from supermarket shelf, since the right to move them is a right of the owner (R v McPherson (1972) 117 Sol Jo 13, CA; DPP v Gomez supra at 463 and 369-370, per Lord Keith of Kinkel); tugging someone's bag (Corcoran v Anderton (1980) 71 Cr App Rep 104, DC); underpricing employer's goods (Pilgram v Rice-Smith [1977] 2 All ER 658, 65 Cr App Rep 142, CA).

3 For these purposes, 'stealing' refers to theft in terms of English law whether or not the conduct occurred in England and Wales or abroad: R v Atakpu supra.

4 Theft Act 1968 s 3(1).

5 Ibid s 3(2). Thus where a person purchases property for value, in good faith, and it subsequently appears that the seller had no, or only a defective, title to it, eg because the seller or some other person had stolen the property, s 3(2) protects the buyer to the extent that he exercises rights over the property which he believes he had acquired.

An innocent purchaser who sells the property when he subsequently becomes aware that it has been stolen is not guilty of handling stolen property: R v Bloxham [1983] 1 AC 109, 74 Cr App Rep 279, HL. See further PARA 302 post.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/285. Property in general.

285. Property in general.

'Property' includes money and all other property, real or personal, including things in action and other intangible property<sup>1</sup>.

1 Theft Act 1968 s 4(1). As to land, growing plants and wild creatures see PARAS 286-288 post.

Section 4(1) applies generally for the purposes of the Theft Act 1968 as it applies for the purposes of s 1 (see PARA 282 ante): s 34(1). To be the subject of theft, the property must belong to another: see further PARA 289 post. As to things in action see CHOSES IN ACTION. A credit in a bank account is a thing in action (see A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1983) [1985] QB 182, 79 Cr App Rep 288, CA), so that someone who dishonestly draws and presents a forged cheque on another's account is guilty of the theft of the other's rights to the credit in his account (see R v Kohn (1979) 69 Cr App Rep 395, CA). The theft occurs at the time of presentation, and not when the account is debited: see R v Governor of Pentonville Prison, ex p Osman [1989] 3 All ER 701, 90 Cr App Rep 281, DC, where a statement to the contrary in R v Kohn supra was not followed; and that statement has been said to be an obiter dictum (see R v Navvabi (1979) 69 Cr App Rep 395 at 407, CA). See also R v Ngan [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 331, CA. Similarly, someone who dishonestly obtains a cheque from P and presents it for payment appropriates the amount of P's bank credit represented by the cheque: R v Williams [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 362, CA. There would not, however, be an appropriation where someone simply procured a bank account holder (X) by deception to initiate the transfer from his (X's) bank account to another: R v Caresana [1996] Crim LR 667, CA; R v Naviede [1997] Crim LR 662, CA; R v Briggs (Linda) [2003] EWCA Crim 3662, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 451, CA. However, an apparent credit balance in a bank account brought about by fraud which could immediately be defeated by a plea of fraud is not a thing in action and therefore not 'property': R v Thompson [1984] 3 All ER 565, 79 Cr App Rep 191, CA. See also R v Tomsett [1985] Crim LR 369, CA; R v Shadrokh-Cigari [1988] Crim LR 465, CA; R v Davis (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 347, CA.

Export quotas transferable for value are intangible property (A-G of Hong Kong v Nai-Keung [1987] 1 WLR 1339, 86 Cr App Rep 174, PC) but confidential information is not (Oxford v Moss (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 183, DC). For the meaning of 'personal property' see PERSONAL PROPERTY vol 35 (Reissue) PARA 1201 et seq.

Gas and water can be the subject of theft, but electricity is not 'property' within the meaning of the Theft Act 1968 s 4 (see Low v Blease [1975] Crim LR 513, DC) and has been provided for separately by the offence of abstracting electricity (see PARA 301 post).

Articles in which no person has any determinate proprietary right are not property and cannot be the subject of theft. For this reason, a human corpse, or a part of a corpse, is not property: Haynes' Case (1613) 12 Co Rep 113; Dr Handyside's Case (1749) 2 East PC 652; R v Sharpe (1857) 26 LJMC 47 at 48 per Erle CJ; R v Kelly and Lindsay [1999] QB 621 at 630, [1998] 3 All ER 741 at 749, CA. Theft may be committed in respect of the shroud in which the body is wrapped (see Haynes' Case supra) and the coffin (see Handyside's Case supra). In addition, where a corpse (or part of a corpse) has acquired different attributes by the application of human skill, such as embalming or dissection, for exhibition or teaching purposes, it becomes property: Haynes' Case supra; R v Kelly and Lindsay supra (applying Doodeward v Spence (1908) 6 CLR 406, Aust HC, and Dobson v North Tyneside Health Authority [1996] 4 All ER 474 at 479, [1997] 1 WLR 596 at 600, CA, per Peter Gibson LJ (a civil case)). Thus an anatomical or pathological specimen (eg a skeleton or cadaver) which has been embalmed or dissected for teaching purposes or exhibition is property. On the other hand, a body or part of a body which has been preserved at a post mortem, eg by fixing a brain in paraffin, is not property because such preservation is not on a par with embalming or dissecting a corpse or preserving an anatomical or pathological specimen for teaching purposes or an exhibition: Dobson v North Tyneside Health Authority supra. See CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 905. As to unauthorised disinterment see CREMATION AND BURIAL vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 1122.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/286. Land.

286. Land.

A person cannot steal land<sup>1</sup>, or things forming part of land and severed from it by him or by his directions, except in the following cases:

- 264 (1) when he is a trustee or personal representative, or is authorised by power of attorney, or as liquidator of a company, or otherwise, to sell or dispose of land belonging to another, and he appropriates<sup>2</sup> the land or anything forming part of it by dealing with it in breach of the confidence reposed in him<sup>3</sup>;
- 265 (2) when he is not in possession of the land and appropriates anything forming part of the land by severing it or causing it to be severed, or after it has been severed<sup>4</sup>;
- 266 (3) when he, being in possession of the land under a tenancy<sup>5</sup>, appropriates the whole or any part of any fixture or structure let to be used with the land<sup>6</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'land' does not include incorporeal hereditaments: Theft Act 1968 s 4(2). Accordingly incorporeal hereditaments such as easements, profits à prendre, rentcharges and rights of common can be subject to theft. For the meaning of 'incorporeal hereditaments' see REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 81. With regard to 'things forming part of land' the general maxim of law is that what is annexed to the land becomes part of the land, and what constitutes annexation sufficient for this purpose depends on the circumstances of each case including the degree, and object, of annexation: Elitestone Ltd v Morris [1997] 2 All ER 513, [1997] 1 WLR 687, HL. See also Holland v Hodgson (1872) LR 7 CP 328, Ex Ch. Contrast Elitestone v Morris supra (timber-framed bungalow resting on concrete blocks in the land which could only be moved by destroying it formed part of the land) with Chelsea Yacht and Boat Club Ltd v Pope [2001] 2 All ER 409, [2000] 1 WLR 1491, CA (houseboat attached to the river bed, a pontoon and the river wall by mooring lines did not form part of the land).

2 For the meaning of 'appropriate' see PARA 284 ante.

3 Theft Act 1968 s 4(2)(a).

4 Ibid s 4(2)(b).

5 For these purposes, 'tenancy' means a tenancy for years or any less period and includes an agreement for such a tenancy, but a person who after the end of a tenancy remains in possession as statutory tenant or otherwise is to be treated as having possession under the tenancy; and 'let' is to be construed accordingly: ibid s 4(2). As to the subject matter of tenancy, an agreement for a tenancy, and the distinction between a tenancy and a licence see LANDLORD AND TENANT. As to statutory tenants see the Rent Act 1977; and LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 831 et seq. As to other instances where security of tenure is given to tenants whose tenancies are otherwise validly terminated see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 64 (business tenancies: see LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(2) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 701, 729); and the Rent Act 1977 s 155(3), Sch 24 para 6 (furnished tenancies: see LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 879).

6 Theft Act 1968 s 4(2)(c).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/287. Wild plants and mushrooms.

287. Wild plants and mushrooms.

A person who picks mushrooms<sup>1</sup> growing wild on any land, or who picks flowers, fruit or foliage from a plant<sup>2</sup> growing wild on any land does not, although not in possession of the land, steal what he picks, unless he does it for reward or for sale or other commercial purpose<sup>3</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'mushroom' includes any fungus: Theft Act 1968 s 4(3).

2 For these purposes, 'plant' includes any shrub or tree: ibid s 4(3). Taking the whole plant would, however, be theft since the exception relates only to picking flowers, fruit or foliage from a plant. A person who intentionally picks, uproots or destroys a protected wild plant is guilty of an offence under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981: see s 13, Sch 8 (as amended); and AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION AND MARKETING vol 1 (2008) PARA 1032.

3 Theft Act 1968 s 4(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/288. Wild creatures.

288. Wild creatures.

Wild creatures, tamed or untamed, are regarded as property<sup>1</sup>; but a person cannot steal a wild creature not tamed or not ordinarily kept in captivity, or the carcase of any such creature, unless it has been reduced into possession by or on behalf of another person and possession of it has not since been lost or abandoned, or another person is in course of reducing it into possession<sup>2</sup>.

1 As to the classification of animals into wild and domestic, and the property in such animals, see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 708 et seq; and as to the protection of any wild bird or certain wild animals under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 see ss 1, 9, Sch 5 (as amended); and ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 1015.

2 Theft Act 1968 s 4(4). Poaching in so far as it is concerned with taking or killing creatures is, in general, not the subject of theft although taking and destroying fish is dealt with in s 32, Sch 1 para 2 (as amended): see AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES vol 1(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 841. As to the taking of deer see the Deer Act 1991 s 1; and ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 977.

The mere act of taking over an existing natural mussel bed does not amount to a reduction into possession of the mussels: R v Howlett [1968] Crim LR 222, CA. As to property in living fish see AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES vol 1(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 839.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/289. Property belonging to another.

289. Property belonging to another.

Property is regarded as belonging to any person having possession or control of it, or having any proprietary right or interest in it, not being an equitable interest arising only from an agreement to transfer or grant an interest<sup>1</sup>.

Where property is subject to a trust, the persons to whom it belongs are regarded as including any person having a right to enforce the trust, and an intention to defeat the trust is regarded accordingly as an intention to deprive of the property any person having that right<sup>2</sup>.

Where a person receives property from or on account of another, and is under an obligation to the other to retain and deal with that property or its proceeds in a particular way, the property or proceeds are regarded, as against him, as belonging to that other<sup>3</sup>.

Where a person gets property by another's mistake, and is under an obligation to make restoration, in whole or in part, of the property or its proceeds<sup>4</sup> or of its value, then to the extent of that obligation the property or proceeds are to be regarded, as against him, as belonging to the person entitled to restoration, and an intention not to make restoration is to be regarded accordingly as an intention to deprive that person of the property or proceeds<sup>5</sup>.

Property of a corporation sole is regarded as belonging to the corporation notwithstanding a vacancy<sup>6</sup>.

The Theft Act 1968 applies in relation to the parties to a marriage, and to property belonging to the wife or husband whether or not by reason of an interest derived from the marriage, as it would apply if they were not married and any such interest subsisted independently of the marriage<sup>7</sup>.

1 Theft Act 1968 s 5(1). Section 5(1) applies generally for the purposes of the Theft Act 1968: s 34(1). As to property which is susceptible of theft see PARAS 285-288 ante. Civil law principles are applied by the courts in determining questions relating to title to goods for the purposes of the Theft Act 1968: see R v Walker [1984] Crim LR 112, CA; Dobson v General Accident, Fire and Life Assurance Corp'n plc [1990] 1 QB 274 at 289-290, [1989] 3 All ER 927 at 937-938, CA, per Bingham LJ (a civil case); but cf R v Morris, Anderton v Burnside [1984] AC 320 at 334, 77 Cr App Rep 309 at 317, HL, per Lord Roskill.

The property must belong to another at the time of the alleged appropriation: see Edwards v Ddin [1976] 3 All ER 705, [1976] 1 WLR 942, DC (defendant not guilty of theft when he drove away from petrol station without paying after attendant had put petrol in tank; ownership of petrol had passed to defendant when petrol entered tank, so that petrol did not belong to another when defendant appropriated it by driving off). The appropriate charge in such a case is that of making off without payment contrary to the Theft Act 1978 s 3: see PARA 315 post.

There can be a conviction of theft of property belonging to a person unknown provided that it can be proved that the property must have belonged to someone other than the defendant: R v Burton (1854) Dears CC 282; R v Mockford (1868) 11 Cox CC 16; Noon v Smith [1964] 3 All ER 895, 49 Cr App Rep 55, DC.

An owner may steal his own goods if such goods are in the possession of his bailee and he has the intention either dishonestly to charge the bailee with the loss of the goods or, in cases where the bailee has a right to possession as against the owner, to deprive the bailee of his special property in the goods: see R v Turner (No 2) [1971] 2 All ER 441, 55 Cr App Rep 336, CA (owner of motor car left it with garage for repairs; surreptitiously and dishonestly he collected it without paying for the repairs; guilty of theft). It has been held that there is no ground for qualifying 'possession or control' in any way: R v Turner (No 2) supra. Partnership property can be stolen by a partner (R v Bonner [1970] 2 All ER 97n, [1970] 1 WLR 838, CA) and persons in control of a limited company are capable of stealing the company's property (A-G's Reference (No 2 of 1982) [1984] QB 624, 78 Cr App Rep 131, CA; R v Phillipou (1989) 89 Cr App Rep 290, CA). Cf R v McHugh, R v Tringham (1988) 88 Cr App

Rep 385, CA; DPP v Gomez [1993] AC 442 at 496, sub nom R v Gomez [1993] 1 All ER 1 at 40, HL, per Lord Browne-Wilkinson. If property has been abandoned by the owner, there can be no theft of it: see R v Thurborn (1849) 1 Den 387, CCR. However, the occupier of the land on which the abandoned property is found or in whose possession or control, actual or constructive, the property is can claim sufficient title to protect it from strangers: R v Rowe (1859) Bell CC 93 (canal company had sufficient property in iron found in canal); Hibbert v McKiernan [1948] 2 KB 142, [1948] 1 All ER 860, DC (golf club had special property in golf balls abandoned on course); Williams v Phillips (1957) 41 Cr App Rep 5, DC (local authority had constructive possession of rubbish collected by refuse collectors employed by authority); R v Woodman [1974] QB 754, [1974] 2 All ER 955, CA (company in control of disused factory site from which trespassers were excluded; company had control of articles on site of the existence of which it was unaware). As to what may amount to 'abandonment' by the owner see R v Edwards, R v Stacey (1877) 13 Cox CC 384, CCR (carcasses of animals buried by owner on his land with intention of not moving them; carcasses not abandoned); Williams v Phillips supra (refuse put out for collection by local authority not abandoned by original owner).

Where treasure within the meaning of the Treasure Act 1996 s 1 (see NATIONAL CULTURAL HERITAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 1086) is found, it vests, subject to prior interests and rights, in the Crown (or the Crown's franchisee): see s 4. Thus a finder of treasure who appropriates it with the mens rea for theft may be convicted of stealing it from the Crown (or its franchisee) and from the owner of the land on which it was found (see Waverley Borough Council v Fletcher [1996] QB 334, [1995] 4 All ER 756, CA). As to treasure see NATIONAL CULTURAL HERITAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 1084 et seq.

Where the subject matter of the offence is incorrectly stated in the indictment to be the property of a person, the indictment may be amended if no injustice is caused to the defendant: see R v Tirado (1974) 59 Cr App Rep 80, CA (bank draft stated in indictment to be the property of person who gave instructions for it to be drawn; amendment made to show draft as property of bank). However, an amendment may not be essential: see Etim v Hatfield [1975] Crim LR 234, DC. As to the amendment of indictments generally see further PARA 1227 post.

With the qualification below, a beneficial interest under a trust is a proprietary interest for the purposes of the Theft Act 1968 s 5(1). Whether there is a trust on given facts is a question of law: R v Clowes (No 2) [1994] 2 All ER 316 at 323, CA. An interest under a constructive trust (see EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 852) is insufficient for a proprietary interest under the Theft Act 1968 s 5(1): A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1985) [1986] QB 491, 83 Cr App Rep 70, CA. But see R v Shadrokh-Cigari [1988] Crim LR 465, CA, where an equitable interest which could only have arisen under a constructive trust was held to be a proprietary interest for the purposes of the Theft Act 1968 s 5(1). See also Re Holmes infra.

Where an employee makes a secret profit for which he will be held accountable, the secret profit, if it can be described as subject to a constructive trust, does not belong to another under the Theft Act 1968 s 5(1), because that constructive trust is not such as to give the employer a proprietary right or interest for the purposes of s 5(1): A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1985) [1986] QB 491, 83 Cr App Rep 70, CA (public house manager selling own beer in breach of contract), applying Lister & Co v Stubbs (1890) 45 Ch D 1, CA. In Lister & Co v Stubbs supra it was held that an employee who receives a secret profit or bribe merely has to account to his employer for it and is not a constructive trustee of it. However, Lister & Co v Stubbs supra was held in A-G for Hong Kong v Reid [1994] 1 AC 324, [1994] 1 All ER 1, PC, to have been wrongly decided; such an employee, according to the Privy Council, is also a constructive trustee of the secret profit or bribe. In Re Holmes [2004] EWHC 2020 (Admin) at [24], [2005] 1 All ER 490 at [24], [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 229 at [24], the Divisional Court (obiter) took the provisional view that property subject to a constructive trust is to be regarded as belonging to the person entitled to the beneficial interest; it distinguished A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1985) supra on the ground that that case concerned a secret profit whereas Re Holmes supra was concerned with a fraudulent taking of property. A bribe received by an employee is not the property of his employers for the purposes of the Theft Act 1968 s 5: Powell v MacRae [1977] Crim LR 571, DC (decided before A-G for Hong Kong v Reid supra).

2 Theft Act 1968 s 5(2). In the case of a charitable trust, the Attorney General is the person entitled to enforce the trust: see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARAS 4, 599 et seq.

3 Ibid s 5(3). The obligation referred to in s 5(3) is an obligation in law to retain and deal with the property or its proceeds in a particular way, and not just for a social or moral obligation: R v Mainwaring (1981) 74 Cr App Rep 99, CA; Wakeman v Farrar [1974] Crim LR 136, DC; DPP v Huskinson (1988) 20 HLR 562, DC; R v Breaks, R v Huggan [1998] Crim LR 349, CA. The defendant must have direct knowledge of the obligation and its extent: R v Wills (1990) 92 Cr App Rep 297, CA. It is a matter of law for the judge whether or not such an obligation existed in particular circumstances. However, whether or not those circumstances existed cannot be known until the facts have been established. It is for the jury to establish these circumstances if the facts are in dispute and, where they are, the judge must direct the jury to make its findings on the facts and then say to it: 'If you find the facts to be such-and-such, then I direct you as a matter of law that a legal obligation arose to which [the Theft Act 1968] s 5(3) applies': R v Mainwaring (1981) 74 Cr App Rep 99, CA. See also R v Dubar [1995] 1 All ER 781, [1994] 1 WLR 1484, C-MAC; R v Clowes (No 2) supra; R v Breaks, R v Huggan supra. Where the relevant facts are not in dispute, the judge should normally rule on them before, or at the commencement of, the trial: R v Breaks, R v Huggan supra. Statements in R v Hall infra and R v Hayes infra that it is for the jury to determine not only the facts but also whether, on those facts, an obligation arose have been disapproved and are not to be followed. For general observations on the Theft Act 1968 s 5(3), and, in particular, for consideration of 'obligation', see R v Hall [1973] QB 126, 56 Cr App Rep 547, CA (travel agent received money from clients as deposits and payments for air trips, which he paid into his firm's general trading account; none of the flights took place and none of the money was refunded; it was not established either that the clients expected him 'to retain and deal with that property or its proceeds in a particular way', or that an 'obligation' to do so was undertaken by him; there was an absence of such a special arrangement between the defendant and his clients as would give rise to an 'obligation' within the Theft Act 1968 s 5(3)). Contrast Re Kumar [2000] Crim LR 504, DC (defendant travel agent contractually obliged to IATA to retain in its bank account moneys received for flight tickets sold on behalf of IATA members and pay it monthly to IATA (less commission); it was held that there was an obligation to retain and deal with money received on account of another in a particular way; moneys belonged to another under the Theft Act 1968 s 5(3)). See also R v Wain [1995] 2 Cr App Rep 660, CA (defendant raised money for a company which distributed money among charities; defendant paid what he had raised into a special bank account which he had opened and, thereafter, with the company's consent into his own account; defendant dishonestly dissipated the credit in his account; held obligation to retain proceeds of the money collected (the money credited to successive bank accounts) and to deal with them in a particular way (ie by handing them over to the company)), disapproving Lewis v Lethbridge [1987] Crim LR 59, DC. Whether a person is under an obligation to retain and deal with money received from a customer in a particular way so that it will be regarded under the Theft Act 1968 s 5(3) as belonging to that customer depends on the particular facts of each case: R v Hall supra; and see also Wakeman v Farrar [1974] Crim LR 136, DC; R v Hayes (1976) 64 Cr App Rep 82, CA; R v Brewster (1979) 69 Cr App Rep 375, CA; Davidge v Bunnett [1984] Crim LR 297, DC. There is a distinction between the type of case in R v Hall supra and eg the treasurer of a solitary fund, as for instance a holiday fund, where the treasurer is in law the owner of the property, but the Theft Act 1968 s 5(3) treats the property, as against him, as belonging to the persons to whom he owes the duty to retain and deal with the property as agreed: see R v Hall supra. In R v Hall supra the money was paid into the firm's general trading account but this was not itself decisive of the question whether or not an obligation under the Theft Act 1968 s 5(3) arose. Section 5(3) does not apply unless there is an obligation on the defendant to account for the particular property he has received or its proceeds. If he can do what he likes with the property having no obligation other than to account for a similar sum at a later date, there is no theft: see DPP v Huskinson [1988] Crim LR 620, DC (recipient of housing benefit under no obligation to use that benefit directly for payment of rent). Where an obligation under the Theft Act 1968 s 5(3) is assumed and the one who assumes it subsequently discovers that by reason of a prior fraud the obligation is legally unenforceable, he remains liable to be convicted of theft if he dishonestly fails to fulfil that obligation: R v Meech [1974] QB 549, 58 Cr App Rep 74, CA. A person selling his own goods on his employer's premises (eg a public house) in breach of contract does not receive the money paid for them on account of his employer within the Theft Act 1968 s 5(3): A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1985) [1986] QB 491, 83 Cr App Rep 70, CA. As to the prosecution's burden to prove breach of obligation see R v Klineberg, R v Marsden [1999] 1 Cr App Rep 427, CA.

4 Where the payee of a cheque exchanges that cheque with a third party for cash before the cheque is presented, the cash received represents the 'proceeds' of the cheque for these purposes: R v Davis (1988) 88 Cr App Rep 347, CA.

5 Theft Act 1968 s 5(4). The obligation must be an obligation in law; a social or moral obligation will not suffice: R v Gilks [1972] 3 All ER 280, 56 Cr App Rep 734, CA. See also A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1983) [1985] QB 182, 79 Cr App Rep 288, CA (money credited to employee's bank account by direct debit system under mistaken belief as to legal entitlement; employee aware of mistake but not repaying money; legal obligation to make restitution; money belonged to another under the Theft Act 1968 s 5(4)); R v Shadrokh-Cigari [1988] Crim LR 465, CA (banker's drafts issued by mistake as to legal entitlement; recipient legally obliged to restore either proceeds or value of the drafts; money belonged to another under the Theft Act 1968 s 5(4); moreover, because of the mistake the bank retained an equitable proprietary interest in the drafts within the meaning of s 5(1) (see the text and note 1 supra)).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/290. Intention to deprive owner permanently.

290. Intention to deprive owner permanently.

In every case of theft the dishonest appropriation must be accompanied by the intention of permanently depriving the owner of his property<sup>1</sup>. A person appropriating property belonging to another without meaning the other permanently to lose the thing itself is nevertheless to be regarded as having the intention of permanently depriving the other of it if his intention is to treat the thing as his own to dispose of regardless of the other's rights; and a borrowing or lending of it may amount to so treating it if, but only if, the borrowing or lending is for a period and in circumstances making it equivalent to an outright taking or disposal<sup>2</sup>. Without prejudice to the generality of the above provisions, where a person, having possession or control, whether lawfully or not, of property belonging to another, parts with the property under a condition as to its return which he may not be able to perform, this amounts, if done for purposes of his own and without the other's authority, to treating the property as his own to dispose of regardless of the other's right<sup>3</sup>.

1 See the Theft Act 1968 s 1(1); and PARA 282 ante. See also R v Velumyl [1989] Crim LR 299 (intention to return equivalent property to that appropriated does not negative an intention permanently to deprive the other 'of it', ie the property appropriated). If a person examines property to see whether it (or anything in it) is worth keeping, he does not thereby intend permanently to deprive the person to whom the property belongs and is not guilty of theft (R v Easom [1971] 2 QB 315, 55 Cr App Rep 410, CA), although he may be convicted on a suitably framed charge (see PARA 81 ante). For the meaning of 'dishonest' see PARA 283 ante; and for the meaning of 'appropriation' see PARA 284 ante.

2 Theft Act 1968 s 6(1). Section 6 applies for the purposes of s 15 (obtaining property by deception: see PARA 310 post) with any necessary adaptation of the reference to appropriating: see s 15(3). As to the meaning of 'outright taking or disposal' see R v Coffey [1987] Crim LR 498, CA.

The purpose of the Theft Act 1968 s 6 is to clarify, but not to restrict, the meaning of the phrase 'with the intention of permanently depriving' and is not meant to contain an exhaustive definition of those words but rather to give illustrations of what can amount to the intention required by s 1(1) (see note 1 supra): R v Warner (1970) 55 Cr App Rep 93, CA. See also R v Bagshaw [1988] Crim LR 321, CA. The Theft Act 1968 s 6(1) should be referred to in exceptional cases only, and in the vast majority of cases need not be referred to or considered at all: R v Lloyd, R v Bhuee, R v Ali [1985] QB 829 at 835, 81 Cr App Rep 182 at 187, CA, per Lord Lane CJ.

The first part of the Theft Act s 6(1) (ie 'A person appropriating . . . dispose of regardless of the other's rights') expresses the critical notion of s 6 as a whole: see R v Fernandes [1996] 1 Cr App Rep 175 at 188, CA. The second part of the Theft Act 1968 s 6(1) (ie 'and a borrowing . . . outright taking or disposal') and s 6(2) (see the text and note 3 infra) provide specific illustrations of that notion: see R v Fernandes supra. For examples of the operation of the first part of the Theft Act 1968 s 6(1) see R v Downes (1983) 77 Cr App Rep 260, CA (sale of Inland Revenue vouchers which could be used to obtain tax advantages by submission to the Inland Revenue; seller intended to treat voucher as his own to dispose of regardless of the Inland Revenue's rights); R v Marshall, Coombes, Eren [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 282, CA (re-sale of used, but still valid, Underground tickets which might ultimately find their way back into the Underground's possession; sellers had intent to treat tickets as their own to dispose of regardless of the rights of the Underground); DPP v Lavender [1994] Crim LR 297, DC (defendant surreptitiously removed doors from a nearby council house to replace doors in his council house; defendant had intended to treat the door as his own to dispose of regardless of the rights of the council). See also Chan Man-siu v A-G of Hong Kong [1988] 1 All ER 1, [1988] 1 WLR 196; R v Hilton [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 445, CA.

The second part of the Theft Act 1968 s 6(1) 'is intended to make clear that a mere borrowing is never enough to constitute the necessary mens rea unless the intention is to return the 'thing' in such a changed state that it can truly be said that all its goodness or virtue has gone': see R v Lloyd, R v Bhuee, R v Ali [1985] QB 829 at 836, 81 Cr App Rep 182 at 188, CA (thus its terms were not satisfied on the facts of that case, the borrowing of films for a few hours in order to make 'pirate' copies of them). It might have been thought that the test would be satisfied where the defendant appropriated a cheque, intending to present it for payment, but it has been held that there would be 'no intention on the part of the defendant permanently to deprive the drawer of the cheque form, which would on presentation of the cheque for payment be returned to the drawer via his bank': see R v Preddy and Slade, R v Dhillon [1996] AC 815 at 836-837, [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 524 at 537, HL, per Lord Goff of Chieveley; regarded as binding and applied in R v Clark [2001] EWCA Crim 884, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep 141. See also, and contrast, R v Arnold [1997] 4 All ER 1, CA (the Theft Act 1968 s 6(1) applied if at the time of the appropriation of a bill of exchange the defendant intended that it should find its way back to the person by whom it had been transferred only after all the benefit to the transferor had been lost as a result of its use), which was not referred to by the Court of Appeal in R v Clark supra.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/291. Institution of proceedings for theft etc of property of defendant's spouse or civil partner.

291. Institution of proceedings for theft etc of property of defendant's spouse or civil partner.

Proceedings may not be instituted against a person for any offence of stealing or doing unlawful damage to property which, at the time of the offence, belongs to that person's wife or husband or civil partner, or for any attempt, incitement or conspiracy to commit such an offence, unless the proceedings are instituted by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>1</sup>. These provisions do not apply, however, to proceedings against a person for an offence:

- 267 (1) if that person is charged with committing the offence jointly with his or her wife or husband or civil partner; or
- 268 (2) if, by virtue of any judicial decree or order (wherever made) that person and the husband or wife are at the time of the offence under no obligation to cohabit; or
- 269 (3) if an order (wherever made) is in force providing for the separation of that person and his or her civil partner<sup>2</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> See the Theft Act 1968 s 30(4) (amended by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 261(1), Sch 27 para 27). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post. See also R v Withers [1975] Crim LR 647. The Theft Act 1968 applies in relation to the parties to a marriage, and to property belonging to the wife or husband whether or not by reason of an interest derived from the marriage, as it would apply if they were not married and any such interest subsisted independently of the marriage: s 30(1).

Notwithstanding the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 25 (requirement of consent to institution of proceedings does not prevent arrest: see PARA 1071 post), the Theft Act 1968 s 30(4) (as amended) applies to an arrest, if without warrant, made by the wife or husband or civil partner, and to a warrant of arrest issued on an information laid by the wife or husband or civil partner: see s 30(5) (added by the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 s 14(4), Sch 5 para 2(1); and amended by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1979 s 11(1), Sch 1; the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 ss 25, 31(6), Sch 2; and the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 261(1), Sch 27 para 27(1), (2)); and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a)). As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 post. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

Subject to the Theft Act 1968 s 30(4) (as amended), a person has the same right to bring proceedings against his or her spouse for any offence (ie whether or not under that Act), as if they were not married: see s 30(2).

<sup>2</sup> See ibid s 30(4) proviso (as amended (see note 1 supra); and also amended by the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 s 14(4), (5), Sch 5 para 2(2), Sch 6 Pt 1). 'Judicial decree or order' includes a non-molestation order: see Woodley v Woodley [1978] Crim LR 629, DC.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(1) THEFT/292. Thefts etc of mails from outside England and Wales.

292. Thefts etc of mails from outside England and Wales.

Where a person:

- 270 (1) steals or attempts to steal any mail bag<sup>1</sup> or postal packet<sup>2</sup> in the course of transmission<sup>3</sup> as such between places in different jurisdictions in the British postal area<sup>4</sup>, or any of the contents of such a mail bag or postal packet<sup>5</sup>; or
- 271 (2) in stealing or with intent to steal any such mail bag or postal packet or any of its contents, commits any robbery, attempted robbery or assault with intent to rob<sup>6</sup>, then, notwithstanding that he does so outside England and Wales, he is guilty of committing or attempting to commit the offence against the Theft Act 1968 as if he had done so in England and Wales, and is accordingly liable to be prosecuted, tried and punished in England and Wales without proof that the offence was committed there<sup>7</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'mail bag' includes any form of container or covering in which postal packets in the course of transmission by post are enclosed by a postal operator in the United Kingdom or a foreign postal administration for the purpose of conveyance by post, whether or not it contains any such packets: Postal Services Act 2000 s 125(1); definition applied by the Theft Act 1968 s 34(2)(c) (added by the Postal Services Act 2000 (Consequential Modifications) Order 2003, SI 2003/2908, art 3(1), Sch 1 para 1). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2 'Postal packet' means a letter, parcel, packet or other article transmissible by post: Postal Services Act 2000 s 125(1); definition applied by the Theft Act 1968 s 34(2)(c) (as added: see note 1 supra).

3 The Theft Act 1968 does not specify when a postal packet is in the course of transmission. See also PARA 540 note 4 post.

4 For these purposes, the reference to different jurisdictions in the British postal area is to be construed as referring to the several jurisdictions of England and Wales, of Scotland, of Northern Ireland, of the Isle of Man and of the Channel Islands: ibid s 14(2).

5 Ibid s 14(1)(a).

6 Ibid s 14(1)(b).

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/293. Robbery.

(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING

293. Robbery.

A person is guilty of robbery if he steals<sup>1</sup>, and immediately before or at the time of<sup>2</sup> doing so, and in order to do so, he uses force on any person<sup>3</sup> or puts or seeks to put any person in fear of being then and there subjected to force<sup>4</sup>. A person guilty of robbery, or of an assault<sup>5</sup> with intent to rob, is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>6</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'steal' see PARA 282 ante.

2 The 'time' of the stealing lasts so long as the theft can be said to be still in progress in common sense terms, ie so long as the defendant is 'on the job': see R v Hale (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 415, CA; applied in R v Lockley [1995] Crim LR 656, CA.

3 This may include a person who has no proprietary right or interest in the property stolen.

4 Theft Act 1968 s 8(1). Stealing is an ingredient of robbery and, if the defendant believes that he has in law a claim of right to the property which he takes by force, the offence of robbery is not committed: R v Skivington [1968] 1 QB 166, 51 Cr App Rep 167, CA; R v Robinson [1977] Crim LR 173, CA. See also the Theft Act 1968 s 2(1)(a); and PARA 283 head (1) ante.

The use of force or the putting (or seeking to put) in fear is not sufficient to constitute robbery if its purpose is to enable the defendant to get away or to prevent the owner from recovering his property: 'The sole question is whether the defendant used force on any person in order to steal': R v Dawson, R v James (1976) 64 Cr App Rep 170 at 172, CA, per Lawton LJ. The force need not be used or threatened against the owner or possessor of the property stolen: R v Taylor [1996] 10 Archbold News 2, CA. See also R v Clouden [1987] Crim LR 56, CA (force need not be used on a person to overcome his resistance; sufficient to use force simply to get possession of property, eg wrenching a person's bag from his grasp); R v Shendley [1970] Crim LR 49, CA. The degree of violence need not be excessive nor need the injury be serious to constitute robbery: R v Harrison (1930) 22 Cr App Rep 82, CCA; R v Dawson, R v James supra (jostling a person so as to make him lose his balance may be sufficient to constitute robbery). OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/294. Burglary.

294. Burglary.

A person is guilty of burglary if:

- 272 (1) he enters<sup>1</sup> any building<sup>2</sup> or part of a building<sup>3</sup> as a trespasser<sup>4</sup> and with intent to steal<sup>5</sup> anything in the building or part of a building in question, or to inflict on any person in it any grievous bodily harm<sup>6</sup> in it, or to do unlawful damage<sup>8</sup> to the building or anything in it<sup>9</sup>; or
- 273 (2) having entered any building or part of a building as a trespasser, he steals or attempts to steal anything in the building or that part of it or inflicts or attempts to inflict on any person in it any grievous bodily harm<sup>10</sup>.

A person guilty of burglary is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years where the offence was committed in respect of a building or part of a building which is a dwelling or ten years in any other case, or on summary conviction<sup>11</sup> to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>12</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>13</sup>.

Where:

- 274 (a) a person is convicted of a domestic burglary<sup>14</sup> committed after 30 November 1999<sup>15</sup>;
- 275 (b) at the time when that burglary was committed, he was 18 or over and had been convicted in England and Wales of two other domestic burglaries<sup>16</sup>; and
- 276 (c) one of those other burglaries was committed after he had been convicted of the other, and both of them were committed after 30 November 1999<sup>17</sup>, the court must impose an appropriate custodial sentence for a term of at least three years except where the court is of the opinion that there are particular circumstances which: (i) relate to any of the offences or to the offender; and (ii) would make it unjust to do so in all the circumstances<sup>18</sup>.

1 See R v Collins [1973] QB 100, 56 Cr App Rep 554, CA ('effective and substantial entry' by the defendant required; and see the general observations on entry at 104 and 559). Cf R v Brown [1985] Crim LR 212, CA ('entry' does not require whole body to be in building; jury should be directed to consider only whether entry was 'effective'; 'substantial' in the dictum in R v Collins supra did not assist); followed in R v Ryan (1996) 160 JP 610, CA (appeal against conviction for burglary dismissed where appellant had become trapped in a window after only his head and right arm had been inserted).

2 For these purposes, references to a building apply also to an inhabited vehicle or vessel, and to any such vehicle or vessel at times when the person having a habitation in it is not there as well as at times when he is: Theft Act 1968 s 9(4) (s 9(4) added by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 26(2)).

3 A physically marked-out area in a room from which the defendant is plainly excluded, eg a counter area in a shop, is part of a building for the purposes of the Theft Act 1968 s 9 (as amended): R v Walkington [1979] 2 All ER 716, 68 Cr App Rep 427, CA.

4 When entering the defendant must know at the material time (ie the time of entry) that he is a trespasser and nevertheless deliberately enter, or be reckless whether or not he is entering as a trespasser: R v Collins [1973] QB 100, 56 Cr App Rep 554, CA. A person who has a general permission to enter premises belonging to another is a trespasser if he enters knowing that, or being reckless whether, he is exceeding that permission: R v Jones, R v Smith [1976] 3 All ER 54, 63 Cr App Rep 47, CA. The common law doctrine of trespass ab initio has no application to burglary: R v Collins supra. As to the nature of trespass, trespass to land and trespass ab initio see TORT vol 97 (2010) PARAS 524 et seq, 562 et seq, 602. Because the entry must be as a trespasser, burglary cannot be committed by someone who enters lawfully but later becomes a trespasser, eg by exceeding his permission to be in the building: R v Laing [1995] Crim LR 395, CA.

5 For the meaning of 'steal' see PARA 282 ante. Where a person is charged with entry into a building or part of a building with intent to steal, and the indictment does not aver an intention to steal a specific or identified object, the defendant can be convicted if at the time of entry he had the necessary intent to steal something therein, even though he did not intend to steal a specific thing but merely intended to steal anything that he might find worth stealing, or even though there was in fact nothing there worth his while to steal: R v Walkington [1979] 2 All ER 716, 68 Cr App Rep 427, CA; A-G's References (Nos 1 and 2 of 1979) [1980] QB 180, 69 Cr App Rep 266, CA.

6 As to offences involving grievous bodily harm see the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 (as amended) (wounding or causing grievous bodily harm with intent: see PARA 118 ante), s 20 (as amended) (unlawfully and maliciously inflicting grievous bodily harm: see PARA 120 ante), s 23 (as amended) (unlawfully and maliciously administering poison so as to inflict grievous bodily harm: see PARA 124 ante). For the meaning of 'grievous bodily harm' see PARA 119 ante.

8 As to criminal damage see PARA 333 et seq post.

9 See the Theft Act 1968 s 9(1)(a), (2) (s 9(2) amended by the Sexual Offences Act 2003 ss 139, 140 Sch 6 para 17, Sch 7). For the extended territorial scope of burglary in connection with acts in relation to or by means of nuclear material see the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983; and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1583. As to the relationship between the Theft Act 1968 s 9(1)(a) and s 9(1)(b) see note 10 infra.

10 See the Theft Act 1968 s 9(1)(b). It is open to a jury on a charge under s 9(1)(b) to bring in a verdict under s 9(1)(a) (see the text and notes 1-9 supra): R v Whiting (1987) 85 Cr App Rep 78, CA (not following R v Hollis [1971] Crim LR 525, CA).

As to alternative verdicts see PARA 1335 post. As to the offence of going equipped for burglary, theft or cheat see PARA 296 post. Since electricity cannot be appropriated by switching on current and is not 'property' within the meaning of the Theft Act 1968 s 4, (see PARA 285 ante), entering premises and using the telephone is not burglary: Low v Blease [1975] Crim LR 513, DC. See also PARA 285 note 1 ante.

11 Burglary comprising the commission of, or an intention to commit, an offence which is triable only on indictment, and burglary in a dwelling if any person in the dwelling was subjected to violence or the threat of violence, may not be tried summarily: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17, Sch 1 para 28(b), (c). Schedule 1 para 28(c) applies to any case in which violence is offered in the course of the whole incident constituting the burglary; it therefore is wide enough to cover cases where violence is used in the course of attempts by the occupant of the building to prevent the defendant's escape: R v McGrath [2003] EWCA Crim 2062, 167 JP 554, CA. Where a person is charged with a domestic burglary which would otherwise be triable either way but the circumstances are such that he could be sentenced for it under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111(2) (see the text and note 18 infra), the burglary is triable only on indictment: s 111(4).

13 See the Theft Act 1968 s 9(3) (substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 26(2)); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1). As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. As to the minimum custodial sentence for a third domestic burglary see the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111 (as amended); and PARA 294 post. Burglary is a specified offence for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(2) (as amended) (power to search for prohibited articles: see PARA 860 et seq post). As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for burglary has in his possession a firearm or imitation firearm see PARA 677 ante. See also PARA 295 post. When the indictment alleges that goods have been stolen, it is not necessary for the prosecution to prove that all the goods referred to have been stolen: see PARA 282 note 6 ante.

Woodhouse, R v H [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 220, CA; R v McInerney, R v Keating [2002] EWCA Crim 3003, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep 627 (domestic burglary); R v Azram [2005] EWCA Crim 1457, [2006] All ER (D) 15 (Feb). Non-domestic burglary is regarded as less serious than domestic burglary: see R v Carlton [1993] Crim LR 981, CA; R v Tetteh [1993] Crim LR 629, CA; cf R v Dorries [1993] Crim LR 408, CA; R v Anson [1999] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 331, CA. In respect of both domestic and non-domestic burglaries see also R v Stratton (1988) Times, 15 January, CA.

14 le a burglary committed in respect of a building or part of a building which is a dwelling: Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111(5).

15 Ibid s 111(1)(a).

17 Ibid s 111(1)(c).

18 Ibid s 111(2). 'An appropriate custodial sentence' means: (1) in relation to a person who is 21 or over when convicted of the offence mentioned in head (a) in the text, a sentence of imprisonment; (2) in relation to a person who is under 21 at that time, a sentence of detention in a young offender institution: s 111(6) (prospectively repealed). As from a day to be appointed s 111(2) is amended so as to refer to a sentence of imprisonment instead of an appropriate custodial sentence: see s 111(2) (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 74, Sch 7 Pt II paras 160, 191). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to a discount for a guilty plea see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 623. Where a sentence has been imposed under the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111 (as amended) (see the text and notes 14-17 supra) and any previous conviction without which s 111 (as amended) would not have applied has subsequently been set aside on appeal, then notwithstanding the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 18 (see PARA 1863 post) notice may be given within 28 days from the date on which the previous conviction was set aside: Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 112 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 332, Sch 37 Pt 7). Where an offence is found to have been committed over a period of two or more days, or at some time during a period of two or more days, it is to be taken for the purposes of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111 (as amended) to have been committed on the last of those days: s 115 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 37 Pt 7). As to certificates of conviction as evidence of a previous conviction (and the date of the offence) for the purposes of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111 (as amended) see s 113 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 37 Pt 7). As to offences under service law see the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 114 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 Sch 37 Pt 7).

Attempted burglary is not 'burglary' for the purposes of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111 (as amended): R v Maguire [2002] EWCA Crim 2689, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 40. A person who has indicated an intent to plead guilty to an offence of burglary and has been committed to the Crown Court for sentence has been 'convicted' for the purposes of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111 (as amended): R v Webster [2003] EWCA Crim 3597, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 126. For the purposes of the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 111 (as amended) the offences and convictions must occur in the following sequence: commission of first offence; conviction of it; commission of second offence; conviction of it; commission of third offence; conviction of it: R v Hoare [2004] EWCA Crim 191, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 261.

UPDATE

294 Burglary

NOTE 13--The Court of Appeal has revisited the sentencing guidelines on domestic burglary in R v Saw [2009] EWCA Crim 1, [2009] 2 All ER 1138.

NOTE 18--Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 114 substituted: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 166.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/295. Aggravated burglary.

295. Aggravated burglary.

1 For the meaning of 'burglary' see PARA 294 ante.

2 If the charge is one of entry with intent (see PARA 294 head (1) ante), it is axiomatic that the defendant must have with him the article of aggravation at the time of entering. However, if, having entered, the defendant is charged with committing or attempting to commit a specified offence (see PARA 294 head (2) ante), he must have had the article of aggravation with him at the time of the commission of the offence, unless entry is accompanied by one of the specified intents. If the defendant, having no such intent at the time of entry, discards his weapon, he is not guilty of aggravated burglary, but he would be if he re-armed himself for this purpose: R v Francis [1982] Crim LR 363, CA. See also R v O'Leary (1986) 82 Cr App Rep 341, CA (defendant, having entered house as a trespasser but unarmed, picked up a knife, proceeded upstairs and forced victim to hand over property; guilty of aggravated burglary).

3 'Ie 'knowingly has with him': see R v Stones [1989] 1 WLR 156, 89 Cr App Rep 26, CA; and see PARA 699 note 5 ante. If a firearm, weapon etc is carried not by a burglar but by an accomplice waiting outside the building, aggravated burglary is not committed: R v Klass [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 453, CA.

4 'Firearm' includes an air gun or air pistol: Theft Act 1968 s 10(1)(a).

5 'Imitation firearm' means anything which has the appearance of being a firearm, whether capable of being discharged or not: ibid s 10(1)(a).

6 'Weapon of offence' means any article made or adapted for use for causing injury to or incapacitating a person, or intended by the person having it with him for such use: ibid s 10(1)(b). An article which the defendant did not have with him for the purpose of injury or incapacitation, or with which he has just armed himself, will become an article 'intended for such use' if, having formed the intention so to use it, he instantly uses it for such a purpose: R v Kelly (1992) 97 Cr App Rep 245, CA. It is not necessary that the defendant intended to use the article to injure or incapacitate someone in the course of the burglary itself. It suffices that he had it with him for such use on another occasion: R v Stones [1989] 1 WLR 156, 89 Cr App Rep 26, CA.

7 'Explosive' means any article manufactured for the purpose of producing a practical effect by explosion, or intended by the person having it with him for that purpose: Theft Act 1968 s 10(1)(c).

8 Ibid s 10(1). As to the appropriate direction to the jury on a charge of aggravated burglary see R v O'Sullivan and Lewis [1989] Crim LR 506, CA. For the extended territorial scope of aggravated burglary in connection with acts in relation to or by means of nuclear material see the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983; and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1583.

9 Theft Act 1968 s 10(2). Offences under the Theft Act 1968 s 10 may not be tried summarily: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17, Sch 1 para 28(a).

UPDATE

295 Aggravated burglary

NOTE 9--The absence of an intent to inflict serious harm does not preclude the court from imposing a lengthy custodial sentence where it is merited by the aggravating features of the case: A-G's Reference (No 12 of 2009); R v Graham [2009] EWCA Crim 1438, [2010] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 339, [2009] All ER (D) 163 (Aug). See also A-G's Reference (Nos 103, 104 and 105 of 2009); R v Denley [2010] All ER (D) 89 (Apr), CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/296. Going equipped for burglary, theft or cheat.

296. Going equipped for burglary, theft or cheat.

A person is guilty of an offence if, when not at his place of abode<sup>1</sup>, he has with him<sup>2</sup> any article for use in the course of or in connection<sup>3</sup> with any burglary<sup>4</sup>, theft<sup>5</sup> or cheat<sup>6</sup>. Where a person is charged with such an offence, proof that he had with him any article made or adapted for use in committing a burglary, theft or cheat is evidence that he had it with him for such use<sup>7</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years or a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>8</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>9</sup>.

1 Where a person lives, and drives around, in a car in which he keeps his tools for burglary, the car is his place of abode for the present purpose only when it is on a site where he intends to abide: R v Bundy [1977] 2 All ER 382, 65 Cr App Rep 239, CA.

2 In other offences the words 'has with him' mean 'knowingly has with him' and that the article should be near and readily accessible to the defendant: see PARAS 679 note 1, 699 note 5 post; but contrast on the latter point para 295 note 3 ante. The mere fact that a person was a passenger in a car containing such articles is not enough to constitute possession on his part: see R v Lester, R v Byast (1955) 39 Cr App Rep 157, CCA; R v Harris [1961] Crim LR 256, CCA; and see also R v Harran [1969] Crim LR 662, CA. Although such articles in the physical possession of one person may be held jointly with other persons, it would be difficult for a jury so to find if those others are wholly ignorant of the existence of the articles: see R v Webley (1967) 111 Sol Jo 111, CA. It is not necessary to prove that the defendant intended to use the article himself: R v Ellames [1974] 3 All ER 130, 60 Cr App Rep 7, CA; Re McAngus [1994] Crim LR 602, DC.

3 The connection between the burglary, theft or cheat and the use of the article must not be too remote: R v Mansfield [1975] Crim LR 101, CA (documents used to obtain a job which might provide defendant with opportunity to steal; use of documents too remote). The use of the article in connection with a burglary, theft or cheat before it came into the defendant's possession does not constitute a use contemplated by the Theft Act 1968 s 25(1) (see the text to note 6 infra): R v Ellames [1974] 3 All ER 130, 60 Cr App Rep 7, CA. However, it is not necessary to prove that the article is intended for use by the defendant in any particular burglary, theft or cheat (R v Ellames supra), although it must be proved that the defendant had a firm intention to use the thing for a burglary, theft or cheat, given the opportunity (R v Hargreaves [1985] Crim LR 243, CA).

4 For the meaning of 'burglary' see PARA 294 ante.

5 For the meaning of 'theft' see PARA 282 ante. For these purposes, an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 12(1) (taking a conveyance without authority: see PARA 298 post) is treated as theft: s 25(5).

6 Ibid s 25(1). 'Cheat' means an offence under s 15 (see PARA 310 post): s 25(5). As to the position of an employee, not being at his place of abode, having in his possession articles of his own which dishonestly he intends to sell as his employer's contrary to s 15 see R v Rashid [1977] 2 All ER 237, 64 Cr App Rep 201, CA; R v Doukas [1978] 1 All ER 1061, 66 Cr App Rep 228, CA; R v Corboz [1984] Crim LR 629, CA; R v Cooke [1986] AC 909, 83 Cr App Rep 339, HL. ### 296 Going equipped for burglary, theft or cheat

TEXT AND NOTES 6, 7--In Theft Act 1968 s 25(1) and (3) for 'burglary, theft or cheat' now read 'burglary or theft': Fraud Act 2006 Sch 1 para 8(a). Definition of 'cheat' in 1968 Act s 25(5) repealed: Fraud Act 2006 Sch 1 para 8(b), Sch 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/297. Removal of articles from places open to the public.

297. Removal of articles from places open to the public.

Where the public has access to a building in order to view it<sup>1</sup> or part of it, or a collection<sup>2</sup> or part of a collection housed in it, any person who without lawful authority removes from the building or its grounds the whole or part of any article displayed or kept for display to the public in the building or that part of it or in its grounds is guilty of an offence<sup>3</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>5</sup>.

A person does not commit such an offence if he believes that he has lawful authority for the removal of the thing in question or that he would have it if the person entitled to give it knew of the removal and the circumstances of it<sup>6</sup>.

1 The purpose or purposes of those responsible for the public being given access, and not the purposes of individual visitors, are relevant in deciding whether the public has access in order to view: R v Barr [1978] Crim LR 244.

2 For these purposes, 'collection' includes one got together for a temporary purpose; but references to a collection do not apply to one made or exhibited for the purpose of effecting sales or other commercial dealings: Theft Act 1968 s 11(1).

3 Ibid s 11(1). For these purposes, it is immaterial that the public's access to a building is limited to a particular period or occasion; but, where anything removed from a building or its grounds is there otherwise than as forming part of, or being on loan for exhibition with, a collection intended for permanent exhibition to the public, the person removing it does not thereby commit the offence unless he removes it on a day when the public has access to the building: s 11(2). A 'collection intended for permanent exhibition to the public' is simply one intended to be permanently available for exhibition to the public: R v Durkin [1973] QB 786, 57 Cr App Rep 637, CA.

4 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES VOL 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 Theft Act 1968 s 11(4); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS VOL 92 (2010) PARA 141.

6 Theft Act 1968 s 11(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/298. Taking conveyance without authority.

298. Taking conveyance without authority.

A person is guilty of an offence if, without having the consent<sup>1</sup> of the owner<sup>2</sup> or other lawful authority, he takes<sup>3</sup> any conveyance<sup>4</sup> for his own or another's use or, knowing that any conveyance has been taken without such authority<sup>5</sup>, drives<sup>6</sup> it or allows himself to be carried<sup>7</sup> in or on it<sup>8</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale or to both<sup>9</sup>.

A person who, without having the consent of the owner or other lawful authority, takes a pedal cycle for his own or another's use, or rides a pedal cycle knowing it to have been taken without such authority, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>10</sup>.

A person does not, however, commit either of the above offences by anything done in the belief that he has lawful authority to do it or that he would have the owner's consent if the owner knew of his doing it and the circumstances of it<sup>11</sup>.

1 A consent obtained by deception is nevertheless valid: R v Peart [1970] 2 QB 672, 54 Cr App Rep 374, CA (consent, although obtained by misrepresentation as to the destination and purpose of the journey, was not vitiated). See also Whittaker v Campbell [1983] 3 All ER 582, 77 Cr App Rep 267, DC (owner gave de facto consent; consent not vitiated by reason of its having been obtained by fraud); distinguished in Singh v Rathour [1988] 2 All ER 16, [1988] 1 WLR 422, CA (limited consent given by owner).

2 For these purposes, 'owner', in relation to a conveyance which is the subject of a hiring agreement or hire-purchase agreement, means the person in possession of the conveyance under that agreement: Theft Act 1968 s 12(7)(b).

3 Unauthorised assumption of possession of a vehicle is insufficient to constitute the offence; there must be some movement of the vehicle, however small: R v Bogacki [1973] QB 832, 57 Cr App Rep 593, CA. Where the vehicle is moved in a way which necessarily involves its use as a conveyance, the offence is made out and the taker's motive is irrelevant: R v Bow (1976) 64 Cr App Rep 54, CA (moving a vehicle causing obstruction). The offence is committed even though the vehicle has not been used as a conveyance if it is taken for later use as a conveyance: R v Marchant, R v McCallister (1984) 80 Cr App Rep 361, CA (vehicle pushed to another place to be used later as a conveyance). Unauthorised use of a conveyance by a person already in lawful possession or control of a conveyance may amount to a taking. An employee who uses his employer's lorry for his own purposes after the expiry of the period for which he is authorised to use it, usually the working day, thereby takes it: R v Wibberley [1966] 2 QB 214, [1965] 3 All ER 718, CCA (decided in relation to the Road Traffic Act 1960 s 217, which is the predecessor to the Theft Act 1968 s 12). So does an employee who, during the period for which he is authorised to use it, appropriates the employer's lorry to his own use in a manner which is inconsistent with the rights of the employer and shows that he has assumed control of it for his own purposes: McKnight v Davies [1974] RTR 4, DC. A similar principle applies to a bailee. A bailee of a conveyance takes it if he uses it for a purpose other than that for which he has been given permission after the end of the bailment: R v Phipps and McGill (1970) 54 Cr App Rep 300, CA. See also Singh v Rathour [1988] 2 All ER 16, [1988] 1 WLR 422, CA. If someone assumes possession of, and moves, a conveyance which has been taken without consent or other authority and then been abandoned, he can be convicted of taking it contrary to the Theft Act 1968 s 12 because there will be a fresh assumption of possession and therefore a 'taking': DPP v Spriggs [1994] RTR 1, DC.

4 For these purposes, 'conveyance' means any conveyance constructed or adapted for the carriage of a person or persons whether by land, water or air, except that it does not include a conveyance constructed or adapted for use only under the control of a person not carried in or on it; and 'drive' is to be construed accordingly: Theft Act 1968 s 12(7) (a). A horse is not a conveyance: Neal v Gribble (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 9, DC.

5 This includes knowledge that it has been stolen: Tolley v Giddings [1964] 2 QB 354, 48 Cr App Rep 105, DC.

6 A person does not drive a vehicle unless he is in the driving seat or in control of the steering wheel and also has something to do with the propulsion: R v Roberts (No 2) [1965] 1 QB 85, 48 Cr App Rep 296, CCA.

7 There must be some movement of the conveyance for the defendant to be carried in it: R v Diggin (1981) 72 Cr App Rep 204, CA (following R v Bogacki [1973] QB 832, 57 Cr App Rep 593, CA).

8 Theft Act 1968 s 12(1). As to interference with a vehicle see PARA 300 post. Section 12(1) does not apply in relation to pedal cycles: see s 12(5).

Proceedings for an offence under s 12(1) (but not proceedings of a kind falling within s 12(4) (as amended) in relation to a mechanically propelled vehicle: (1) may not be commenced after the end of the period of three years beginning with the day on which the offence was committed; but (2) subject to that, may be commenced at any time within the period of six months beginning with the relevant day: s 12(4A) (s 12(4A)-(4C) added by the Vehicles (Crime) Act 2001 s 37(1)). 'The relevant day' means: (a) in the case of a prosecution for an offence under the Theft Act s 12(1) by a public prosecutor, the day on which sufficient evidence to justify the proceedings came to the knowledge of any person responsible for deciding whether to commence any such prosecution; (b) in the case of a prosecution for an offence under s 12(1) which is commenced by a person other than a public prosecutor after the discontinuance of a prosecution falling within head (a) supra which relates to the same facts, the day on which sufficient evidence to justify the proceedings came to the knowledge of the person who has decided to commence the prosecution or (if later) the discontinuance of the other prosecution; (c) in the case of any other prosecution for an offence under s 12(1), the day on which sufficient evidence to justify the proceedings came to the knowledge of the person who has decided to commence the prosecution: s 12(4B) (as so added). For the purposes of head (2) supra, a certificate of a person responsible for deciding whether to commence a prosecution of a kind mentioned in head (a) supra as to the date on which such evidence as is mentioned in the certificate came to the knowledge of any person responsible for deciding whether to commence any such prosecution is conclusive evidence of that fact: s 12(4C) (as so added).

As to the power to join in an indictment a count for an offence under s 12(1) see PARA 1211 post. The offence under s 12(1) is a specified offence for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(2) (as amended) (power to search for prohibited articles: see PARA 860 et seq post).

Possession of an article for use in committing an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 12(1) or (5) is itself an offence: see s 25(1), (5); and PARA 296 ante.

If on the trial of an indictment for theft the jury is not satisfied that the defendant committed theft, but it is proved that the defendant committed an offence under s 12(1), the jury may find him guilty of the offence under s 12(1), and, if he is found guilty of it, he is liable as he would have been liable under s 12(2) (as amended) (see the text and note 9 infra) on summary conviction: s 12(4) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 37(1)(b)). For the purposes of the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 3 (alternative verdicts: see PARA 20 ante), an offence to which the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 40 (as amended) (see PARA 148 ante) applies is an offence which falls within the jurisdiction of the Crown Court, even if a count charging it is not included in the indictment: Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 s 11.

As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 12(1) has in his possession a firearm or imitation firearm see PARA 677 post.

9 Ibid s 12(2) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 37(1)(a)). As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142. As to disqualification and endorsement of licence see the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 ss 34(2), 97(2), Sch 2 Pt II (as amended); and ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1060.

10 Theft Act s 12(5) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46).

11 Theft Act 1968 s 12(6). If an issue arises as to the defendant's belief, the onus is on the prosecution to prove that the defendant did not have the relevant belief: R v MacPherson [1973] RTR 157, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/299. Aggravated vehicle-taking.

299. Aggravated vehicle-taking.

A person is guilty of aggravated taking of a vehicle if: (1) he commits an offence of taking a conveyance without authority<sup>1</sup> (referred to as 'a basic offence') in relation to a mechanically propelled vehicle; and (2) it is proved that, at any time after the vehicle was unlawfully taken (whether by him or another) and before it was recovered<sup>2</sup>, the vehicle was driven, or injury or damage was caused, in one or more specified circumstances<sup>3</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or, if it is proved that, owing to the driving of the vehicle, an accident occurred causing the death of the person concerned<sup>4</sup>, 14 years; or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>6</sup>.

A person is not guilty of aggravated vehicle-taking if he proves that, as regards any proven driving, injury or damage<sup>7</sup>, either: (a) the driving, accident or damage<sup>8</sup> occurred before he committed the basic offence; or (b) he was neither in nor on nor in the immediate vicinity of the vehicle when that driving, accident or damage occurred<sup>9</sup>. If a person who is charged with an offence of aggravated vehicle-taking is found not guilty of that offence but it is proved that he committed a basic offence, he may be convicted of the basic offence<sup>10</sup>.

1    le an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 12(1): see PARA 298 ante.

2    A vehicle is recovered when it is restored to its owner or to other lawful possession or custody; and 'owner' has the same meaning as in ibid s 12 (as amended) (see PARA 298 ante): s 12A(8) (s 12A added by the Aggravated Vehicle-Taking Act 1992 s 1).

3    Theft Act 1968 s 12A(1) (as added: see note 2 supra). The specified circumstances are: (1) that the vehicle was driven dangerously on a road or other public place; (2) that, owing to the driving of the vehicle, an accident occurred by which injury was caused to any person; (3) that, owing to the driving of the vehicle, an accident occurred by which damage was caused to any property, other than the vehicle; (4) that damage was caused to the vehicle: s 12A(2) (as so added). The most important of the circumstances is that given in head (1) supra because that concerns the culpability of the driver, whereas the incidents and severity of the injury or damage under heads (2)-(4) supra are to some extent a matter of chance: R v Bird (1992) 14 Cr App Rep (S) 343, CA. Head (4) supra does not require the damage caused to the vehicle to be caused by the driving of it: Dawes v DPP [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 65, [1994] RTR 209, DC (aggravated vehicle-taking committed where damage resulted from person attempting to escape from vehicle). A driver who takes a vehicle and is involved in an accident may be guilty of aggravated vehicle-taking under head (2) supra regardless of whether or not the accident was his fault: R v Marsh [1997] 1 Cr App Rep 67, 160 JP 721, CA. 'Accident' in this context can include a situation where a person has deliberately caused injury: R v Branchflower [2004] EWCA Crim 2042, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 140.

A vehicle is driven dangerously if: (a) it is driven in a way which falls far below what would be expected of a competent and careful driver; and (b) it would be obvious to a competent and careful driver that driving the vehicle in that way would be dangerous: Theft Act 1968 s 12A(7) (as so added).

Because in a specified circumstance the maximum imprisonment is higher (14 years) if death results than in the case of the other specified circumstances whether or not death results (two years), the effect of s 12A (as added) is to create two offences; it is essential that an indictment makes it clear which offence is being charged: R v Sherwood, R v Button [1995] RTR 60, CA (applying R v Courtie [1984] AC 463, [1984] 1 All ER 740, HL).

4    See the Theft Act 1968 s 12A(2)(b), (4) (as added: see note 2 supra). See also note 3 head (2) supra.

6 See the Theft Act 1968 s 12A(4) (as added (see note 2 supra); and amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 285(1)); the Aggravated Vehicle-Taking Act 1992 s 1(2); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. However, if the only aggravating feature alleged is damage to the vehicle or other property, the total value of which is under a specified sum, the offence is triable summarily only: s 22, Sch 2 (amended by the Aggravated Vehicle-Taking Act 1992 s 2(1), (2)). The specified sum is currently £5,000: Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 22(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1994 s 46). See further PARA 1114 post.

As to disqualification and endorsement of licence see the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 ss 34, 97(2), Sch 2 Pt II (as amended); and ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1060. The pre-planned hijacking of a car necessitates a lengthy custodial sentence since it the offence almost always involves at least two people, thereby increasing the fear and intimidation felt by the victim, especially if the car has first been rammed from behind: R v Snowden [2002] EWCA Crim 2347, (2002) Times, 11 November.

7 le as is referred to in head (2) in the text: Theft Act 1968 s 12A(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

8 le the driving, accident or damage referred to in ibid s 12A(2) (as added) (see the text and note 3 supra): s 12A(3)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra).

9 Ibid s 12A(3) (as added: see note 2 supra). As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 et seq post. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

10 Theft Act 1968 s 12A(5) (as added: see note 2 supra). Section 12A(5) (as added) applies as much to a magistrates' court as to the Crown Court: R (on the application of H) v Liverpool City Youth Court [2001] Crim LR 487, DC. If, by virtue of the Theft Act 1968 s 12A(5) (as added), a person is convicted of a basic offence before the Crown Court, that court has the same powers and duties as a magistrates' court would have on convicting him of such an offence: s 12A(6) (as so added).

299 Aggravated vehicle-taking

NOTE 6--See R v Clifford [2007] EWCA Crim 2442, [2008] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 593, [2007] All ER (D) 431 (Nov) (six months' imprisonment imposed where manner of offender's driving not cause of fatal accident).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/300. Interference with vehicles.

300. Interference with vehicles.

A person is guilty of an offence if he interferes with a motor vehicle<sup>1</sup> or trailer<sup>2</sup> or with anything carried in or on a motor vehicle or trailer with the intention that the offence of: (1) theft of the vehicle or trailer or part of it; or (2) theft of anything carried in or on the vehicle or trailer; or (3) taking a conveyance without authority<sup>3</sup>, is committed by himself or some other person<sup>4</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale or to both<sup>5</sup>.

1 'Motor vehicle' means, subject to the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970 (special provisions for invalid carriages), a mechanically propelled vehicle intended or adapted for use on roads: Road Traffic Act 1988 s 185(1); definition applied by the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 9(5) (amended by the Road Traffic (Consequential Provisions) Act 1988 s 4, Sch 3 para 23).

2 'Trailer' means a vehicle drawn by a motor vehicle: Road Traffic Act 1988 s 185(1); definition applied by the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 9(5) (as amended: see note 1 supra).

3 See PARA 298 ante.

4 Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 9(1), (2). There is persuasive authority that merely looking into vehicles or even touching them does not necessarily amount to an interference within s 9 (as amended): Reynolds and Warren v Metropolitan Police [1982] Crim LR 831, Crown Ct. If it is shown that a person accused of such an offence intended that one of the offences in heads (1)-(3) in the text should be committed, it is immaterial that it cannot be shown which it was: Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 9(2).

5 Ibid s 9(3) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46). As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks: see the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 9(3) (as so amended; prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 280(2), (3), Sch 26 para 28). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(2) OTHER OFFENCES INVOLVING OR RELATED TO STEALING/301. Abstracting electricity.

301. Abstracting electricity.

A person who dishonestly<sup>1</sup> uses<sup>2</sup> without due authority, or dishonestly causes to be wasted or diverted, any electricity<sup>3</sup>, is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>4</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>5</sup>.

1 The Theft Act 1968 s 2 (meaning of 'dishonestly': see PARA 283 ante) does not apply for the purposes of s 13: see s 1(3); and PARA 282 note 1 ante. 'Dishonesty' is a question of fact, to be judged according to the tests in R v Ghosh [1982] QB 1053, 75 Cr App Rep 154, CA (see PARA 283 ante). As to the approach to be taken by the judge when the offence is alleged against a number of occupants of the property in which the meter has been bypassed see R v Hoar [1982] Crim LR 606, CA; Collins and Fox v Chief Constable of Merseyside [1988] Crim LR 247.

2 The 'use' of any electricity means the consumption of electricity which would not occur but for the alleged user's act; it does not necessarily involve tampering with the meter: R v McCreadie, R v Tume (1992) 96 Cr App Rep 143, CA.

3 Electricity is not property and therefore cannot be the subject of theft under the general law: Low v Blease (1975) 119 Sol Jo 695, [1975] Crim LR 513, DC.

4 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 See the Theft Act 1968 s 13; and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

(3) HANDLING STOLEN GOODS AND RELATED OFFENCES

(i) Handling Stolen Goods

302. Handling stolen goods.

A person handles stolen goods<sup>1</sup> if (otherwise than in the course of the stealing<sup>2</sup>) knowing or believing<sup>3</sup> them to be stolen goods he dishonestly<sup>4</sup> receives<sup>5</sup> the goods, or dishonestly undertakes or assists in their retention<sup>6</sup>, removal, disposal or realisation<sup>7</sup> by or for the benefit of another person<sup>8</sup>, or if he arranges to do so<sup>9</sup>.

A person guilty of handling stolen goods is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>10</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>11</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'stolen goods' see PARA 303 post.

2 The prosecution is not normally required to prove that the defendant was not the thief or a party to the theft; but, where it is established that he was simply a party to the theft, he must not be convicted of handling: R v Cash [1985] QB 801, 80 Cr App Rep 314, CA. See also R v Pitham, R v Hehl (1977) 65 Cr App Rep 45, CA.

3 As to knowledge or belief see PARA 304 post.

4 The Theft Act 1968 s 2 (meaning of 'dishonestly': see PARA 283 ante) does not apply for the purposes of s 22: see s 1(3); and PARA 282 note 1 ante. 'Dishonesty' is a question of fact, to be judged according to the tests in R v Ghosh [1982] QB 1053, 75 Cr App Rep 154, CA (see PARA 283 ante). As to the appropriate direction where dishonesty is the principal issue see R v Roberts (1985) 84 Cr App Rep 117, CA.

5 Receiving involves the acquisition of exclusive control of the goods or of joint possession with the thief or another receiver: Hobson v Impett (1957) 41 Cr App Rep 138, DC; R v Frost, R v Hale (1964) 48 Cr App Rep 284, CCA. Actual manual possession by the defendant is not required (R v Smith (1855) Dears CC 494, CCA); it suffices that goods are received by his employee or agent with his authority (R v Miller (1854) 6 Cox CC 353). On the other hand, physically handling goods does not necessarily constitute possession: see Hobson v Impett supra. Where goods are found on premises occupied by the defendant, it must be shown that the goods came either by invitation or arrangement with him or that he had exercised control over them: R v Cavendish [1961] 2 All ER 856, 45 Cr App Rep 374, CCA. Acceptance of goods by an employee, acting without instructions or authority to take them, does not suffice for receiving by his employer: see R v Cavendish supra.

6 'Retention' corresponds with the dictionary definition of 'retain', namely 'keep possession of, not to lose, continue to have'; a defendant's conduct in permitting money to remain in his bank account after he learnt that it had been stolen constituted such retention: see R v Pitchley (1972) 57 Cr App Rep 30, CA (distinguishing R v Brown [1970] 1 QB 105, 53 Cr App Rep 527, CA). Assisting in the retention of stolen goods is more than the mere use of them; the defendant must be proved to have done some act, such as hiding them or making identification more difficult: see R v Sanders (1982) 75 Cr App Rep 84, CA. Verbal representations made to conceal that the goods were stolen may constitute the offence: R v Kanwar [1982] 2 All ER 528, 75 Cr App Rep 87, CA.

7 A purchase of goods is not a 'realisation' by the purchaser: R v Bloxham [1983] 1 AC 109 at 114, 74 Cr App Rep 279 at 283, HL, per Lord Bridge of Harwich; not following R v Deakin [1972] 3 All ER 803, 56 Cr App Rep 841, CA. Merely accepting the benefit of the disposition of stolen goods is insufficient to amount to assisting in the disposal of stolen goods: R v Coleman (1985) 150 JP 175, [1986] Crim LR 56, CA.

8 'By or for the benefit of another person' governs 'retention', 'removal', 'disposal' and 'realisation' and should be included in the particulars of the offence when a charge under the second part of the Theft Act 1968 s 22(1) is laid in an indictment: R v Sloggett [1972] 1 QB 430, 55 Cr App Rep 532, CA. A purchaser cannot be 'another person': R v Bloxham [1983] 1 AC 109, 74 Cr App Rep 279, HL (sale of stolen goods is not a realisation of them for the benefit of another). Nor can a co-defendant (R v Gingell [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 88, CA); although this restriction does not apply on a charge of conspiracy to commit one of these forms of handling (R v Slater, R v Suddens [1996] Crim LR 494, CA). 'Another person' includes someone who facilitates the disposal of stolen goods; the fact that the other may have been an innocent agent does not mean that he and the defendant are to be regarded as one person: R v Tokeley-Parry [1999] Crim LR 578, CA.

9 Theft Act 1968 s 22(1). In order to constitute such an arrangement the goods must have been stolen at the time the arrangement was made: R v Park (1987) 87 Cr App Rep 164, CA. Where an arrangement is made before the theft, the appropriate charge is conspiracy (see PARA 67 et seq ante): R v Park supra. Despite a dictum in a House of Lords decision that the Theft Act 1968 s 22(1) creates two distinct offences, one of receiving and one of dishonestly undertaking etc (see R v Bloxham [1983] 1 AC 109 at 113, 74 Cr App Rep 279 at 282, HL, per Lord Bridge of Harwich), the weight of authority indicates that the Theft Act 1968 s 22(1) creates only one offence which can be committed in any of the specified ways (see Griffiths v Freeman [1970] 1 All ER 1117, [1970] 1 WLR 659, DC; R v Nicklin [1977] 2 All ER 444, 64 Cr App Rep 205, CA). Particulars should be given to enable the defendant to understand the ingredients of the charge: Griffiths v Freeman supra; R v Nicklin supra. An indictment containing two separate counts, one in respect of receiving and one in respect of some or all the other forms of handling is not bad for duplicity: R v Nicklin supra; R v Bloxham supra. As to charging theft and handling as alternatives see PARA 282 note 6 ante. As to separate counts in an indictment see R v Bellman [1989] 1 All ER 22, 88 Cr App 252, HL; and PARA 1220 note 6 post. Where the defendant is found in possession of property stolen from a number of different burglaries or robberies which he is alleged to have received on separate occasions, each occasion should be the subject of a separate count: R v Smythe (1980) 72 Cr App Rep 8, CA. As to similar fact evidence on a charge of handling stolen goods see the Theft Act 1968 s 27(3); and PARA 1514 post. As to joint indictments see s 27(1), (2); and PARA 1303 note 1 post.

10 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Theft Act 1968 s 22(2); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. An offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 22 (see the text and notes 1-9 supra) is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6 (as amended)) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a). As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. For sentencing guidelines in cases of handling stolen goods see R v Webbe [2001] EWCA Crim 1217, [2002] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 22.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(3) HANDLING STOLEN GOODS AND RELATED OFFENCES/(i) Handling Stolen Goods/303. Meaning of 'stolen goods'.

303. Meaning of 'stolen goods'.

The provisions of the Theft Act 1968<sup>1</sup> relating to goods<sup>2</sup> which have been stolen apply whether the stealing occurred in England or Wales or elsewhere, provided that the stealing, if not an offence under the Act, amounted to an offence where and at the time when the goods were stolen; and references to stolen goods are to be construed accordingly<sup>3</sup>. For the purposes of those provisions<sup>4</sup>, goods obtained in England and Wales or elsewhere either by blackmail<sup>5</sup> or by deception<sup>6</sup> are to be regarded as stolen; and 'steal', 'theft' and 'thief' are to be construed accordingly<sup>7</sup>.

For the purposes of such provisions, references to stolen goods include money which is dishonestly withdrawn from an account to which a wrongful credit has been made, but only to the extent that the money derives from the credit<sup>8</sup>.

For the purposes of such provisions, references to stolen goods include, in addition to the goods originally stolen and parts of them (whether in their original state or not): (1) any other goods which directly or indirectly represent or have at any time represented the stolen goods in the hands of the thief as being the proceeds of any disposal or realisation<sup>9</sup> of the whole or part of the goods stolen or of goods so representing the stolen goods<sup>10</sup>; and (2) any other goods which directly or indirectly represent or have at any time represented the stolen goods in the hands of a handler of the stolen goods or any part of them as being the proceeds of any disposal or realisation of the whole or part of the stolen goods handled by him or of goods so representing them<sup>11</sup>.

It must be proved that the goods were stolen; the proof may be by direct evidence of the theft or the circumstances in which the defendant handled the goods may of themselves prove that the goods were stolen; there is no rule that there must be other evidence of the theft<sup>12</sup>. However, no goods are to be regarded as having continued to be stolen goods after they have been restored to the person from whom they were stolen or to other lawful possession or custody<sup>13</sup>, or after that person and any other person claiming through him have otherwise ceased as regards those goods to have any right to restitution in respect of the theft<sup>14</sup>. Thus where stolen goods are recovered by the prosecutor and subsequently returned to the thief for the purpose of trapping any person who might later handle them, a charge of handling stolen goods will fail<sup>15</sup>.

1    I.e. the Theft Act 1968 ss 22-24, 26-28, 32(2) (as amended): see PARAS 302 ante, 305-306, 1303, 1514, 1536 post. Sections 26, 27 (as amended) are expressly stated to be construed in accordance with s 24: ss 26(5), 27(5).

2    For the purposes of the Theft Act 1968, 'goods' includes, except in so far as the context otherwise requires, money and every other description of property except land, and includes things severed from the land by stealing: s 34(2)(b).

3    Ibid s 24(1).

4    I.e. the provisions referred to in note 1 supra. In ibid s 24(4) (see the text and notes 5-7 infra), those provisions are stated expressly to include s 24(1)-(3) (see the text and notes 1-3 supra, 5-14 infra).

However, the defendant's knowledge or belief that a payment of money represented stolen goods is not conclusive evidence of that fact: A-G's Reference (No 4 of 1979) [1981] 1 All ER 1193, 71 Cr App Rep 341, CA. If the alleged thief of goods is a child under the age of criminal responsibility, a person handling the goods cannot be guilty of handling stolen goods although an indictment for theft may lie against him: see Walters v Lunt [1951] 2 All ER 645, 35 Cr App Rep 94, DC.

13 Whether goods are so restored depends primarily on the intention of the person allegedly restoring them and is a matter for the jury: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1974) [1974] QB 744, 59 Cr App Rep 203, CA; Greater London Metropolitan Police Comr v Streeter (1980) 71 Cr App Rep 113, DC.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(3) HANDLING STOLEN GOODS AND RELATED OFFENCES/(i) Handling Stolen Goods/304. Knowledge or belief that the goods have been stolen.

304. Knowledge or belief that the goods have been stolen.

Knowledge or belief that the goods have been stolen is an essential ingredient in a charge of handling stolen goods<sup>1</sup>. This knowledge or belief must exist at the time when the defendant received or otherwise handled the goods<sup>2</sup>. The test of knowledge or belief is subjective; but if there is evidence that the defendant deliberately shut his eyes to the obvious, the inference may be drawn that he did so because he knew or believed the goods to be stolen<sup>3</sup>. The circumstances in which the defendant handled the goods may show that he knew that they were stolen<sup>4</sup> but the fact that he lied to the police as to the manner in which the goods came into his possession is not necessarily evidence that he knew that they were stolen<sup>5</sup>.

The possession by a person of goods which have been recently stolen is some evidence, in the absence of a reasonable explanation by him as to how they came into his possession, that he either stole them or received them knowing them to be stolen depending on the particular circumstances<sup>6</sup>. The weight attributable to the evidence depends on the nature of the goods and the length of time which has elapsed from the time when they were stolen to the time when they are proved to have been in the possession of the defendant<sup>7</sup>. If a person is accused of receiving stolen goods and recent possession of them by him is established, he may be convicted of handling stolen goods in the absence of any explanation by him of the way in which they came into his possession which might reasonably be true, and which is consistent with innocence; but if he gives such an explanation, even though the jury is not convinced of its truth, the defendant is entitled to be acquitted in the absence of other evidence, because the prosecution has failed to discharge the duty of satisfying the jury that it is sure of the guilt of the defendant; that onus remains on the prosecution<sup>8</sup>. Evidence that a defendant charged with handling stolen goods has had in his possession stolen goods from any theft in the 12 months before the offence charged may be admitted and evidence of any convictions for theft or handling stolen goods in the previous five years may also be given<sup>9</sup>.

1 See PARA 302 ante. To secure a conviction it need not be shown that the defendant knew the nature of the goods which are the subject matter of the charge: R v McCullum (1973) 57 Cr App Rep 645, CA.

2 R v Brook [1993] Crim LR 455, CA.

As to the difference between 'knowledge' and 'belief' see R v Hall (1985) 81 Cr App Rep 260, CA ('knowledge' is actual knowledge; 'belief', although short of actual knowledge, is appreciation that the goods must have been stolen in the absence of any reason to the contrary). See also R v Forsyth [1997] 2 Cr App Rep 299, CA. In most cases there is no need to give the jury any direction as to the meaning of 'knowledge or belief': R v Harris (1986) 84 Cr App Rep 75, CA. A mere suspicion, not amounting to knowledge or belief, is inadequate to constitute the offence: R v Grainge supra. An erroneous belief that the goods are stolen goods is irrelevant (Haughton v Smith [1975] AC 476, 58 Cr App Rep 198, HL); but a person who dishonestly handles goods in such a mistaken belief may be convicted for attempted handling (R v Shivpuri [1987] AC 1, 83 Cr App Rep 178, HL, overruling Anderton v Ryan [1985] AC 560, 81 Cr App Rep 166, HL). The offence is one of strict liability in relation to the publication of such an advertisement, so that someone who publishes such an advertisement in a newspaper etc without knowledge of its inclusion can be convicted of the offence: see Denham v Scott (1983) 77 Cr App Rep 210, DC. #### (iv) Dishonestly Retaining a Wrongful Credit

307. Dishonestly retaining a wrongful credit.

A person is guilty of an offence if: (1) a wrongful credit<sup>1</sup> has been made to an account<sup>2</sup> kept by him or in respect of which he has any right or interest; (2) he knows or believes that the credit is wrongful; and (3) he dishonestly fails to take such steps as are reasonable in the circumstances to secure that the credit is cancelled<sup>3</sup>.

A credit to an account is wrongful if it is the credit side of a money transfer obtained by deception<sup>4</sup>. A credit to an account is also wrongful to the extent that it derives from: (a) theft<sup>5</sup>; (b) an offence of obtaining a money transfer by deception<sup>6</sup>; (c) blackmail<sup>7</sup>; or (d) stolen goods<sup>8</sup>. In determining whether a credit to an account is wrongful, it is immaterial whether the account is overdrawn before or after the credit is made<sup>9</sup>.

A person guilty of an offence of dishonestly retaining a wrongful credit is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>10</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>11</sup>.

1 References to a credit are references to a credit of an amount of money: Theft Act 1968 s 24A(2) (s 24A added by the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 s 2).

2 'Account' is to be construed in accordance with the Theft Act 1968 s 15B (as added and amended) (see PARA 311 post): s 24A(9) (as added: see note 1 supra).

3 Ibid s 24A(1) (as added: see note 1 supra). An offence under s 24A (as added) is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a) (amended by the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 s 3(2), (3)). The Theft Act 1968 s 24A (as added) only applies to wrongful credits made on or after the day on which the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 came into force (ie 18 December 1996): s 2(2).

4 It is obtained contrary to the Theft Act 1968 s 15A (as added) (see PARA 311 post): s 24A(3) (as added: see note 1 supra). 'Money' is to be construed in accordance with s 15B (as added and amended) (see PARA 311 post): s 24A(9) (as so added).

5 See PARA 282 ante.

6 See PARA 310 post.

7 See PARA 308 post.

8 Theft Act 1968 s 24A(4) (as added: see note 1 supra). As to stolen goods see PARA 303 ante.

9 Ibid s 24A(5) (as added: see note 1 supra).

10 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Theft Act 1968 s 24A(6) (as added: see note 1 supra); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

UPDATE

307 Dishonestly retaining a wrongful credit

NOTES 2, 4--'Account' now means an account kept with (1) a bank; (2) a person carrying on a business which falls within the Theft Act 1968 s 24A(10); or (3) an issuer of electronic money (as defined for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt 2): 1968 Act s 24A(9) (substituted by Fraud Act 2006 Sch 1 para 7(3)). A business falls within the 1968 Act s 24A(10) if (a) in the course of the business money received by way of deposit is lent to others; or (b) any other activity of the business is financed, wholly or to any material extent, out of the capital of or the interest on money received by way of deposit: s 24A(10) (as added by 2006 Act Sch 1 para 7(3)). References in the 1968 Act s 24A(10) to a deposit must be read with (i) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22; (ii) any relevant order under the 2000 Act s 22; and (iii) the 2000 Act Sch 2; but any restriction on the meaning of deposit which arises from the identity of the person making it is to be disregarded: 1968 Act s 24A(11) (as so added). For the purposes of s 24A(10) (A) all the activities which a person carries on by way of business must be regarded as a single business carried on by him; and (B) 'money' includes money expressed in a currency other than sterling: s 24A(12) (as so added).

NOTE 3--Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 s 3(2) repealed: 2006 Act Sch 3.

TEXT AND NOTES 4, 8--Theft Act 1968 s 24A(3), (4) omitted: 2006 Act Sch 1 para 7(1), Sch 3. A credit to an account is wrongful to the extent that it derives from (1) theft; (2) blackmail; (3) fraud (contrary to the 2006 Act s 1: see PARA 309A.1); or (4) stolen goods: Theft Act 1968 s 24A(2A) (added by 2006 Act Sch 1 para 7(1)).

(4) BLACKMAIL

308. Blackmail.

A person is guilty of blackmail if, with a view to gain for himself or another or with intent to cause loss to another<sup>1</sup>, he makes any unwarranted demand<sup>2</sup> with menaces<sup>3</sup>. For these purposes, a demand with menaces is unwarranted unless the person making it does so in the belief: (1) that he has reasonable grounds for making the demand; and (2) that the use of the menaces is a proper means of reinforcing the demand<sup>4</sup>. The nature of the act or omission demanded is immaterial; and it is also immaterial whether the menaces relate to action to be taken by the person making the demand<sup>5</sup>.

A person guilty of blackmail is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years<sup>6</sup>.

1 For the purposes of the Theft Act 1968, 'gain' and 'loss' are to be construed as extending only to gain or loss in money or other property, but as extending to any such gain or loss whether temporary or permanent: s 34(2)(a). 'Gain' includes a gain by keeping what one has, as well as a gain by getting what one has not; and 'loss' includes a loss by not getting what one might get, as well as a loss by parting with what one has: s 34(2)(a)(i), (ii). An unwarranted demand with menaces for a debt is made with a view to gain, because the person making the demand is endeavouring to get money which he has not got although it is legally due to him: R v Parkes [1973] Crim LR 358, Crown Ct; approved in A-G's Reference (No 1 of 2001) [2002] EWCA Crim 1768, [2002] 3 All ER 840, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep 131 (false accounting contrary to the Theft Act 1968 s 17(1) (see PARA 316 post)). It is not necessary that the defendant should be motivated by the desire to achieve economic gain or to cause economic loss: R v Bevans (1987) 87 Cr App Rep 64, CA (defendant in severe pain threatened to shoot a doctor if he did not inject defendant with morphine; guilty of blackmail).

2 The demand need not be in explicit or express terms but may be implicit in words or conduct: R v Collister, R v Warhurst (1955) 39 Cr App Rep 100, CCA. Thus a request imposing conditions may amount to a demand, although a mere request would not: R v Studer (1915) 85 LJB 1017, CCA. A demand contained in a letter is made when the letter is posted: Treacy v DPP [1971] AC 537 at 546, 55 Cr App Rep 113 at 117, HL.

3 Theft Act 1968 s 21(1). 'Menaces' is given a wide meaning: see Thorne v Motor Trade Association [1937] AC 797 at 817, 26 Cr App Rep 51 at 67, HL, per Lord Wright ('the word menace is to be liberally construed and not as limited to threats of violence, but as including threats of any action detrimental to or unpleasant to the person addressed. It may also include a warning that in certain events such action is intended'). To constitute 'menaces' the threats or conduct of the defendant must be of such a nature and extent that the mind of an ordinary person of normal stability and courage might be influenced or made apprehensive so as to accede unwillingly to the demand: R v Clear [1968] 1 QB 670, 52 Cr App Rep 58, CA. The term 'an ordinary person of normal stability and courage' in this context should be interpreted literally: see R v Tomlinson [1895] 1 QB 706 at 710, CCR, per Wills J; R v Boyle, R v Merchant [1914] 3 KB 339, CCA. A threat to injure property or character may amount to a menace: R v Smith (1850) 2 Car & Kir 882, CCR; R v Taylor (1859) 1 F & F 511; R v Boyle, R v Merchant supra. However, a threat to the person or property of another will suffice: R v Tomlinson supra. Similarly, a threat to charge a person with a crime (R v Miard (1844) 1 Cox CC 22; R v Tomlinson supra) or with misconduct not amounting to a crime (R v Chalmers (1867) 10 Cox CC 450, CCR; R v Tomlinson supra) or with arrest may amount to menaces (R v Robertson (1864) Le & Ca 483, CCR). Whether the threats or conduct in a particular case constitute menaces is a matter for the jury: R v Clear supra.

'Menaces' is an ordinary English word which a jury could be expected to understand: R v Lawrence, R v Pomroy (1971) 57 Cr App Rep 64, CA. See also Treacy v DPP [1971] AC 537 at 565, 55 Cr App Rep 113 at 146, HL, per Lord Diplock ('The Theft Act 1968 . . . is expressed in simple language as used and understood by ordinary literate men and women'); R v Garwood [1987] 1 All ER 1032, 85 Cr App Rep 85, CA. It follows that only rarely will a judge need to enter on a definition of 'menaces': R v Lawrence, R v Pomroy supra; R v Garwood supra. Two occasions where the judge may need to spell out the meaning of menaces are: (1) where, on the facts known to the defendant, his threats might have affected the mind of an ordinary person of normal stability, although they did not affect the addressee, the jury should be told that they would amount to menaces; (2) where, although they would not have affected the mind of a person of normal stability, the threats affected the mind of the victim, the jury should be told that the menaces would be proved if the defendant was aware of the likely effect of his actions on the victim, eg because he knew of some unusual susceptibility on the victim's part: R v Garwood supra. See also R v Lawrence, R v Pomroy supra.

An offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 21 is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a). For extended territorial scope of blackmail in connection with acts in relation to or by means of nuclear material see the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983 s 1; and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1583.

As to threats to kill see also PARA 105 ante. As to blackmail where there is an international element see PARA 1058 et seq post.

4 Theft Act 1968 s 21(1). The test of the defendant's belief is subjective; but in relation to head (2) in the text 'no act which was not believed to be lawful could be believed to be proper within the meaning of s 21(1)': R v Harvey, R v Ulyett, R v Plummer (1980) 72 Cr App Rep 139 at 142, CA, per Bingham J. As to the proper direction to the jury on the question of belief see R v Harvey, R v Ulyett, R v Plummer supra. It is for the defence to raise the issue of belief; and, if it is not raised, there is no need for any direction on the question: R v Lawrence, R v Pomroy (1971) 57 Cr App Rep 64, CA; R v Harvey, R v Ulyett, R v Plummer supra at 142.

5 Theft Act 1968 s 21(2).

6 Ibid s 21(3). Offences under s 21 may not be tried summarily: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 17, Sch 1 para 28(a). As to sentencing for blackmail see R v Hadjou (1989) 11 Cr App Rep (S) 29, CA. As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for blackmail has in his possession a firearm or imitation firearm see PARA 677 ante.

The provisions of the Theft Act 1968 relating to stolen goods apply to goods obtained by blackmail: see s 24(4); and PARA 303 ante. Similarly, restitution orders are applicable to goods obtained by blackmail: see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 388.

An offence contrary to s 21 is a 'lifestyle offence' for the purposes of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 75 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 392-393): s 75(2)(a), Sch 2 para 9. A court may make a financial reporting order in respect of a lifestyle offence: see the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 76; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 475-476.

(5) FRAUD

309. Prospective legislation relating to fraud.

At the date at which this volume states the law, a Fraud Bill was before Parliament<sup>1</sup>. This government Bill was introduced in the House of Lords on 25 May 2005 and in the House of Commons on 29 March 2006.

The Bill provides for a general offence of fraud, which may be committed by false representation, by failing to disclose information, or by abuse of position<sup>2</sup>. It also creates offences of possessing, making or supplying articles for use in frauds<sup>3</sup>, an offence of obtaining services dishonestly<sup>4</sup>, and an offence of fraudulent trading applicable to non-corporate traders<sup>5</sup>; and it amends the penalty for participating in fraudulent business carried on by a company<sup>6</sup>. There are various supplementary<sup>7</sup> and transitional<sup>8</sup> provisions.

309 Prospective legislation relating to fraud

TEXT AND NOTES--The Fraud Act 2006 received royal assent on 8 November 2006 and ss 15 and 16 came into force on that date. The remaining provisions came into force on 15 January 2007: see SI 2006/3200. See further PARA 309A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/309A. Fraud and obtaining services dishonestly.

309A. Fraud and obtaining services dishonestly.

The Fraud Act 2006 makes provision for, and in connection with, criminal liability for fraud and obtaining services dishonestly. For transition provisions and savings see s 14(2), Sch 2.

1. General

A person is guilty of fraud if he is in breach of any of the following provisions<sup>1</sup> which provide for different ways of committing the offence<sup>2</sup>. The provisions relate to (1) fraud by false representation<sup>3</sup>; (2) fraud by failing to disclose information<sup>4</sup>; and (3) fraud by abuse of position<sup>5</sup>. A person who is guilty of fraud is liable (a) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>6</sup> (or to both); (b) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine (or to both)<sup>7</sup>.

1    Ie the provisions listed in the Fraud Act 2006 s 1(2).

2    Ibid s 1(1).

3    See ibid s 2 and PARA 309A.2.

4    See ibid s 3 and PARA 309A.3.

5    See ibid s 4 and PARA 309A.4: s 1(2).

6    As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

7    2006 Act s 1(3).

2. Fraud by false representation

A person is in breach of this provision<sup>1</sup> if he (1) dishonestly makes a false representation<sup>2</sup>, and (2) intends, by making the representation (a) to make a gain<sup>3</sup> for himself or another, or (b) to cause loss<sup>4</sup> to another or to expose another to a risk of loss<sup>5</sup>.

1    Ie the Fraud Act 2006 s 2.

2    A representation is false if (1) it is untrue or misleading, and (2) the person making it knows that it is, or might be, untrue or misleading: s 2(2). 'Representation' means any representation as to fact or law, including a representation as to the state of mind of (a) the person making the representation, or (b) any other person: s 2(3). A representation may be express or implied: s 2(4). For the purposes of s 2 a representation may be regarded as made if it (or anything implying it) is submitted in any form to any system or device designed to receive, convey or respond to communications (with or without human intervention): s 2(5).

3    'Gain' includes a gain by keeping what one has, as well as a gain by getting what one does not have: ibid s 5(3). See further NOTE 5.

4    'Loss' includes a loss by not getting what one might get, as well as a loss by parting with what one has: ibid s 5(4). See further NOTE 5.

5 Ibid s 2(1). 'Gain' and 'loss' (1) extend only to gain or loss in money or other property; (2) include any such gain or loss whether temporary or permanent; and 'property' means any property whether real or personal (including things in action and other intangible property): s 5(2).

3. Fraud by failing to disclose information

A person is in breach of this provision<sup>1</sup> if he (1) dishonestly fails to disclose to another person information which he is under a legal duty to disclose, and (2) intends, by failing to disclose the information (a) to make a gain<sup>2</sup> for himself or another, or (b) to cause loss<sup>3</sup> to another or to expose another to a risk of loss<sup>4</sup>.

1 Ibid the Fraud Act 2006 s 3.

2 For the meaning of 'gain' see PARA 309A.2.

3 For the meaning of 'loss' see PARA 309A.2.

4 2006 Act s 3.

4. Fraud by abuse of position

A person is in breach of this provision<sup>1</sup> if he (1) occupies a position in which he is expected to safeguard, or not to act against, the financial interests of another person, (2) dishonestly abuses that position, and (3) intends, by means of the abuse of that position (a) to make a gain<sup>2</sup> for himself or another, or (b) to cause loss<sup>3</sup> to another or to expose another to a risk of loss<sup>4</sup>.

1 Ibid the Fraud Act 2006 s 4.

2 For the meaning of 'gain' see PARA 309A.2.

3 For the meaning of 'loss' see PARA 309A.2.

4 2006 Act s 4(1). A person may be regarded as having abused his position even though his conduct consisted of an omission rather than an act: s 4(2).

5. Possession etc of articles for use in frauds

A person is guilty of an offence if he has in his possession or under his control any article<sup>1</sup> for use in the course of or in connection with any fraud<sup>2</sup>. A person guilty of an offence under this provision<sup>3</sup> is liable (1) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>4</sup> (or to both); (2) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine (or to both)<sup>5</sup>.

1 For the purposes of (1) the Fraud Act 2006 ss 6 and 7 (see PARA 309A.6), and (2) the provisions listed in s 8(2), so far as they relate to articles for use in the course of or in connection with fraud, 'article' includes any program or data held in electronic form: s 8(1). The provisions are (a) the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(7)(b), (b) the Armed Forces Act 2001 s 2(8)(b), and (c) the Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989, SI 1989/1341, art 3(7)(b); (meaning of 'prohibited articles' for the purposes of stop and search powers): 2006 Act s 8(2).

3 Ibid s 6.

4 As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

5 2006 Act s 6(2). Head (1) in the text applies in relation to Northern Ireland as if the reference to 12 months were a reference to six months: s 6(3).

6. Making or supplying articles for use in frauds

A person is guilty of an offence if he makes, adapts, supplies or offers to supply any article<sup>1</sup> (1) knowing that it is designed or adapted for use in the course of or in connection with fraud, or (2) intending it to be used to commit, or assist in the commission of, fraud<sup>2</sup>. A person guilty of an offence under this provision<sup>3</sup> is liable (a) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>4</sup> (or to both); (b) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine (or to both)<sup>5</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'article' see PARA 309A.5.

2 Fraud Act 2006 s 7(1).

3 Ibid s 7.

4 As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

5 2006 Act s 7(2). Head (1) in the TEXT applies in relation to Northern Ireland as if the reference to 12 months were a reference to six months: s 7(3).

7. Participating in fraudulent business carried on by sole trader etc

A person is guilty of an offence if he is knowingly a party to the carrying on of a business to which these provisions<sup>1</sup> apply (fraudulent trading)<sup>2</sup>. A person guilty of an offence under these provisions is liable (1) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>3</sup> (or to both); (2) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine (or to both)<sup>4</sup>.

1 Ibid the Fraud Act 2006 s 9.

2 Ibid s 9(1). Section 9 applies to a business which is carried on (1) by a person who is outside the reach of the Companies Act 2006 s 993 (offence of fraudulent trading), and (2) with intent to defraud creditors of any person or for any other fraudulent purpose: Fraud Act 2006 s 9(2) (amended by the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 3, Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007, SI 2007/2194). 'Fraudulent purpose' has the same meaning as in the Companies Act 2006 s 993: Fraud Act 2006 s 9(5) (amended by SI 2007/2194). The following are within the reach of the Companies Act 2006 s 993 (a) a company (as defined in the Companies Act 2006 s 1(1)); (b) a person to whom the Companies Act 2006 s 993 applies (with or without adaptations or modifications) as if the person were a company; (c) a person exempted from the application of s 993: Fraud Act 2006 s 9(3) (amended by SI 2007/2194, SI 2009/1941).

3 As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

4 Fraud Act 2006 s 9(6). Head (1) in the TEXT applies in relation to Northern Ireland as if the reference to 12 months were a reference to six months: s 9(7).

8. Obtaining services dishonestly

A person is guilty of an offence under the following provisions<sup>1</sup> if he obtains services for himself or another (1) by a dishonest act, and (2) in breach of the provision below<sup>2</sup>. A person obtains services in breach of this provision if (a) they are made available on the basis that payment has been, is being or will be made for or in respect of them, (b) he obtains them without any payment having been made for or in respect of them or without payment having been made in full, and (c) when he obtains them, he knows (i) that they are being made available on the basis described in head (a) above, or (ii) that they might be, but intends that payment will not be made, or will not be made in full<sup>3</sup>. A person guilty of an offence under these provisions is liable (A) on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>4</sup> (or to both); (B) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine (or to both)<sup>5</sup>.

1    le the Fraud Act 2006 s 11.

2    le in breach of ibid s 11(2); s 11(1).

3    Ibid s 11(2).

4    As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

5    2006 Act s 11(3). Head (A) in the TEXT applies in relation to Northern Ireland as if the reference to 12 months were a reference to six months: s 11(4).

9.    Liability of company officers for offences by company

The following provision<sup>1</sup> applies if an offence under the Fraud Act 2006 is committed by a body corporate<sup>2</sup>. If the offence is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of (1) a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate, or (2) a person who was purporting to act in any such capacity, he (as well as the body corporate) is guilty of the offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly<sup>3</sup>.

1    le the Fraud Act 2006 s 12(2).

2    Ibid s 12(1).

3    Ibid s 12(2). If the affairs of a body corporate are managed by its members, s 12(2) applies in relation to the acts and defaults of a member in connection with his functions of management as if he were a director of the body corporate: s 12(3).

10.   Evidence

A person is not to be excused from (1) answering any question put to him in proceedings relating to property<sup>1</sup>, or (2) complying with any order made in proceedings relating to property, on the ground that doing so may incriminate him or his spouse or civil partner of an offence under the Fraud Act 2006 or a related offence<sup>2</sup>. But, in proceedings for an offence under the Fraud Act 2006 or a related offence, a statement or admission made by the person in (a) answering such a question, or (b) complying with such an order, is not admissible in evidence against him or (unless they married or became civil partners after the making of the statement or admission) his spouse or civil partner<sup>3</sup>.

1    'Proceedings relating to property' means any proceedings for (1) the recovery or administration of any property, (2) the execution of a trust, or (3) an account of any property or dealings with property, and 'property' means money or other property whether real or personal (including things in action and other intangible property): Fraud Act 2006 s 13(3).

2    Ibid s 13(1). 'Related offence' means (1) conspiracy to defraud; (2) any other offence involving any form of fraudulent conduct or purpose: s 13(4). See Kensington International Ltd v Republic of Congo [2007] EWCA Civ 1128, [2008] 1 All ER (Comm) 934; JSC BTA Bank v Ablyazov [2009] EWCA Civ 1124, [2010] 1 WLR 976, [2009] All ER (D) 292 (Oct); and Cavell USA Inc v Seaton Insurance Co [2009] EWCA Civ 1363, [2009] All ER (D) 181 (Dec).

UPDATE

309-332 Fraud

As to the prevention of fraud see PARA 332A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/310. Obtaining property by deception.

310. Obtaining property by deception.

1 For these purposes, 'deception' means any deception, whether deliberate or reckless, by words or conduct as to fact or as to law, including a deception as to the present intentions of the person using the deception or any other person: Theft Act 1968 s 15(4). A deception is 'deliberate' if the defendant knows his statement is false and will or may induce the person to whom it is addressed to believe that it is true: Dip Kaur v Chief Constable for Hampshire [1981] 2 All ER 430, 72 Cr App Rep 359, DC. A person makes a deception 'recklessly' if he knows that there is a risk that his statement is false and will or may induce that person to believe that it is true: see PARA 11 ante. Negligence is not enough; if a person unreasonably believes in the truth of a statement he is not reckless as to its falsity: R v Staines (1970) 61 Cr App Rep 160, CA. The deception may be by words or conduct: see eg R v Harris (1975) 62 Cr App Rep 28, CA (person who registered as hotel guest impliedly represented that he intended to pay the bill at end of stay); R v Silverman (1987) 86 Cr App Rep 213, CA (jobbing builder who had built a relationship of mutual trust with customers impliedly represented that the price charged was a fair and reasonable one). See also R v Doukas [1978] 1 All ER 1061, 66 Cr App Rep 228, CA (wine waiter impliedly represented that wine he offered was his employer's not his own; decided under the Theft Act 1968 s 25 (see PARA 296 ante)).

If a person makes a representation to another, expressly or by implication, which is true when made but to his knowledge becomes untrue before the relevant thing is obtained, and he fails to tell the addressee of the change, he thereby practices deception if by his conduct he continues in that representation: DPP v Ray [1974] AC 370, 58 Cr App Rep 130, HL. See also R v Rai [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 217, CA (a case of obtaining services by deception contrary to the Theft Act 1978 s 1 (as amended); 'conduct' in Theft Act 1968 s 15(4) covers acquiescence in letting services be provided while keeping quiet about the change of circumstances).

By giving a cheque, whether postdated or not, the drawer impliedly represents that the state of facts existing at the date of delivery is such that in the ordinary course of events the cheque will be met on presentation for payment on or after the date specified in it: R v Gilmartin [1983] QB 953, 76 Cr App Rep 238, CA; and see Metropolitan Police Comr v Charles [1977] AC 177 at 182, 63 Cr App Rep 252 at 260-261, HL, per Lord Diplock; R v Hazelton (1874) LR 2 CCR 134; R v Page [1971] 2 QB 330n at 333, 55 Cr App Rep 184 at 190, CA. Where a cheque is drawn to cover an application for a large allotment of shares in the knowledge that, if the whole number applied for is in fact allotted, there will not be sufficient funds to meet the cheque, but the drawer's expectation is that he will be allotted only a small proportion of the number of shares applied for, so that with the cheque he will receive in respect of the surplus he can provide a total credit balance to cover his own cheque ('stagging'), the representations implied in drawing the cheque thus constitute a deception: see R v Greenstein [1976] 1 All ER 1, 61 Cr App Rep 296, CA. A person who uses a cheque card (or credit card) impliedly represents by his conduct that he has actual authority from the bank (or credit card company) to use the card to make a contract with the payee on behalf of the bank (or credit card company) that it will honour the cheque (or transaction); if he has no such authority a deception is made as to his authority: see Metropolitan Police Comr v Charles supra (cheque cards); R v Lambie [1982] AC 449, 73 Cr App Rep 294, HL (credit cards).

A simple failure to reveal a fact is a deception if the defendant is under a legal duty to disclose it: R v Firth (1989) 91 Cr App Rep 217, CA; and see PARA 314 post.

2 'Dishonestly' in the Theft Act 1968 ss 15, 16, has replaced the phrase 'intent to defraud' in the pre-existing law and is of wider ambit: R v Potger (1970) 55 Cr App Rep 42 at 46, CA. The Theft Act 1968 s 2 (meaning of 'dishonestly': see PARA 283 ante) is limited to theft and does not apply for the purposes of s 15, s 15A (as added), s 16, s 17, s 20 (as amended) or to the Theft Act 1978 ss 1-3 (ss 1, 3 as amended): see the Theft Act 1968 s 1(3); and PARA 282 note 1 ante. However, the test of dishonesty under R v Ghosh [1982] QB 1053, 75 Cr App Rep 154, CA, applies throughout the Theft Act 1968 (R v Melwani [1989] Crim LR 565, CA), and also in other contexts including the Theft Act 1978. The questions for the court are: (1) whether the act was dishonest according to the standards of reasonable and honest people; and (2) whether the defendant appreciated that what he was doing was by those standards dishonest: see R v Ghosh supra; R v Woolven (1983) 77 Cr App Rep 231, CA. As to the circumstances in which the direction in R v Ghosh supra should be given to the jury see PARA 283 note 7 ante.

3 For these purposes, a person is to be treated as obtaining property if he obtains ownership, possession or control of it; and 'obtain' includes obtaining for another or enabling another to obtain or to retain: Theft Act 1968 s 15(2). As to proof that the property was obtained see Bogdal v Hall [1987] Crim LR 500, DC. If the obtaining is for another, it is immaterial that the other is not a party to the deception: R v Duru [1973] 3 All ER 715, 58 Cr App Rep 151, CA (defendant deceiving local authority into granting loans for house purchase; cheques for the purpose sent to solicitors acting for both the authority and the applicants for loans; cheques 'obtained' within the Theft Act 1968 s 15(2)).

The deception must be an effective cause of: (1) obtaining property (see the Theft Act 1968 s 15); (2) obtaining a money transfer (see s 15A (as added); and PARA 311 post); (3) obtaining a pecuniary advantage (see s 16 (as amended); and PARA 312 post); (4) obtaining services (see the Theft Act 1978 s 1 (as amended); and PARA 313 post); (5) the evasion of a liability (see s 2; and PARA 314 post); or (6) procuring the execution of a valuable security (see the Theft Act 1968 s 20(2); and PARA 317 post). This requires: (a) that as a result of the words or conduct a person was deceived (ie led to believe that a thing is true which is false: Re London and Globe Finance Corp Ltd [1903] 1 Ch 728 at 723 per Buckley J, cited with approval in DPP v Ray supra by Lord Reid and Lord Morris), and it is apparent from Metropolitan Police Comr v Charles [1977] AC 177 and R v Lambie [1982] AC 449, 73 Cr App Rep 294, HL, that it suffices for this purpose if, although the addressee does not positively believe in the truth of the representation, he is ignorant of the truth and relies on the representation; and (b) that the deception must operate on the mind of the person deceived and be a cause of the relevant thing being obtained: R v Lavery [1970] 3 All ER 432, 54 Cr App Rep 495, CA; R v Collis-Smith [1971] Crim LR 716, CA; R v Royle [1971] 3 All ER 1359, 56 Cr App Rep 131, CA; R v Kovacs [1974] 1 All ER 1236, 58 Cr App Rep 412, CA; R v King, R v Stockwell [1987] QB 547, 84 Cr App Rep 357, CA. Otherwise there will only be an attempt to commit the offence: R v Hensler (1870) 11 Cox CC 570, CCR; R v Light (1915) 84 LJBK 865, 11 Cr App Rep 111, CCA. It follows from the requirement of an effective cause that the deception must precede obtaining the property or the pecuniary advantage or procuring the execution of a valuable security: R v Collis-Smith supra. The onus of showing that the property or the pecuniary advantage or the execution of the valuable security was procured by the deception falls on the prosecution and it should normally be proved by direct evidence (R v Lavery supra; R v Tirado (1974) 59 Cr App Rep 80, CA); but the inducement need not be proved by direct evidence if the facts are such that the alleged deception would have been the only reason why the defendant obtained property belonging to another (see R v Lavery supra; R v Lambie supra). Even where the prosecutor would not have parted with his money had he been aware that the representation made to him by the defendant was false, the deception is not necessarily an effective cause of obtaining the property or securing the advantage: see R v Lucas [1949] 2 KB 226, 33 Cr App Rep 136, CCA (bookmaker, induced by false representation to accept a large bet on credit, paying out on it; the effective cause of the payment was the backing of the winning horse). On the facts in R v Lucas supra, an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 16 (as amended) might now be established. The deception does not necessarily have to be practised on the person suffering the resultant loss: R v Kovacs supra; applied in Metropolitan Police Comr v Charles supra (both decided under the Theft Act 1968 s 16). If, on the whole of the story, it can be said that the deception alleged caused the relevant thing to be obtained by the defendant, it is, or may be, irrelevant that at the final moment the victim suspected or even believed that he had been swindled: R v Miller (1992) 95 Cr App Rep 421, CA.

It is doubtful whether deception can be practised unless there is a human mind to deceive: see Davies v Flackett (1972) 116 Sol Jo 526, DC (driver avoiding payment at automatic barrier in car park); but making off without having paid as required or expected and with intent to avoid payment of the amount due is an offence under the Theft Act 1978 s 3 (see PARA 315 post). See also Re Holmes [2004] EWHC 2020 (Admin), [2005] 1 All ER 490, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 229, DC.

4 For the meaning of 'property' see the Theft Act 1968 s 4(1); and PARA 285 ante. For the meaning of 'belonging to another' see s 5(1); and PARA 289 ante. See also Etim v Hatfield [1975] Crim LR 234, DC; Levene v Pearcy [1976] Crim LR 63, DC; R v Thompson [1984] 3 All ER 565, 79 Cr App Rep 191, CA; R v Ashbee [1989] 1 WLR 109, 88 Cr App Rep 357, CA; Brady v IRC [1989] STC 178, DC. A person who obtains a bank credit by deception does not obtain property belonging to another by deception, because the property which he obtains is a new thing in action constituted by the debt now owed to him by his bank, which did not come into existence until the debt so created was owed to him by his bank, and so never belonged to anyone else: R v Preddy, R v Slade, R v Dhillon [1996] AC 815, [1996] 2 Cr App Rep 524, HL. In such a case, the appropriate offence is that of obtaining a money transfer by deception contrary to the Theft Act 1968 s 15A (as added): see PARA 311 post.

5 Ibid s 6 (see PARA 290 ante) applies for the purposes of s 15, with the necessary adaptation of the reference to appropriating, as it applies for the purposes of s 1 (see PARA 282 ante): s 15(3).

6 Ibid s 15(1). As to the proposed repeal of s 15 see PARA 309 ante. Where an offence committed by a body corporate under ss 15, 16 (as amended) (see PARA 312 post) or s 17 (see PARA 316 post) is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of any director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate, or any person who was purporting to act in any such capacity, he as well as the body corporate is guilty of that offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly; and, where the affairs of a body corporate are managed by its members, these provisions apply in relation to the acts and defaults of a member in connection with his functions of management as if he were a director of the body corporate: see s 18. Section 18 applies to offences under the Theft Act 1978 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 313 post) or s 2 (see PARA 314 post): s 5(1). See also PARA 38 ante.

An offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 15 is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a). For the extended territorial scope of obtaining property by deception in connection with acts in relation to or by means of nuclear material see the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983; and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1583.

Obtaining property by deception is a specified offence for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 1(2) (as amended) (power to search for prohibited articles): see PARA 860 post.

The facts that constitute this offence may also constitute theft: see Lawrence v Metropolitan Police Comr [1972] AC 626, 55 Cr App Rep 471, HL; DPP v Gomez [1993] AC 442, 96 Cr App Rep 359, HL.

As to the offence of having with one an article for use in connection with an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 25 when not at one's place of abode see PARA 296 ante. As to obtaining property by deception where there is an international element see PARA 1058 et seq post. As to obtaining a money transfer by deception see PARA 311 post; as to obtaining a pecuniary advantage by deception see PARA 312 post; as to obtaining services by deception see PARA 313 post; as to the evasion of liability by deception see PARA 314 post; and as to making off without payment see PARA 315 post.

7 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 See the Theft Act 1968 s 15(1); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. For sentencing guidelines in cases of obtaining property by deception see R v Barrick (1985) 81 Cr App Rep 78, CA; R v Stewart [1987] 2 All ER 383, 85 Cr App Rep 66, CA. A court may make a financial reporting order in respect of offences under the Theft Act 1968 s 15: see the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 76; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 475-476.

311. Obtaining a money transfer by deception.

A person is guilty of an offence if by any deception<sup>1</sup> he dishonestly<sup>2</sup> obtains<sup>3</sup> a money transfer for himself or another<sup>4</sup>.

A money transfer occurs when a debit<sup>5</sup> is made to one account<sup>6</sup>, and a credit<sup>7</sup> is made to another, and the credit results from the debit or the debit results from the credit<sup>8</sup>. It is immaterial whether: (1) the amount credited is the same as the amount debited; (2) the money transfer is effected on presentment of a cheque or by another method; (3) any delay occurs in the process by which the money transfer is effected; (4) any intermediate credits or debits are made in the course of the money transfer; or (5) either of the accounts is overdrawn before or after the money transfer is effected<sup>9</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>10</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>11</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'deception' see PARA 310 note 1 ante; definition applied by the Theft Act 1968 s 15B(1), (2) (s 15B added by the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 s 1(1)). As to the proposed repeal of the Theft Act 1968 s 15B (as added) see PARA 309 ante.

2 As to the meaning of 'dishonestly' see PARA 310 note 2 ante.

3 As to causation see PARA 310 note 3 ante.

4 Theft Act 1968 s 15A(1) (ss 15A, 15B added by the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 s 1(1)). As to the proposed repeal of the Theft Act 1968 s 15A (as added) see PARA 309 ante. An offence under s 15A (as added) is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a) (amended by the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 s 3(2), (3)).

5 References to a credit and to a debit are references to a credit of an amount of money and to a debit of an amount of money: Theft Act 1968 s 15A(3) (as added: see note 4 supra).

6 'Account' means an account kept with a bank, or a person carrying on a business which falls within ibid s 15B(4) (as added): s 15B(1), (3) (as added see note 4 supra). A business falls within s 15B(4) (as added) if in the course of the business money received by way of deposit is lent to others, or any other activity of the business is financed, wholly or to any material extent, out of the capital of or the interest on money received by way of deposit: see s 15B(1), (4) (s 15B as so added; and s 15B(4) amended by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order 2001, SI 2001/3649, art 1). For these purposes, references to a deposit must be read with: (1) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22; (2) any relevant order under s 22; and (3) Sch 2 (as amended), but any restriction on the meaning of deposit which arises from the identity of the person making it is to be disregarded: Theft Act 1968 s 15B(1), (4A) (s 15B as so added; and s 15B(4A) added by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order 2001, SI 2001/3649, art 1). See further FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 89. For the purposes of the Theft Act 1968 s 15B(4) (as added and amended), all the activities which a person carries on by way of business must be regarded as a single business carried on by him; and 'money' includes money expressed in a currency other than sterling or in the European currency unit (as defined in EC Council Regulation 3320/94 (OJ L350, 31.12.94, p 27) or any Community instrument replacing it: Theft Act: 1968 s 15B(1), (5) (as so added).

7 See note 5 supra.

8 Theft Act 1968 s 15A(2) (as added: see note 4 supra). A bank account is not 'credited' for these purposes until it is unconditionally credited: Re Holmes [2004] EWHC 2020 (Admin), [2005] 1 All ER 490, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 229. It is not necessary to identify which account has been debited or whether it was in credit at the time; the court is entitled to take judicial notice of invariable banking and accounting practice; in practice a money transfer cannot be made by a bank without a bank account being debited with the amount of that transfer, and in such a case that debit and the credit to the transferee account must have been causally connected: see R v Holmes supra.

9 Theft Act 1968 s 15A(4) (as added: see note 4 supra).

10 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Theft Act 1968 s 15A(5) (as added: see note 4 supra); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. See also PARA 1103 post. As to obtaining property by deception see PARA 310 ante; as to obtaining services by deception see PARA 313 post; as to the evasion of liability by deception see PARA 314 post; and as to making off without payment see PARA 315 post. A court may make a financial reporting order in respect of an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 15A (as added): see the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 76; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 475-476.

312. Obtaining pecuniary advantage by deception.

A person who by any deception<sup>1</sup> dishonestly<sup>2</sup> obtains<sup>3</sup> for himself or another any pecuniary advantage commits an offence<sup>4</sup> and is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>6</sup>. The cases where a pecuniary advantage is to be regarded as so obtained for a person are cases where: (1) he is allowed to borrow by way of overdraft<sup>7</sup>, or to take out any policy of insurance or annuity contract, or he obtains an improvement of the terms on which he is allowed to do so<sup>8</sup>; or (2) he is given the opportunity to earn remuneration or greater remuneration in an office or employment, or to win money by betting<sup>9</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'deception' has the same meaning as in the Theft Act 1968 s 15: see s 16(3); and PARA 310 note 1 ante.

2 As to the meaning of 'dishonestly' see PARA 310 note 2 ante.

3 As to causation see PARA 310 note 3 ante. The person deceived need not be the same person as the person from whom the pecuniary advantage is obtained: R v Kovacs [1974] 1 All ER 1236, 58 Cr App Rep 412, CA; approved in Metropolitan Police Comr v Charles [1977] AC 177, 63 Cr App Rep 252, HL.

4 Theft Act 1968 s 16(1). As to the proposed repeal of s 16 see PARA 309 ante. As to offences committed by a body corporate see PARA 310 note 6 ante. An offence under s 16 (as amended) is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a). As to obtaining property by deception see PARA 310 ante; as to obtaining a money transfer by deception see PARA 311 ante; as to obtaining services by deception see PARA 313 post; as to the evasion of liability by deception see PARA 314 post; and as to making off without payment see PARA 315 post.

5 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 Theft Act 1968 s 16(1); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. See also PARA 1103 post. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. A court may make a financial reporting order in respect of an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 16 (as amended): see the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 76; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 475-476.

7 A person who uses a cheque card and cheque book to run up an overdraft beyond the limits imposed by the bank, or to create an overdraft in the absence of a negotiated and agreed limit, is 'allowed to borrow by way of overdraft' for these purposes: R v Waites [1982] Crim LR 369, CA; R v Bevan (1986) 84 Cr App Rep 143, CA. See also Metropolitan Police Comr v Charles [1977] AC 177, 63 Cr App Rep 252, HL. A customer who is allowed to borrow from a bank on overdraft obtains a pecuniary advantage at the moment when the overdraft facility is granted to him without need for proof that he drew on that facility: R v Watkins [1976] 1 All ER 578.

8 See the Theft Act 1968 s 16(2)(b).

9 Ibid s 16(2)(c). 'Office or employment' does not mean that a person who by deception obtains the opportunity to earn remuneration under a contract for services, as opposed to a contract of service, cannot be convicted under s 16 (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-8 supra). The phrase is to be construed as a matter of ordinary language: R v Callender [1993] QB 303, 95 Cr App Rep 210, CA (defendant obtained accountancy work on self-employed, fee-earning basis by deception; conviction under the Theft Act 1968 s 16 (as amended) upheld because in the ordinary language of literate people he would be said to have been 'employed'). Contrast R v McNiff [1986] Crim LR 57, CA (obtaining by deception of the tenancy of a public house from a brewery was held not an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 16 (as amended) because a tenancy is not an office or employment).

309-332 Fraud

As to the prevention of fraud see PARA 332A.

310-314 Obtaining property by deception ... Evasion of liability by deception

Repealed: Fraud Act 2006 Sch 1 para 1(a), (b), Sch 3. See now PARA 309A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/313. Obtaining services by deception.

313. Obtaining services by deception.

A person who by any deception<sup>1</sup> dishonestly<sup>2</sup> obtains<sup>3</sup> services<sup>4</sup> from another is guilty of an offence<sup>5</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>6</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>7</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'deception' has the same meaning as in the Theft Act 1968 s 15 (see PARA 310 note 1 ante): Theft Act 1978 s 5(1).

2 As to the meaning of 'dishonestly' see PARA 310 note 2 ante.

3 As to causation see PARA 310 note 3 ante.

4 The services may be obtained for the defendant or another: R v Nathan [1997] Crim LR 835, CA.

It is an obtaining of services where the other is induced to confer a benefit by doing some act, or causing or permitting some act to be done, on the understanding that the benefit has been or will be paid for: Theft Act 1978 s 1(2). As to the proposed repeal of s 1 see PARA 309 ante. Without prejudice to the generality of s 1(2), it is an obtaining of services where the other is induced to make a loan, or to cause or permit a loan to be made, on the understanding that any payment (whether by way of interest or otherwise) will be or has been made in respect of the loan: s 1(3) (added by the Theft (Amendment) Act 1996 s 4(1)). The 'understanding' referred to in the Theft Act 1978 s 1(2), (3) (as amended) does not require an agreement, but there must be a mutual understanding that the benefit is conferred on the basis that it has been or will be paid for, or at least there must be a putative objective mutual understanding to this effect on the assumption that the inducement of the benefit was not dishonest: R v Sofroniou [2003] EWCA Crim 3681 at [37], [2004] QB 1218 at [37], [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 460 at [37] per May LJ. The references to payment in the Theft Act 1978 s 1(2), (3) are references to payment or payments made by or on behalf of the person obtaining the benefit to the person providing it: see R v Sofroniou supra at [37].

Even before the insertion of the Theft Act 1978 s 1(3), it was an obtaining of services to obtain a mortgage advance and credit facilities: R v Graham, R v Kansal, R v Ali, R v Marsh [1997] 1 Cr App Rep 302, CA; R v Cooke [1997] Crim LR 436, CA (overruling R v Halai [1983] Crim LR 624, CA). See also R v Cummings-John [1997] Crim LR 660, CA; R v Naviede [1997] Crim LR 662, CA. Obtaining professional services, commercial services or financial services is an obtaining of services within the Theft Act 1978 s 1 (as amended) (R v Graham, R v Kansal, R v Ali, R v Marsh supra); so is inducing a bank or similar organisation to open an account or to issue a credit card or operating a bank or similar account or using a credit card over a period provided that the benefit obtained is conferred on the understanding that an identifiable payment has or will be made for it by or on behalf of the person benefited by it to the person conferring the benefit (R v Sofroniou [2003] EWCA Crim 3681, [2004] QB 1218, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 35). See also R v Widdowson (1985) 82 Cr App Rep 314, CA (obtaining goods on hire-purchase an obtaining of services).

5 Theft Act 1978 s 1(1). For the purposes of ss 1, 2 (s 1 as amended), the Theft Act 1968 s 18 (liability of company officers for offences by the company: see PARA 310 note 6 ante) applies as it applies to s 15 (see PARA 310 ante): see the Theft Act 1978 s 5(1). An offence under s 1 (as amended) is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(b). The Theft Act 1968 s 30(1) (husband and wife: see PARA 291 ante) and s 31(1) (as amended) (effect on civil proceedings: see PARA 1477 post), so far as they are applicable in relation to the Theft Act 1978, apply as they apply in relation to the Theft Act 1968: Theft Act 1978 s 5(2).

As to obtaining property by deception see PARA 310 ante; as to obtaining a money transfer by deception see PARA 311 ante; as to obtaining a pecuniary advantage by deception see PARA 312 ante; as to the evasion of liability by deception see PARA 314 post; and as to making off without payment see PARA 315 post.

6 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

310-314 Obtaining property by deception ... Evasion of liability by deception

Repealed: Fraud Act 2006 Sch 1 para 1(a), (b), Sch 3. See now PARA 309A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/314. Evasion of liability by deception.

314. Evasion of liability by deception.

Where a person by any deception<sup>1</sup>:

- 277 (1) dishonestly<sup>2</sup> secures<sup>3</sup> the remission<sup>4</sup> of the whole or part of any existing liability<sup>5</sup> to make a payment, whether his own liability or another's<sup>6</sup>; or
- 278 (2) with intent to make a permanent default in whole or in part on any existing liability<sup>7</sup> to make a payment, or with intent to let another do so, dishonestly induces<sup>8</sup> the creditor or any person claiming payment on behalf of the creditor to wait for payment (whether or not the due date for payment is deferred) or to forgo payment<sup>9</sup>; or
- 279 (3) dishonestly obtains<sup>10</sup> any exemption from or abatement of liability to make a payment<sup>11</sup>,

he is guilty of an offence<sup>12</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>13</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>14</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'deception' has the same meaning as in the Theft Act 1968 s 15 (see PARA 310 note 1 ante): Theft Act 1978 s 5(1).

2 As to the meaning of 'dishonestly' see PARA 310 note 2 ante.

3 As to causation see PARA 310 note 3 ante.

4 An agreement to accept payment by credit card involves the remission of the payer's liability to pay: R v Jackson [1983] Crim LR 617, CA.

5 For these purposes, 'liability' means legally enforceable liability and the Theft Act 1978 s 2(1) does not apply in relation to a liability that has not been accepted or established to pay compensation for a wrongful act or omission: s 2(2). As to the proposed repeal of s 2 see PARA 309 ante. There can be an existing liability to pay even though, as in the case of a liability under an improperly executed regulated consumer credit agreement, it can only be enforced by an order of the court: R v Modupe [1991] Crim LR 530, CA.

6 Theft Act 1978 s 2(1)(a).

7 The requirement of an intent to make a permanent default is unique to the offence under ibid s 2(1)(b) (see head (2) in the text). The provisions of s 2(1)(a)-(c) (see heads (1)-(3) in the text) thus create separate offences with substantial differences in the elements of each subsection, but these differences relate principally to the different situations in which the debtor-creditor relationship has arisen, and the features common to all three offences are: (1) the use of a deception to a creditor in relation to a liability; (2) dishonesty in the use of deception; and (3) the use of deception to gain some advantage in time or money. There may be situations in which the conduct of the debtor or his agent could fall under more than one of heads (1)-(3) in the text: R v Holt [1981] 2 All ER 854 at 856, 73 Cr App Rep 96 at 99, CA, per Lawson J.

8 For these purposes, a person induced to take in payment a cheque or other security for money by way of conditional satisfaction of a pre-existing liability is to be treated not as being paid but as being induced to wait for payment: Theft Act 1978 s 2(3).

9 Ibid s 2(1)(b).

10 For these purposes, 'obtains' includes obtaining for another or enabling another to obtain: ibid s 2(4).

11 Ibid s 2(1)(c). For an example of the operation of s 2(1)(c) (see head (3) in the text) see R v Firth (1989) 91 Cr App Rep 217, CA (the defendant, a consultant at an NHS hospital, obtained exemptions from liability for charges for services for his private patients by failing to comply with his contractual duty to notify the hospital that they were private patients; the defendant was held to have obtained by deception an exemption from a liability to make a payment). See also R v Sibartie [1983] Crim LR 470, CA.

12 Theft Act 1978 s 2(1). As to the liability of company officers for offences by a company see PARA 310 note 6 ante. An offence under s 2 (see the text and notes 1-11 supra) is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(b).

13 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

14 See the Theft Act 1978 s 4 (amended by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 154(1), Sch 7 para 170). A court may make a financial reporting order in relation to an offence under the Theft Act 1978 s 2: see the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 76; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 475-476. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. As to the application of the Theft Act 1968 s 30(1) (husband and wife: see PARA 291 ante), s 31(1) (as amended) (effect on civil proceedings: see PARA 1477 post) and s 34 (as amended) (interpretation) see PARA 313 note 5 ante. As to obtaining property by deception see PARA 310 ante; as to obtaining a money transfer by deception see PARA 311 ante; as to obtaining a pecuniary advantage by deception see PARA 312 ante; as to obtaining services by deception see PARA 313 ante; and as to making off without payment see PARA 315 post.

310-314 Obtaining property by deception ... Evasion of liability by deception

Repealed: Fraud Act 2006 Sch 1 para 1(a), (b), Sch 3. See now PARA 309A.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/315. Making off without payment.

315. Making off without payment.

A person who, knowing that payment on the spot<sup>1</sup> for any goods supplied or services done<sup>2</sup> is required or expected from him, dishonestly makes off<sup>3</sup> without having paid as required or expected<sup>4</sup> and with intent to avoid payment<sup>5</sup> of the amount due is guilty of an offence<sup>6</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>7</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>8</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'payment on the spot' includes payment at the time of collecting goods on which work has been done or in respect of which service has been provided: Theft Act 1978 s 3(2).

2 Ibid s 3(1) does not apply, however, where the supply of the goods or the doing of the service is contrary to law, or where the service done is such that payment is not legally enforceable: s 3(3). See Troughton v Metropolitan Police [1987] Crim LR 138, DC (taxi driver broke away from route in breach of contract; defendant not liable for payment thereafter).

3 The words 'dishonestly makes off' should be applied in their natural meaning. 'Making off' involves a departure from the spot where payment is required; but if the defendant is stopped before passing that spot, he may be guilty of an attempt to commit the offence: R v McDavitt [1981] Crim LR 843, Crown Ct; R v Brooks (1983) 76 Cr App Rep 66, CA. As to the meaning of 'dishonestly' see PARA 283 ante. The Theft Act 1968 s 2 (see PARA 283 ante) does not apply to this offence: s 1(3).

4 He required or expected there and then: R v Aziz [1993] Crim LR 708, CA. A person does not make off without having paid as required or expected if the creditor (or his agent) has agreed that payment be postponed, even if that agreement has been procured by dishonest deception: R v Vincent [2001] EWCA Crim 295, [2001] 1 WLR 1172, [2001] 2 Cr App Rep 150.

5 'Intent to avoid payment' means an intent to avoid payment permanently: R v Allen [1985] AC 1029, 81 Cr App Rep 200, HL; and see R v Hammond [1982] Crim LR 611, Crown Ct.

6 Theft Act 1978 s 3(1).

7 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 See the Theft Act 1978 ss 3(1), 4 (amended by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 154(1), Sch 7 para 170). ### 309-332 Fraud

As to the prevention of fraud see PARA 332A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/316. False accounting.

316. False accounting.

Where a person dishonestly<sup>1</sup>, with a view to gain for himself or another or with intent to cause loss<sup>2</sup> to another:

- 280 (1) destroys, defaces, conceals or falsifies<sup>3</sup> any account or any record<sup>4</sup> or document<sup>5</sup> made or required for any accounting purpose<sup>6</sup>; or
- 281 (2) in furnishing information for any purpose produces or makes use of any account, or any such record or document, which to his knowledge is or may be misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular<sup>7</sup>,

he is guilty of an offence<sup>8</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'dishonestly' see PARA 310 note 2 ante. As to the circumstances in which the direction in R v Ghosh [1982] QB 1053, 75 Cr App Rep 154, CA, should be given see R v Atkinson [2003] EWCA Crim 3031, [2004] Crim LR 226.

2 For the meanings of 'gain' and 'loss' see PARA 308 note 1 ante. The offence of false accounting may be based on the intention to make a temporary gain: R v Eden (1971) 55 Cr App Rep 193, CA. Where, however, a document is falsified in order to postpone the enforcement of an existing obligation, obtaining the creditor's forbearance is not a 'gain' for the purposes of the Theft Act 1968 s 17: R v Golechha, R v Choraria [1989] 3 All ER 908, 90 Cr App Rep 241, CA.

It is not necessary to prove that the defendant had no legal entitlement to the property in question: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 2001) [2002] EWCA Crim 1768, [2002] 3 All ER 840, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep 131. Cf Lee Cheung Wing v R (1991) 94 Cr App Rep 355, PC (convictions for false accounting upheld because in seeking payments to which they were not entitled appellants had acted with a view to gain). Contrast the offence of blackmail: see PARA 308 note 1 ante.

3 For these purposes, a person who makes or concurs in making in an account or other document an entry which is or may be misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular, or who omits or concurs in omitting a material particular from an account or other document, is to be treated as falsifying the account or document: Theft Act 1968 s 17(2). A fraud which does not involve any entry or omission in an account or other document is not false accounting: R v Cooke [1986] AC 909 at 935, 83 Cr App Rep 339 at 357, HL, per Lord Mackay of Clashfern (British Rail steward intending to sell private catering supplies as if they were his employers'; such supplies would not show in the account).

4 The word 'record' should be given a wide meaning and includes a meter attached to a turnstile: Edwards v Toombs [1983] Crim LR 43, DC.

5 The document need not be made specifically for accounting purposes but it must be required for such purpose: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1980) [1981] 1 All ER 366, 72 Cr App Rep 60, CA. If part of a document is required for an accounting purpose and part of the document is falsified, the fact that the two parts are not the same does not exonerate the person responsible for the falsification where the document constitutes one entire document: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1980) supra. A form claiming entitlement to housing benefit which contains the only information used to calculate housing benefit is 'a document made or required for an accounting purpose': Osinuga v DPP (1998) 162 JP 120, DC (applying A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1980) supra). See also R v Sundhers [1998] Crim LR 497, CA (accounting practice held to fall outside the general experience of the jury; prosecution required to adduce evidence that insurance claim forms were documents made or required for accounting purposes). Cf R v Manning [1999] QB 980, [1998] 4 All ER 876, CA (jury is entitled to conclude that a document was required for an accounting purpose without specific evidence to that effect). Where there is a duty to complete one of a number of standard printed forms, one such form may be a document required for an accounting purpose and failure to complete such a form in respect of a transaction may constitute falsification of a document for these purposes: R v Shama [1990] 2 All ER 602, 91 Cr App Rep 138, CA.

6 There is no need for the material particular to be directly connected with the accounting purpose of the document: R v Mallett [1978] 3 All ER 10, 67 Cr App Rep 239, CA.

7 See the Theft Act 1968 s 17(1)(b).

8 See ibid s 17(1). As to the liability of company officers for offences by a company see PARA 310 note 6 ante. An offence under s 17 is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a).

9 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

10 Theft Act 1968 s 17(1); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

316 False accounting

TEXT AND NOTES--Section 17 applies generally to the falsification of accounting documents for the purpose of obtaining financial gain or causing financial loss and does not require that such gain or loss should in fact result: R v Lancaster [2010] EWCA Crim 370, [2010] All ER (D) 31 (Mar).

NOTE 3--Although the words 'misleading, false or deceptive' are contained only in the first part of s 17(2), the subsection as a whole is concerned with documents which are or might be materially misleading: R v Lancaster [2010] EWCA Crim 370, [2010] All ER (D) 31 (Mar).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/317. Suppression etc of documents.

317. Suppression etc of documents.

A person who dishonestly<sup>1</sup>, with a view to gain for himself or another or with intent to cause loss to another<sup>2</sup>, destroys, defaces or conceals any valuable security<sup>3</sup>, any will or other testamentary document or any original document of or belonging to, or filed or deposited in, any court of justice or any government department is guilty of an offence<sup>4</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>6</sup>.

A person who dishonestly, with a view to gain for himself or another or with intent to cause loss to another, by any deception<sup>7</sup> procures<sup>8</sup> the execution<sup>9</sup> of a valuable security<sup>10</sup> is guilty of an offence<sup>11</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>12</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>13</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'dishonestly' see PARA 310 note 2 ante.

2 For the meanings of 'gain' and 'loss' see PARA 308 note 1 ante. See also PARA 316 note 2 ante.

3 For these purposes, 'valuable security' means any document creating, transferring, surrendering or releasing any right to, in or over property, or authorising the payment of money or delivery of any property, or evidencing the creation, transfer, surrender or release of any such right, or the payment of money or delivery of any property, or the satisfaction of any obligation: Theft Act 1968 s 20(3). An irrevocable letter of credit is a valuable security within the meaning of s 20: R v Benstead, R v Taylor (1982) 75 Cr App Rep 276, CA.

4 See the Theft Act 1968 s 20(1).

5 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 See the Theft Act 1968 s 20(1); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. As to concealment of documents in cases of serious fraud see PARA 1093 post.

7 For these purposes, 'deception' has the same meaning as in the Theft Act 1968 s 15: see s 20(3); and PARA 310 note 1 ante.

8 For these purposes, 'procures' bears the common meaning of 'causes' or 'brings about': R v Beck [1985] 1 All ER 571, 80 Cr App Rep 355, CA. The defendant is not required to intend to procure the execution of a valuable security; it suffices that he is reckless as to this being the consequence of his deception: R v Aston, R v N'Wadiche [1998] Crim LR 498, CA.

9 For the purposes of the Theft Act 1968 s 20(2) (see the text to notes 10-11 infra), the 'execution' of a valuable security contemplates acts done to or in connection with the document, and not the giving effect to the document by carrying out the instructions which it may contain, such as the delivery of goods or the payment of money: R v Kassim [1992] 1 AC 9, 93 Cr App Rep 391, HL.

The Theft Act 1968 s 20(2) applies also in relation to the making, acceptance, indorsement, alteration, cancellation or destruction in whole or in part of a valuable security, and in relation to the signing or sealing of any paper or other material in order that it may be made or converted into, or used or dealt with as, a valuable security, as if that were the execution of a valuable security: see s 20(2). The word 'acceptance' in s 20(2) is to be given the meaning prescribed by the Bills of Exchange Act 1882 s 17 (ie the drawee's act of writing on the bill and signing his asset to the order of the drawer): R v Kassim supra. It does not merely mean 'taking into possession': see R v Nanayakkara [1987] 1 All ER 650, 84 Cr App Rep 125, CA.

In considering the application of the Theft Act 1968 s 20(2) and s 20(3) (see the text and notes 3, 7 supra) to a document, the court should approach the matter in three stages: (1) identifying what the document does; (2) in the light of that, asking whether the document falls within any part of the definition of valuable security as provided by s 20(3); and (3) if it does, asking (bearing in mind the wide terms of s 20(2)) whether, in the respect in which the document is a valuable security, it has been executed: R v King [1992] QB 20, 93 Cr App Rep 259, CA.

10 See note 2 supra. An irrevocable letter of credit is a valuable security within the Theft Act 1968 s 20(2) (see the text to notes 11-13 infra); so is a clearing house automated payment system order: R v King [1992] QB 20, 93 Cr App Rep 259, CA. A telegraphic transfer of a credit is not a valuable security within the Theft Act 1968 s 20(2): R v Manjadhria [1993] Crim LR 73, CA.

11 See the Theft Act 1968 s 20(2). An offence under s 20(2) is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(a). As to the degree of unanimity required of the jury where more than one false statement is alleged see R v Agbim [1979] Crim LR 171, CA.

12 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

13 See the Theft Act 1968 s 20(2); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 28. A court may make a financial reporting order in relation to an offence under the Theft Act 1968 s 20(2): see the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 76; and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 475-476.

318. Fraudulent practices in connection with conveyancing.

Any person disposing of property or any interest in it for money or money's worth to a purchaser, or the solicitor or agent of such a person, who with intent to defraud: (1) conceals from the purchaser any instrument or incumbrance material to the title; or (2) falsifies any pedigree upon which the title may depend in order to induce the purchaser to accept the title offered or produced, is guilty of an offence and is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both<sup>1</sup>.

A person commits an offence if in the course of proceedings relating to registration under the Land Registration Act 2002 he suppresses information with the intention of: (a) concealing a person's right or claim; or (b) substantiating a false claim<sup>2</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>4</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he dishonestly induces another: (i) to change the register<sup>5</sup> of title or cautions register; or (ii) to authorise the making of such a change<sup>6</sup>. A person commits an offence if he intentionally or recklessly makes an unauthorised change in the register of title or cautions register<sup>7</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence<sup>8</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>10</sup>.

319. Obtaining property by personation.

The personation of another for the purpose of obtaining property for some other unlawful purpose, the personation of a person acting in a particular capacity and the personation of another for the purpose of practising deception are made offences under various statutes<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Eg the Representation of the People Act 1983 ss 60, 168(1) (as amended) (see ELECTIONS AND REFERENDUMS vol 15(4) (2007 Reissue) PARAS 733, 885); the Pilotage Act 1987 s 3(8) (see SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 93 (2008) PARA 567); and the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 30 (see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 926). See also the Official Secrets Act 1920 s 1 (as amended); and PARA 491 post. ## UPDATE

309-332 Fraud

As to the prevention of fraud see PARA 332A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/320. Obtaining property by false pretences etc.

320. Obtaining property by false pretences etc.

Specific acts of obtaining sums of money, benefits, grants, subsidies, licences etc or other property by knowingly or recklessly making false statements or representations are made offences under various statutes<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Eg the Agriculture Act 1957 s 7(3) (as amended); the Agriculture Act 1967 s 69(1) (as amended) (see AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION AND MARKETING vol 1 (2008) PARAS 1080, 1344); the Docking and Nicking of Horses Act 1949 s 2(3), (4) (as amended) (see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 1086); the Riding Establishments Act 1964 s 3(2) (see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 942); the Animal Health Act 1981 s 4(1) (as amended) (see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 1043); and the Social Security Administration Act 1992 s 112 (as amended) (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 404). The constituents of the offence in each instance must be ascertained from the particular statute. In specific instances the making of false statements or provision of false information is itself an offence without there being any need to show that the statement was made or the information was provided for the purpose of obtaining any property: eg statements made in connection with betting duty (see the Betting and Gaming Duties Act 1981 s 12(2), Sch 1 para 13(3) (as amended); and LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 68 (2008) PARA 757); false statements by a prospective immigrant in course of examination by an immigration officer (see the Immigration Act 1971 s 26(1)(c) (as amended); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 144, 208); fraudulently or negligently making incorrect tax returns (see the Taxes Management Act 1970 ss 95, 97-99 (as amended); and INCOME TAXATION vol 23(1) (Reissue) PARAS 1687, 1690); false statement in connection with applications under the Licensing Act 2003 (see s 158; and LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 156); false written statements made with intent to deceive creditors of a body corporate or association (see the Theft Act 1968 s 19(1); and COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 314).

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3, see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733. Certain persons or indorsements mentioned in this paragraph are specified for the purposes of Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 37, Schs 5, 6 (meaning of 'regulator' for the purposes of imposing civil sanctions), see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 196A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/321. Corrupt transactions with agents.

321. Corrupt transactions with agents.

If:

- 282 (1) any agent<sup>1</sup> corruptly<sup>2</sup> accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gift or consideration<sup>3</sup> as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having done or forborne to do, any act in relation to his principal's<sup>4</sup> affairs<sup>5</sup> or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business<sup>6</sup>; or
- 283 (2) any person corruptly gives, or agrees to give, or offers any gift or consideration to any agent as an inducement or reward for doing or forbearing to do, or for having done or forborne to do, any act in relation to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favour or disfavour to any person in relation to his principal's affairs or business<sup>7</sup>; or
- 284 (3) any person knowingly gives to any agent, or if any agent knowingly uses with intent to deceive his principal, any receipt, account or other document in respect of which the principal is interested, and which contains any statement which is false or erroneous or defective in any material particular, and which to his knowledge is intended to mislead the principal<sup>8</sup>, such a person is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>10</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'agent' includes any person employed by or acting for another: Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1(2). A person serving under the Crown or under any corporation or any borough, county or district council, or any board of guardians, is an agent within the meaning of the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906: s 1(3) (amended by the Local Authorities etc (Miscellaneous Provision) (No 2) Order 1974, SI 1974/595, art 3 (22), Sch 1 Pt I). In determining whether a person is a servant of the Crown, the question is not whether he is employed by the Crown or employed by any body or person; instead, the question is whether the duties he performs are performed by him on behalf of the Crown, it being necessary for the Crown to exercise its functions through some human agency: R v Barrett [1976] 3 All ER 895, [1976] 1 WLR 946, CA (additional superintendent registrar of births, deaths and marriages held to be a servant of the Crown even though not appointed, paid or liable to be dismissed by the Crown). A police officer serves under the Crown: Fisher v Oldham Corpn [1930] 2 KB 364. A person serving under a local or public authority of any description (including an authority existing in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom) is an agent within the meaning of the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906: Prevention of Corruption Act 1916 s 4(2). As from a day to be appointed this provision is amended so as also to apply to a person serving under a company which in accordance with the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 is under the control of one or more local authorities: Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 4(2) (prospectively amended by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 194(1), Sch 11 para 3). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. An employee who is an inspector for his employer and a convenor of shop stewards may be an agent of his employer when acting in relation to union affairs: see Morgan v DPP [1970] 3 All ER 1053, DC. See further Secret Commissions and Bribery Prevention League (Incorporated) v Martin (1913) 48 L Jo 183.

2 'Corruptly' in the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1 (as amended) does not involve an element of dishonesty; for the purposes of s 1 (as amended), 'corruptly' is to be construed as meaning deliberately offering money or other favours, with the intention that it should operate on the mind of the person to whom it was made so as to encourage him to enter into a corrupt bargain: R v Smith [1960] 2 QB 423, [1960] 1 All ER 256, 44 Cr App Rep 55. See also R v Godden-Wood [2001] EWCA Crim 1586, [2001] Crim LR 810.

3 For these purposes, 'consideration' includes valuable consideration of any kind: Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1(2). The word is used in its legal sense and connotes the existence of some kind of contract or bargain between the parties: R v Braithwaite, R v Girdham [1983] 2 All ER 87, 77 Cr App Rep 34, CA. See further PARA 530 note 3 post.

4 For these purposes, 'principal' includes an employer: Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1(2).

5 'In relation to his principal's affairs' falls to be construed widely: R v Dickinson and De Rable (1948) 33 Cr App Rep 5 at 9, CCA; Morgan v DPP [1970] 3 All ER 1053, DC.

6 See the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1(1). It is not necessary to show that the recipient of the bribe did what the bribe was given to him to do: R v Carr [1956] 3 All ER 979n, 40 Cr App Rep 188. A bribe corruptly given may be innocently received: see R v Millray Window Cleaning Co Ltd [1962] Crim LR 99, CCA. A recipient who takes a gift knowing it is intended to be a bribe and intending to keep it enters into a corrupt bargain despite any mental reservation that he does not intend to carry out his side of the bargain: R v Mills (1978) 68 Cr App Rep 154, CA. However, if the gift is received in order to entrap the donor and the recipient does not intend to keep it, it plainly is not corrupt on the recipient's part: R v Mills supra. Contrast R v Smith [1960] 2 QB 423 at 428, 44 Cr App Rep 55 at 60-61, CCA; and see PARA 529 note 2 post.

7 See the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1(1).

8 See ibid s 1(1). It is an offence knowingly to give a false document to an agent with a view to deceiving his principal, even though the agent is not corrupted or intended to be corrupted or does not know that the document is false: Sage v Eicholz [1919] 2 KB 171. The offence under head (3) in the text applies only to documents intended to pass between a principal and a third party and does not cover documents such as trading sheets filled in by an agent for his principal, which were never intended to do so: R v Tweedie [1984] QB 729, 79 Cr App Rep 168, CA.

9 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

10 See the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1(1) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 47(2)). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140. For these purposes, it is immaterial if: (1) the principal's affairs or business have no connection with the United Kingdom and are conducted in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom; (2) the agent's functions have no connection with the United Kingdom and are carried out in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom: Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 1(4) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 108(2)). If a national of the United Kingdom or a body incorporated under the law of any part of the United Kingdom does anything in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom, and the act would, if done in the United Kingdom, constitute an offence under head (1) or head (2) supra, the act constitutes the offence concerned and proceedings for the offence may be taken in the United Kingdom: Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 109(1), (2), (3)(c). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante. A national of the United Kingdom is an individual who is a British citizen, a British overseas territories citizen, a British National (Overseas) or a British overseas citizen, a person who under the British Nationality Act 1981 is a British subject, or a British protected person within the meaning of the British Nationality Act 1981: Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 109(4) (amended by the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 s 2(3)). As to British citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 23-43; as to British overseas territories citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 44-57; as to the status of British National (Overseas) see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 63-65; as to British overseas citizenship see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 58-62; as to British subjects under the British Nationality Act 1981 see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 66-71; and as to British protected persons within the meaning of s 50(1) see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 72-76.

A prosecution for an offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 may not be instituted without the consent of the Attorney General: s 2(1) (amended by the Law Officers Act 1997 s 3(2), Schedule). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post. Every information for such an offence must be upon oath: Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 s 2(3). As from a day to be appointed a reference to an information includes a reference to a written charge: see PARA 915 post. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

As to the presumption of corruption in instances where the offence charged relates to any person employed by Her Majesty, or any government department or public body see PARA 530 ante.

A person aggrieved by a summary conviction under the Prevention of Corruption Act 1906 may appeal to the Crown Court: s 2(6) (amended by the Courts Act 1971 s 56(1), Sch 8 para 2, Table).

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/322. Cheating the public revenue.

322. Cheating the public revenue.

It is an indictable offence at common law<sup>1</sup> for a person to practise a fraud on the public revenue<sup>2</sup>. Any such offence is punishable by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court<sup>3</sup>.

1 The common law offence of cheating the public revenue was preserved by the Theft Act 1968 s 32(1)(a) and remains indictable even though statutory offences could be charged on the facts: R v Redford (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 1, CA. See also R v Mulligan [1990] STC 220, CA. The common law offence of cheating is in practice reserved for serious and unusual offences rather than conventional cases; in such cases the court should not be inhibited by any statutory provisions from imposing or upholding what would otherwise be a proper sentence: R v Mavji [1987] 2 All ER 758, 84 Cr App Rep 34, CA. The common law offence of cheating the public revenue is classified as a Group A offence within the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) (see PARA 362 post): see s 1(2)(d).

2 1 Hawk PC 322; 2 East PC 821; R v Bembridge (1783) 3 Doug KB 327; R v Bradbury, R v Edlin (1920) [1956] 2 QB 262n (affd on another point [1921] 1 KB 562, 15 Cr App Rep 76, CCA); R v Hudson [1956] 2 QB 252, 40 Cr App Rep 55, CCA. A fraud on the public revenue is indictable even though the particular fraud might not have been indictable had it been a fraud on one individual by another: R v Bembridge supra (as explained in R v Hudson supra at 260 and 60).

The offence may be committed eg by submitting to the inspector of taxes incorrect accounts and a certificate of disclosure, knowing them to be false, with intent to defraud the revenue, or eg by causing a false tax document to be delivered with such intent: see R v Hudson supra. The offence does not require any positive act of deception either by words or conduct, but may include any form of conduct (including an omission by the defendant to do what he was legally obliged to do) with intent to defraud the revenue which results in diverting money from the revenue and in depriving the revenue of money to which it is entitled: R v Mavji [1987] 2 All ER 758, 84 Cr App Rep 34, CA (conviction for cheating public revenue upheld where defendant had fraudulently failed to make VAT returns and to pay VAT due); applied in R v Redford (1988) 89 Cr App Rep 1, CA. The offence of cheating the public revenue is a 'conduct offence'; consequently the prosecution does not have to prove that the defendant caused actual loss: R v Hunt [1994] Crim LR 747, CA.

309-332 Fraud

As to the prevention of fraud see PARA 332A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/323. Winning money etc by fraud at gaming.

323. Winning money etc by fraud at gaming.

A person who, by any fraud or unlawful device or ill practice<sup>1</sup>, wins from any other person to himself, or to any other or others, any sum of money or valuable thing<sup>2</sup>: (1) in playing at or with cards, dice, tables<sup>3</sup>, or other game; or (2) in bearing a part in the stakes, wagers, or adventures; or (3) in betting on the sides or hands of those who play; or (4) in wagering<sup>4</sup> on the event of any game, sport, pastime or other exercise<sup>5</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>6</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>7</sup>.

1 Whether a particular incident in a game is a fraud, unlawful device or ill practice is a question of fact for the jury: R v Moore (1914) 10 Cr App Rep 54, CCA. The playing of the 'three card trick' is sleight of hand and does not amount to fraud, unlawful device or ill practice: R v Governor of Brixton Prison, ex p Sjoland and Metzler [1912] 3 KB 568, 77 JP 23, DC.

2 Where the victim of a card trick wrote his acceptance for the amount he had lost on a blank bill form provided by one of two confederates, and the bill was subsequently signed by that confederate as drawer, and indorsed by him and the other confederate, there was evidence on which the second confederate could be convicted of winning money in contravention of the Gaming Act 1845 s 17 (as amended): see R v Governor of Brixton Prison, ex p Stallmann [1912] 3 KB 424, DC. It is an essential ingredient of the offence that the money won should be obtained: R v Harris, R v Turner [1963] 2 QB 442, 47 Cr App Rep 125, CCA.

3 'Tables' was formerly the ordinary name for backgammon: see the Oxford English Dictionary (2nd Edn, 1989) vol XVII.

4 To place bets with a bookmaker intending to accept winnings but not to pay losses is fraudulent wagering within the Gaming Act 1845 s 17 (as amended): R v Leon [1945] KB 136, 30 Cr App Rep 120, CCA; R v Lucas, R v O'Rourke [1959] 1 All ER 438, 43 Cr App Rep 98, CCA. Attempting to get money on forged football pool coupons is attempting to win money by a fraud in wagering: see R v Butler (1954) 38 Cr App Rep 57, CCA (although the point that a transaction with a football pool might not be a wager was not taken).

5 Tossing with coins is a 'pastime' or 'exercise' if not a 'game': R v O'Connor and Brown (1881) 15 Cox CC 3, CCR. A bet over a sleight of hand or other trick does not fall within 'game, sport, pastime or other exercise': R v Hudson (1860) Bell CC 263, CCR. If several persons join together to defraud some other person, as by inducing that person by fraud to play in a game or by any other act which if done by one person is not within the mischief aimed at by the Gaming Act 1845, an indictment lies against the confederates for conspiracy to defraud: R v Bailey (1850) 4 Cox CC 390; and see also R v Hudson supra.

There must be some fraud or unlawful device or ill practice in the game, sport, pastime or exercise itself; it is not sufficient if fraud is resorted to in order to induce the prosecutor to play in the game: R v Bailey (1850) 4 Cox CC 390; R v Governor of Brixton Prison, ex p Sjoland and Metzler [1912] 3 KB 568, DC; R v Moore (1914) 10 Cr App Rep 54, CCA.

6 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

7 Gaming Act 1845 s 17 (amended by the Theft Act 1968 s 33(2), Sch 2 Pt III; and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(2)). See also LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 67 (2008) PARA 327. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

As from a day to be appointed the Gaming Act 1845 s 17 (as amended) is repealed and replaced by the Gambling Act 2005 s 42 (see PARA 324 post): ss 42, 356, Sch 17 (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

It is not necessary to state in the indictment to whom the sum of money or valuable thing belongs (R v Moss (1856) Dears & B 104 at 108, CCR, per Pollock CB), but it would appear to be necessary for the indictment to contain an allegation to defraud a particular person. However, it does not seem necessary to state the name of the game.

326. Dishonestly obtaining electronic communications services.

A person who: (1) dishonestly obtains an electronic communications service<sup>1</sup>; and (2) does so with intent to avoid payment of a charge applicable to the provision of that service, is guilty of an offence<sup>2</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>4</sup>.

1    I.e. a service consisting in, or having as its principal feature, the conveyance by means of an electronic communications network of signals, except in so far as it is a content service: see the Communications Act 2003 ss 32(2), 405(1). For these purposes, a 'content service' means so much of any service as consists in one or both of the following: (1) the provision of material with a view to its being comprised in signals conveyed by means of an electronic communications network; (2) the exercise of editorial control over the contents of signals conveyed by means of such a network: s 32(7). OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/328. Making false statement to procure passport.

328. Making false statement to procure passport.

A person who, for the purpose of procuring a passport, whether for himself or any other person, makes a statement which is to his knowledge untrue is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>1</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>2</sup>.

2 See the Criminal Justice Act 1925 s 36(1) (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 32(1); and the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 30, Schedule Pt I); the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 1(1); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 19. See also PARA 1103 post. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS VOL 92 (2010) PARA 141. As to having custody or control of a false passport see PARA 351 post. Offences involving passports have the potential to undermine the immigration control system; a custodial sentence is appropriate even for a first offence: R v Walker [1999] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 42, CA.

Where, as a result of making a false statement, a passport is in fact obtained and subsequently used, the appropriate charge may be one of obtaining property by deception contrary to the Theft Act 1968 s 15(1) (see PARA 310 ante) or of a conspiracy to commit it: R v Ashbee [1989] 1 WLR 109, 88 Cr App Rep 357, CA. If such a charge is brought, the sentence is not limited to the maximum available under the Criminal Justice Act 1925 s 36(1) (as amended): R v Ashbee supra.

Where an attempt has been made to obtain a passport by deception but no passport has been obtained, a defendant may be charged under the Criminal Justice Act 1925 s 36(1) (as amended) or under the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1(1) (see PARA 79 ante), but it is more appropriate to prefer a charge under the Criminal Justice Act 1925 s 36(1) (as amended) where no passport has been obtained: R v Bunche (1992) 96 Cr App Rep 274, CA.

Any officer or contributory may be liable under the Act for falsification of the company's books etc<sup>6</sup>.

Whether or not a company has been, or is in the course of being, wound up, if any business of a company is carried on with intent to defraud creditors of the company, every person who was knowingly a party to the carrying on of the business in that manner is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>7</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>8</sup>.

Where it is proposed to wind up a company voluntarily and a director makes a declaration of solvency without having reasonable grounds for the opinion that the company will be able to pay its debts in full, together with interest at the official rate, within such period, not exceeding 12 months from the commencement of the winding up, as may be specified in the declaration, he is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>10</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/331. Insider dealing.

331. Insider dealing.

Subject to various defences<sup>1</sup> an individual who has information as an insider<sup>2</sup> is guilty of insider dealing if, in specified circumstances<sup>3</sup>, he deals in<sup>4</sup> securities<sup>5</sup> that are price-affected securities in relation to the information<sup>6</sup>.

Subject to various defences, an individual who has information as an insider is also guilty of insider dealing if:

- 289 (1) he encourages another person to deal in securities that are (whether or not that other knows it) price-affected securities in relation to the information, knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that the dealing would take place in specified circumstances<sup>7</sup>; or
- 290 (2) he discloses the information, otherwise than in the proper performance of the functions of his employment, office or profession, to another person<sup>8</sup>.

An individual guilty of an offence of insider dealing is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>10</sup>.

Proceedings for any such offence may not be instituted in England and Wales except by or with the consent of the Secretary of State or of the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>11</sup>.

1 The Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 52 (see the text and notes 2-8 infra) has effect subject to the defences specified in s 53 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 574A et seq): see s 52(4).; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 574A et seq.

309-332 Fraud

As to the prevention of fraud see PARA 332A.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(5) FRAUD/332A. Prevention of fraud: sharing information with anti-fraud organisations.

332A. Prevention of fraud: sharing information with anti-fraud organisations.

1. Disclosure of information to prevent fraud

A public authority may, for the purposes of preventing fraud or a particular kind of fraud, disclose information as a member of a specified anti-fraud organisation or otherwise in accordance with any arrangements made by such an organisation: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 68(1). 'Public authority' means any public authority within the meaning of the Human Rights Act 1998 s 6 (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 104A.3); 'information' includes documents; 'specified' means specified by an order made by the Secretary of State; and 'an anti-fraud organisation' means any unincorporated association, body corporate or other person which enables or facilitates any sharing of information to prevent fraud or a particular kind of fraud or which has any of these functions as its purpose or one of its purposes: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 68(8). See the Serious Crime Act 2007 (Specified Anti-fraud Organisations) Order 2008, SI 2008/2353, which specifies anti-fraud organisations pursuant to the Serious Crime Act 2007 s 68(8). The information (1) may be information of any kind; and (2) may be disclosed to the specified anti-fraud organisation, any members of it or any other person to whom disclosure is permitted by the arrangements concerned: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 68(2). Disclosure under s 68 does not breach (a) any obligation of confidence owed by the public authority disclosing the information; or (b) any other restriction on the disclosure of information (however imposed) (s 68(3)), but nothing in s 68 authorises any disclosure of information which (i) contravenes the Data Protection Act 1998 (see CONFIDENCE AND DATA PROTECTION); or (ii) is prohibited by the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 Pt 1 (ss 1-25) (see PARA 506 et seq) (Serious Crime Act 2007 s 68(4)). Section 68 does not limit the circumstances in which information may be disclosed apart from s 68: s 68(7).

2. Offence for certain further disclosures of information

A person ('B') commits an offence, subject as follows, if (1) B discloses protected information which has been disclosed by a public authority (a) as a result of the public authority being a member of a specified anti-fraud organisation; or (b) otherwise in accordance with any arrangements made by such an organisation; (2) the information (i) has been so disclosed by the public authority to B; or (ii) has come into B's possession as a result (whether directly or indirectly) of such a disclosure by the public authority to another person; and (3) B knows or suspects, or has reasonable grounds for suspecting, that the information is information of the kind mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 69(1). In s 69 'protected information' means any revenue and customs information disclosed by Revenue and Customs and revealing the identity of the person to whom it relates; or any specified information disclosed by a specified public authority: s 69(5). As to 'revenue and customs information' see s 69(6). For the meaning of 'revenue and customs', 'specified information' and 'specified public authority' see s 69(7). 'Public authority' has the same meaning as in s 68 (see PARA 332A.1); and 'specified anti-fraud organisation' means any person which is a specified anti-fraud organisation for the purposes of s 68: s 69(7). Section 69(1) does not apply to a disclosure made by B (A) where B is acting (whether as an employee or otherwise) on behalf of the person to whom the information was disclosed by the public authority concerned and the disclosure by

B is to another person acting (whether as an employee or otherwise) on behalf of that person; (B) for the purposes of the detection, investigation or prosecution of an offence in the United Kingdom; (C) with the consent of the public authority concerned; or (D) in pursuance of a Community obligation or a duty imposed by an enactment; but it does apply to a disclosure made by B which does not fall within heads (A)-(D) but which (but for the offence) would have been permitted by a power conferred by an enactment: s 69(2). For the meaning of 'enactment' see s 69(7). It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under s 69 to prove that the person reasonably believed that the disclosure was lawful; or that the information had already and lawfully been made available to the public: s 69(4).

A person who commits an offence under s 69 is liable on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both; on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 70(1). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140. For further provision relating to the prosecution of the above offence see s 70(2)-(6).

3. Code of practice for disclosure of information to prevent fraud

The Secretary of State must prepare, and keep under review, a code of practice with respect to the disclosure, for the purposes of preventing fraud or a particular kind of fraud, of information by public authorities as members of specified anti-fraud organisations or otherwise in accordance with any arrangements made by such organisations: Serious Crime Act 2007 s 71(1). 'Information' and 'public authority' have the same meaning as in s 68 (see PARA 332A.1); and 'specified anti-fraud organisation' means any person which is a specified anti-fraud organisation for the purposes of s 68: s 71(6). Before preparing or altering the code, the Secretary of State must consult (1) any specified anti-fraud organisation; (2) the Information Commissioner; and (3) such other persons as the Secretary of State considers appropriate: s 71(2). A public authority must have regard to the code in (or in connection with) disclosing information, for the purposes of preventing fraud or a particular kind of fraud, as a member of a specified anti-fraud organisation or otherwise in accordance with any arrangements made by such an organisation: s 71(3). The Secretary of State must (a) lay a copy of the code, and of any alterations to it, before Parliament; and (b) from time to time publish the code as for the time being in force: s 71(5).

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(i) Introduction/333. Introduction.

(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY

(i) Introduction

333. Introduction.

The Criminal Damage Act 1971 repealed and replaced various statutes relating to damage to property, in particular most of the provisions of the Malicious Damage Act 1861<sup>1</sup>. Where it appears to the Secretary of State that a local statutory provision<sup>2</sup> is inconsistent with or has become unnecessary in consequence of the Criminal Damage Act 1971, he may, after consultation with any person appearing to him to be concerned with that provision, by order<sup>3</sup> amend that provision so as to bring it into conformity with the Act or repeal it<sup>4</sup>.

The Crime and Disorder Act 1998 has introduced an offence of racially or religiously aggravated criminal damage<sup>5</sup>.

1 Where any enactment repealed by the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 11(8), Schedule has been applied by or incorporated in any other Act, the repeal extends so as to repeal that enactment as so applied or incorporated: s 11(8). The repeal by s 11, or an order made under it (see the text to notes 2-4 infra), of any enactment relating to procedure or to the jurisdictional powers of any court does not affect the operation of that enactment in relation to offences committed before the repeal took effect or to proceedings for any such offence: s 11(11).

Certain provisions of the Malicious Damage Act 1861 were expressly saved: see the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 11(8), Schedule. Those provisions were: the Malicious Damage Act 1861 ss 35, 36 (s 35 as amended) (injuries to railway carriages etc: see PARA 344 post); s 47 (subsequently repealed by the Merchant Shipping (Registration) Act 1993 s 8(4), Sch 5); the Malicious Damage Act 1861 s 48 (subsequently repealed by the Merchant Shipping (Registration) Act 1993 Sch 5); the Malicious Damage Act 1861 s 58 (malice against owner of property unnecessary: see PARA 344 note 1 post); and s 72 (as amended) (offences committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty: see PARA 1057 note 5 post).

In addition to the repeal of many statutory offences, the common law offence of arson was abolished: see the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 11(1); and PARA 334 post.

2 For these purposes, 'local statutory provision' means a provision of a local Act, including an Act confirming a provisional order, or a provision of a public general Act passed with respect only to a particular area or a particular undertaking or a provision of an instrument made under any such local or public general Act or of an instrument in the nature of a local enactment made under any other Act: see ibid s 11(9).

3 An order so made must be made by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: ibid s 11(10). Such orders are local in nature and are not recorded in this work. As to the effect of a repeal made by order see note 1 supra.

4 See ibid s 11(9).

5 As to this offence see PARA 335 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(ii) Destroying or Damaging Property Belonging to Another/334. Destroying or damaging property.

(ii) Destroying or Damaging Property Belonging to Another

334. Destroying or damaging property.

A person who without lawful excuse<sup>1</sup> destroys<sup>2</sup> or damages<sup>3</sup> any property<sup>4</sup> belonging to another<sup>5</sup> intending to destroy or damage any such property or being reckless<sup>6</sup> as to whether any such property would be destroyed or damaged is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction<sup>7</sup> to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>8</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>9</sup>.

An offence committed by destroying or damaging property belonging to another by fire<sup>10</sup> must be charged<sup>11</sup> as arson<sup>12</sup>. A person guilty of arson<sup>13</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>14</sup> or a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum, or to both<sup>15</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'lawful excuse' see PARA 341 post.

2 'Destroy' should be given its ordinary and natural meaning: see Barnet London Borough Council v Eastern Electricity Board [1973] 2 All ER 319, [1973] 1 WLR 430, DC (decided under the Town and Country Planning Act 1962 s 29(1)(a) (repealed)).

3 Property may be damaged if it suffers permanent or temporary physical harm or permanent or temporary impairment of its use or value: Morphitis v Salmon [1990] Crim LR 48, DC; R v Whiteley (1991) 93 Cr App Rep 25, CA. If part of a machine is removed, without which it cannot work, the machine (but not the part) may be damaged because its use is impaired (R v Tacey (1821) Russ & Ry 452; R v Fisher (1865) LR 1 CCR 7, 35 LJMC 57, CCR; Getty v Antrim County Council [1950] NI 114); likewise if the horizontal bars of scaffolding are removed from the vertical parts, the scaffolding (but not the parts removed) may be damaged (Morphitis v Salmon supra). On the other hand, simply to deprive someone of the use of property, for example, by wheel-clamping his car, does not amount to damage (Stear v Scott [1992] RTR 226n, DC; Lloyd v DPP [1992] 1 All ER 982, DC; Drake v DPP [1994] Crim LR 855, DC), apparently because there is no intrusion into the integrity of the property (Drake v DPP supra). A wall may be damaged if slogans are painted on it, as may milk if water is poured into it, because its value is impaired: Roper v Knott [1898] 1 QB 868, 67 LJQB 574, DC. Grass may be damaged by trampling on it (Gayford v Chouler [1898] 1 QB 316, 67 LJQB 404, DC), and land may be damaged by tipping loads of rubbish on it (R v Henderson, R v Battley (1984) unreported, CA); such conduct impairs the utility and value of the grass or land (in the latter case the cost of removing the rubbish reduces its present value) (R v Henderson, R v Battley supra).

The test of physical harm or impairment of the property's use or value does not conclude the matter since, if the harm or impairment is minimal, it is likely to be found that there is no damage for the purposes of the Act. Since it is not necessary that the effect of what has been done should be permanent, the fact that it is rectifiable does not prevent the property being damaged. However, where it is rectifiable the amount (and any cost) of rectification are relevant factors in determining whether there is damage (see Cox v Riley (1986) 83 Cr App Rep 54, DC); if these are minimal it may be found that what has occurred is not damage. The Divisional Court has held that graffiti smeared in mud could be damage, even though it could be washed off: Roe v Kingerlee [1986] Crim LR 735, DC. Contrast A (A Juvenile) v R [1978] Crim LR 689, Crown Ct (held on appeal, acquitting the defendant, that spitting on policeman's raincoat was not damage on the facts before the court). Whether what is done to property amounts to damage under the above principles is a question of fact for the jury or magistrates: Roe v Kingerlee supra; R v Henderson, R v Battley supra; Cox v Riley supra.

Any alteration or erasure of, or addition to, a program or data held in a computer, which is made by the operation of any function of a computer, is not to be regarded as damaging any computer or computer storage medium (such as a hard disc) unless its effect on that computer or medium impairs its physical condition: Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3(6).

4 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 339 post.

5 For the meaning of 'belonging to another' see PARA 340 post. No offence is committed under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(1) (see the text to note 9 infra), however, if the defendant honestly, albeit mistakenly, believes that the property is his own; the existence of that belief negatives the necessary mens rea; whether or not that belief is reasonable is irrelevant: R v Smith [1974] QB 354, 58 Cr App Rep 320, CA. Likewise, no offence is committed where the defendant, before he inflicts damage, has asserted custody and control over the property: R v Judge (1974) 138 JP 649, CA.

6 A person acts recklessly within the meaning of the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 with respect to:

43 (1) a circumstance when he is aware of a risk that it existed or would exist;

44 (2) a result when he is aware of a risk that it would occur,

if it is, in the circumstances known to him, unreasonable to take the risk: R v G, R v R [2003] UKHL 50, [2004] 1 AC 1034, [2004] 1 Cr App Rep 237. Awareness of a risk of damage to property need not be the only or foremost risk in the defendant's mind when he takes the risk: Booth v Crown Prosecution Service [2006] EWHC 192 (Admin), [2006] All ER (D) 225 (Jan) (car damaged by defendant running on to road the result of defendant's recklessness). Intentional or reckless omission of the defendant to act to rectify an unintentional act or its consequences may amount to an intentional or reckless act: R v Miller [1983] 2 AC 161, 77 Cr App Rep 17, HL (failure to extinguish a fire started accidentally). As to omissions see PARA 6 ante.

7 As to the procedure where offences triable either way are to be tried summarily if the amount is small see PARA 1114 post; and as to the power to join in an indictment a count for an offence mentioned in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 Sch 2 column 1 (see PARA 1114 note 2 post) see PARA 1211 post.

8 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see ibid s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

9 Criminal Damage Act 1971 ss 1(1), 4(2); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 29. See also PARA 1103 post. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. An offence committed under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 is a penalty offence for the purposes of the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Pt 1 Ch 1 (ss 1-11) (as amended): see s 1 (as amended); and PARA 586 post. As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for an offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 has in his possession a firearm or imitation firearm see PARA 677 ante; and as to evidence in proceedings for an offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 see PARA 1478 post. As to the offence of causing or acting with intent to cause an explosion likely to endanger life or cause serious injury to property see the Explosive Substances Act 1883 ss 2, 3 (both as substituted; s 3 as amended); and PARAS 127-128 ante. An offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents: see PARA 474 post). For the extended scope of an offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 in connection with acts in relation to or by means of nuclear material see the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983; and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1583. An offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 may constitute an 'act of violence' to which the Aviation Security Act 1982 applies: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 331 et seq.

10 Actual damage by fire must be established but the damage need only be slight: R v Parker (1839) 9 C & P 45 (charring of floor sufficient to constitute arson); R v Russell (1842) Car & M 541 (scorching of floorboards but no part of the wood consumed by fire; insufficient for arson). Failure to extinguish a fire started accidentally may be arson: R v Miller [1983] 2 AC 161, 77 Cr App Rep 17, HL.

11 Ie notwithstanding that the common law offence of arson has been abolished: see the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(1). The Criminal Damage Act 1971 creates two separate offences of destroying or damaging property belonging to another: simple criminal damage (see s 1(1)) and arson (see s 1(1), (3)): R v Roberts, R v Taylor, R v Chapman, R v Daly [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 441, 162 JP 169, CA; R v Booth [1999] Crim LR 144, CA.

12 Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(3). This provision means that destruction or damage by fire must be charged as arson, and not simply as 'criminal damage contrary to s 1(1) plus (3)': R v Booth [1999] Crim LR 144, CA. However, 'damage by fire' and 'arson' are synonymous for this purpose; the aim of the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(3) is that the defendant should know that he is facing an allegation of damage by fire: R v Drayton [2005] EWCA Crim 2013, [2006] Crim LR 243, CA. Although it is not essential, it is good practice when charging a person with causing criminal damage by fire to use the word 'arson', partly to avoid any possible doubts and partly to ensure that it appeared on the record as arson: R v Drayton supra.

13 lie under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(1) and (3) (see the text and notes 1-12 supra).

14 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

15 Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 4(1); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 29. See also PARA 1103 post. The provision whereby the offence must be tried summarily if the amount is small, does not apply where the destruction or damage is by fire: see note 7 supra; and PARA 1103 post.

UPDATE

334 Destroying or damaging property

NOTE 3--Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3 substituted: see PARA 360. For the purposes of the Criminal Damage Act 1971 a modification of the contents of a computer is not to be regarded as damaging any computer or computer storage medium unless its effect on that computer or computer storage medium impairs its physical condition: s 10(5) (added by the Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 14 para 2).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(ii) Destroying or Damaging Property Belonging to Another/335. Racially or religiously aggravated criminal damage.

335. Racially or religiously aggravated criminal damage.

A person is guilty of an offence if he commits an offence of destroying or damaging property belonging to another otherwise than by fire<sup>1</sup>, which is racially or religiously aggravated<sup>2</sup> and he is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 14 years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>4</sup>.

1    le an offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(1): see PARA 334 ante.

2    For the meaning of 'racially or religiously aggravated' see PARA 154 ante. For the purposes of the present offence the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 28(1)(a) (as amended) (see PARA 154 head (1) post) has effect as if the person to whom the property belongs for the purposes of the Criminal Damage Act 1971 (see PARAS 339-340 post) were the victim of the offence: Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 30(3).

3    As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

4    Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 30(1) (amended by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act s 39(5)(b), (6)(b)). For an example of sentencing for the offence see R v O'Brien (Ronan Stephen) [2003] EWCA Crim 302, [2003] 2 Cr App Rep (S) 390, CA. For sentencing for racially or religiously aggravated offences generally see R v Saunders [2000] 1 Cr App Rep 458, CA; R v Morrison [2001] 1 Cr App Rep (S) 5, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(ii) Destroying or Damaging Property Belonging to Another/336. Destroying or damaging property with intent or recklessness as to endangering life.

336. Destroying or damaging property with intent or recklessness as to endangering life.

A person who without lawful excuse<sup>1</sup> destroys<sup>2</sup> or damages<sup>3</sup> any property<sup>4</sup>, whether belonging to himself or another, intending to destroy or damage any property or being reckless<sup>5</sup> as to whether any property would be destroyed or damaged, and intending by the destruction or damage to endanger the life of another or being reckless as to whether the life of another would be thereby endangered<sup>6</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>7</sup>.

An offence committed under the above provision by destroying or damaging property by fire<sup>8</sup> is to be charged<sup>9</sup> as arson<sup>10</sup>, and a person guilty of this offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>11</sup>.

1 The Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 5 (see PARA 341 post) does not apply to offences under s 1(2) (see the text and notes 2-7 infra): see s 5(1).

2 See PARA 334 note 2 ante.

3 See PARA 334 note 3 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 339 post.

5 As to intention and recklessness see PARAS 10-11 ante.

6 The defendant must have intended to endanger life, or been reckless as to whether life would be endangered, by the destruction or damaging of property which he intended or was reckless about; it is not enough merely that he intended to endanger life, or was reckless as to whether life would be endangered, by the act which caused the destruction or damage: R v Steer [1988] AC 111, (1987) 85 Cr App Rep 352, HL; applied in R v Webster, R v Warwick [1995] 2 All ER 168, [1995] 1 Cr App Rep 492, CA; R v Kelleher [2003] EWCA Crim 3525, 147 Sol Jo LB 1395. It is irrelevant that no one's life was endangered by the destruction or damage caused: R v Dudley [1989] Crim LR 57, CA; R v Parker [1993] Crim LR 856, CA. The trial of a person accused of arson, being reckless as to whether life would be endangered, must be heard by a full-time judge: R v Jones (1999) Times, 20 May, CA.

On a charge of attempted aggravated criminal damage or arson it is sufficient to establish, in addition to a specific intent to cause damage by fire, that the defendant was reckless as to whether life would thereby be endangered: A-G's Reference (No 3 of 1992) [1994] 2 All ER 121, 98 Cr App Rep 383, CA.

7 See the Criminal Damage Act 1971 ss 1(2), 4(1). As to the offence committed by a person who at the time of committing or being arrested for an offence under s 1 has in his possession a firearm or imitation firearm see PARA 677 ante. As to evidence in proceedings for an offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 see PARA 1478 post. As to the offence of causing or acting with intent to cause an explosion likely to endanger life or cause serious injury to property see the Explosive Substances Act 1883 ss 2, 3 (both as substituted; s 3 as amended); and PARAS 127-128 ante. An offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents: see PARA 474 post). For the extended scope of an offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 in connection with acts in relation to or by means of nuclear material see the Nuclear Material (Offences) Act 1983: see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1583.

Where offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(1) (see PARA 334 ante) and s 1(2) are charged as alternatives in respect of the same incident and the jury convicts on the more serious charge, the jury should be discharged from giving a verdict on the lesser charge: R v Haddock [1976] Crim LR 374, CA. As to joinder of offences see PARA 1221 post.

8 See PARA 334 notes 10-12 ante.

9 Notwithstanding that the common law offence of arson has been abolished: see the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 11(1).

10 See ibid s 1(3).

11 Ibid s 4(1). See R v Calladine (1975) Times, 3 December, CA (unwise to sentence for arson without seeing psychiatric report); R v Mitchell (1998) Times, 4 September, CA (factors to be considered in sentencing). There are four separate aggravated offences under these provisions: criminal damage with intent to endanger life; criminal damage reckless as to whether life would be endangered; arson with intent to endanger life; and arson reckless as to whether life would be endangered: R v Roberts, R v Taylor, R v Chapman, R v Daly [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 441, CA. Where an offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1(2) (see the text and notes 1-7 supra) is charged, there should be separate counts of criminal damage (or arson) with intent to endanger life and reckless criminal damage (or arson) so that, in relation to sentencing, the court has the verdict of the jury: R v Hoof (1980) 72 Cr App Rep 126, CA. An offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 1 (see the text and notes 1-7 supra) may constitute an 'act of violence' to which the Aviation Security Act 1982 applies: see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 331.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(iii) Other Offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971/337. Threats to destroy or damage property.

(iii) Other Offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971

337. Threats to destroy or damage property.

A person who without lawful excuse<sup>1</sup> makes to another a threat, intending that that other would fear it would be carried out: (1) to destroy<sup>2</sup> or damage<sup>3</sup> any property<sup>4</sup> belonging to that other<sup>5</sup> or to a third person<sup>6</sup>; or (2) to destroy or damage his own property in a way which he knows is likely to endanger the life of that other or of a third person, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>7</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>8</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'lawful excuse' see PARA 341 post. The Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 5 (see PARA 341 post) does not apply to offences under head (2) in the text: see s 5(1).

2 For the meaning of 'destroy' see PARA 334 note 2 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'damage' see PARA 334 note 3 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 339 post.

5 For the meaning of 'property belonging to another' see PARA 340 post.

6 In relation to head (1) in the text, the threat to destroy or damage property must be considered objectively. The first issue is whether a threat was made. The second issue is whether the threat, objectively considered, was capable of amounting to a threat to destroy the property of another (a question of law, for the judge in the Crown Court). The third issue is whether it was, in fact, such a threat (a question of fact, for the jury in the Crown Court): R v Cakmak, R v Cavvav, R v Talay, R v Cam, R v Karanaslan, R v Durukanoglu [2002] EWCA Crim 500, [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 158. A similar approach applies in relation to head (2) in the text: R v Cakmak, R v Cavvav, R v Talay, R v Cam, R v Karanaslan, R v Durukanoglu supra.

7 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Criminal Damage Act 1971 ss 2, 4(2); Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 29. See also PARA 1103 post. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. As to evidence see PARA 1478 post; as to bomb hoaxes see PARA 853 post; and as to threatening to contaminate or interfere with goods see PARA 819 post. An offence under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 2 is one of those specified in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 63B (as added) for the purposes of the extra-territorial jurisdiction provisions (terrorist acts abroad by United Kingdom nationals or residents: see PARA 474 post).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(iii) Other Offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971/338. Possessing something with intent to destroy or damage property.

338. Possessing something with intent to destroy or damage property.

A person who has anything in his custody or under his control<sup>1</sup> intending without lawful excuse<sup>2</sup> to use it or cause or permit<sup>3</sup> another to use it: (1) to destroy<sup>4</sup> or damage<sup>5</sup> any property<sup>6</sup> belonging to some other person<sup>7</sup>; or (2) to destroy or damage his own or the user's property in a way which he knows is likely to endanger the life<sup>8</sup> of some other person, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>10</sup>.

1 'Custody' means physical custody; and 'control' imports the notion of the power to direct what is to be done with the property in question: see Warner v Metropolitan Police Comr [1969] 2 AC 256, 52 Cr App Rep 373, HL.

2 For the meaning of 'lawful excuse' see PARA 341 post.

3 To 'cause' a user involves the exercise of a capacity to control or influence the user's acts: O'Sullivan v Truth and Sportsman Ltd (1957) 96 CLR 220, Aust HC; approved in A-G of Hong Kong v Tse Hung Lit [1986] AC 876, [1986] 3 All ER 173, PC. See also McLeod (or Houston) v Buchanan [1940] 2 All ER 179 at 187, HL, per Lord Wright; Shave v Rosner [1954] 2 QB 113, [1954] 2 All ER 280, DC; Shulton (Great Britain) Ltd v Slough Borough Council [1967] 2 QB 471, [1967] 2 All ER 137, DC. 'Cause' requires proof of an act: Price v Cromack [1975] 2 All ER 113, [1975] 1 WLR 988, DC.

'Permit' is capable of having at least two types of meaning depending on its content: a narrow meaning ('allow', 'agree to' or 'authorise') and a wider one ('fail to take reasonable steps to prevent'), its meaning in any particular offence depending on its context: Vehicle Inspectorate v Nuttall [1999] 3 All ER 833, [1999] 1 WLR 629, HL. The use of 'cause or permit' in the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 3 suggests that 'permit' in that provision bears the latter meaning. To 'permit' involves a general or particular permission; the permission may be express or implied: McLeod (or Houston) v Buchanan supra. A person cannot 'permit' unless he is in a position to forbid: Goodbarne v Buck [1940] 1 KB 771, [1940] 1 All ER 613, CA; Lloyd v Singleton [1953] 1 QB 357, [1953] 1 All ER 291, DC.

4 For the meaning of 'destroy' see PARA 334 note 2 ante.

5 For the meaning of 'damage' see PARA 334 note 3 ante.

6 For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 339 post.

7 For the meaning of 'property belonging to another' see PARA 340 post.

8 As to endangering life see PARA 336 note 6 ante.

9 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

10 See the Criminal Damage Act 1971 ss 3, 4(2); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 ss 17, 32(1), Sch 1 para 29. As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141. An intention to use the article to cause damage at any time in the future or only if it becomes necessary is sufficient mens rea: R v Buckingham (1976) 63 Cr App Rep 159, CA. As to the issue of warrants to search for things intended for use without lawful excuse to destroy or damage property see PARA 342 post; and as to evidence on proceedings for the offence see PARA 1478 post.

As to the offence of possessing an explosive substance with intent to endanger life or cause serious injury to property see the Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 3 (as substituted and amended); and PARA 128 ante. As to the offence of possessing material to be used for contaminating or interfering with goods see the Public Order Act 1986 s 38(3); and PARA 820 post.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(iii) Other Offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971/339. Meaning of 'property'.

339. Meaning of 'property'.

'Property'<sup>1</sup> means property of a tangible nature, whether real or personal, including money and: (1) including wild creatures<sup>2</sup> which have been tamed or are ordinarily kept in captivity, and any other wild creatures or their carcasses if, but only if, they have been reduced into possession which has not been lost or abandoned or are in the course of being reduced into possession; but (2) not including mushrooms<sup>3</sup> growing wild on any land or flowers, fruit or foliage of a plant<sup>4</sup> growing wild<sup>5</sup> on any land<sup>6</sup>.

1    Ie in the Criminal Damage Act 1971.

2    As to the application of the Criminal Damage Act 1971 to animals which fall within the scope of the Act see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 740 et seq; and as to the prevention of cruelty to animals see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 817 et seq. As to destroying fish see AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES vol 1(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 841.

3    For these purposes, 'mushroom' includes any fungus: ibid s 10(1).

4    For these purposes, 'plant' includes any shrub or tree: ibid s 10(1).

5    Although wild plants are excluded from the Criminal Damage Act 1971, provision for the prevention of damage to them may be covered by byelaws made under legislation relating to the protection of the countryside: see eg the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949 s 90 (as amended); and OPEN SPACES AND COUNTRYSIDE vol 78 (2010) PARA 648. Certain wild plants are protected for the purposes of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and a person who intentionally picks, uproots or destroys such plants commits an offence: see s 13, Sch 8; and AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION AND MARKETING vol 1 (2008) PARA 1032.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(iii) Other Offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971/340. Meaning of 'belonging to another'.

340. Meaning of 'belonging to another'.

Property is to be treated as belonging to any person: (1) having the custody or control<sup>1</sup> of it; (2) having in it any proprietary right or interest, not being an equitable interest arising only from an agreement to transfer or grant an interest; or (3) having a charge on it<sup>2</sup>. Where property is subject to a trust, the persons to whom it belongs are to be so treated as including any person having a right to enforce the trust<sup>3</sup>. Property of a corporation sole is to be so treated as belonging to the corporation notwithstanding a vacancy in the corporation<sup>4</sup>.

1 As to custody and control see PARA 338 note 1 ante.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(iii) Other Offences under the Criminal Damage Act 1971/341. Meaning of 'lawful excuse'.

341. Meaning of 'lawful excuse'.

A person charged with a specified offence<sup>1</sup> under the Criminal Damage Act 1971 is to be treated as having a lawful excuse, whether or not he would otherwise be so treated for the purposes of the Act:

- 291 (1) if at the time of the act or acts alleged to constitute the offence he believed<sup>2</sup> that the person or persons whom he believed to be entitled to consent to the destruction or damage to the property<sup>3</sup> in question had so consented, or would have so consented to it if he or they had known of the destruction or damage and its circumstances<sup>4</sup>; or
- 292 (2) if he destroyed or damaged or threatened to destroy or damage the property in question, or intended<sup>5</sup> to use or cause or permit the use of something to destroy or damage it, in order to protect property belonging to himself or another or a right or interest in property<sup>6</sup> which was or which he believed to be vested in himself or another, and at the time of the act or acts alleged to constitute the offence he believed: (a) that the property, right or interest was in immediate need of protection; and (b) that the means of protection adopted or proposed to be adopted were or would be reasonable having regard to all the circumstances<sup>7</sup>.

1 The Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 5 (see the text and notes 2-7 infra) applies to any offence under s 1(1) (see PARA 334 ante), to any offence under s 2 (see PARA 337 ante) other than one involving a threat by the person charged to destroy or damage property in a way which he knows is likely to endanger the life of another, or to any offence under s 3 (see PARA 338 ante) other than one involving an intent by the person charged to use or cause or permit the use of something in his custody or under his control so to destroy or damage property: s 5(1). Section 5 is not to be construed, however, as casting doubt on any defence recognised by law as a defence to criminal charges: s 5(5). As to general defences recognised by law see PARA 16 et seq ante.

A person who damages property in the belief that he has the consent of God to do so does not have a lawful excuse because such a belief does not constitute a defence recognised by English law: Blake v DPP [1993] Crim LR 586, DC. See also Hipperson v DPP [1996] CLY 1445, DC. Nor does a motorist have a lawful excuse if he damages a wheel clamp to free his car, having parked on property with knowledge of the risk of being clamped, since his conduct does not fall within any recognised defence: Lloyd v DPP [1992] 1 All ER 982, DC; applied in R v Mitchell (Carl) [2003] EWCA Crim 2188, [2004] RTR 224.

342. Warrant to search for goods used to inflict criminal damage.

If it is made to appear by information on oath before a justice of the peace that there is reasonable cause to believe that any person has in his custody<sup>1</sup> or under his control<sup>1</sup> or on his premises anything which there is reasonable cause to believe has been used or is intended for use without lawful excuse to destroy or damage property belonging to another<sup>2</sup> or to destroy or damage any property in a way likely to endanger the life of another, the justice may grant a warrant authorising any constable to search for and seize that thing<sup>3</sup>. A constable who is so authorised to search premises for anything, may enter (if need be by force) and search the premises accordingly and may seize anything which he believes to have been so used or to be intended to be so used<sup>4</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(6) CRIMINAL DAMAGE TO PROPERTY/(iv) Related Offences/344. Obstructing railways.

(iv) Related Offences

344. Obstructing railways.

Any person who unlawfully and maliciously<sup>1</sup>: (1) puts, places, casts or throws upon or across any railway any wood, stone or other matter or thing; or (2) takes up, removes or displaces any rail, sleeper, or other matter or thing belonging to any railway; or (3) turns, moves, or diverts any points or other machinery belonging to any railway; or (4) makes or shows, hides or removes, any signal or light on or near to any railway; or (5) does or causes to be done any other matter or thing, with intent to obstruct, upset, overthrow, injure, or destroy any engine, tender, carriage or truck using the railway<sup>2</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>3</sup>.

Any person who, by any unlawful act<sup>4</sup>, or by any wilful omission or neglect<sup>5</sup>, obstructs or causes to be obstructed any engine or carriage using any railway, or who aids or assists therein is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>6</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>7</sup>.

1 The term 'maliciously' means wilfully or intentionally and without lawful excuse: R v Solanke [1969] 3 All ER 1383, [1970] 1 WLR 1, CA (stated in relation to the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 16 (as substituted) but equally applicable, it is submitted, to the present offence). Malice may also be constituted by a wilful act performed mischievously or recklessly: see R v Holroyd (1841) 2 Mood & R 339; R v Upton, R v Gutteridge (1851) 5 Cox CC 298; R v Welch (1875) 1 QBD 23, CCR; Re Borrowes [1900] 2 IR 593. The precise meaning of the term depends on the context in which it is used: see PARA 8 note 4 ante. If an act which constitutes an offence occurs in a manner unintended and unforeseen, the defendant is guilty of the offence: see PARA 12 ante. As to drawing inferences about the intention or foresight of the defendant see PARA 1366 post.

Malice in its legal import does not necessitate spite or ill-will: see Bromage v Prosser (1825) 4 B & C 247; M'Pherson v Daniels (1829) 10 B & C 263 at 268 per Littledale J; Roper v Knott [1898] 1 QB 868. It is not a necessary ingredient of offences against the Malicious Damage Act 1861 that the act charged should have been committed from malice conceived against the owner of the property in respect of which the offence is committed: see s 58. See also R v Newill (1836) 1 Mood CC 458; R v Davies (1858) 1 F & F 69.

In an appropriate case, a claim of right made in good faith will negative malice: see R v James (1837) 8 C & P 131; R v Matthews, R v Twigg (1876) 14 Cox CC 5; R v Twose (1879) 14 Cox CC 327; Leyson v Williams (1890) 54 JP 631, DC; R v Clemens [1898] 1 QB 556, CCR; Heaven v Crutchley (1903) 68 JP 53, DC; R v Rutter (1908) 1 Cr App Rep 174, CCA; R v Dyer (1952) 36 Cr App Rep 155, CCA. However, the extent of the damage must be reasonably related to the right which is asserted: see R v Clemens supra; Heaven v Crutchley supra.

2 Ie whether a public or a private railway: O'Gorman v Sweet (1890) 54 JP 663, DC.

3 See the Malicious Damage Act 1861 s 35 (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 83(3), Sch 10 Pt I); the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1(1); and the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a).

4 For these purposes, 'any unlawful act' includes each of the matters expressly mentioned in the Malicious Damage Act 1861 s 35 (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-3 supra): R v Hadfield (1870) LR 1 CCR 253; R v Hardy (1871) LR 1 CCR 278.

5 To be guilty of wilful neglect the defendant must know that his conduct involves the risk of an obstruction to the railway unless he takes reasonable care and yet deliberately fall short of exercising such care: R v Gittins [1982] RTR 363, CA, applying R v Sheppard [1981] AC 394, 72 Cr App Rep 82, HL. See also A-G's Reference (No 3 of 2003) [2004] EWCA Crim 868, [2005] QB 73, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 366.

6 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

A person who, otherwise than by accident, leaves on a railway line any substance likely to cause an obstruction commits the offence even though his object may not have been to create an obstruction but merely to give the railway employees the trouble of removing the substance: R v Holroyd (1841) 2 Mood & R 339. The offence is committed even though the line has not been opened to the public and even if no actual obstruction took place: see R v Bradford (1860) 8 Cox CC 309, CCR; R v Gatenby [1960] Crim LR 195. The obstruction contemplated is not confined to physical obstruction; a person who improperly goes on a railway line and by raising his arms induces a driver to slow down commits the offence: R v Hardy (1871) LR 1 CCR 278. Similarly, the offence is committed where a train is caused to slow down by the unlawful alteration of signals: R v Hadfield (1870) LR 1 CCR 253. As to the offence of trespassing on the railway see the Railway Regulation Act 1840 s 16 (as amended); and RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 407. ### 345. Sale of aerosol paint to children.

A person commits an offence if he sells an aerosol paint container<sup>1</sup> to a person under the age of 16<sup>2</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>3</sup>. It is a defence for a person charged with such an offence in respect of a sale to prove that he took all reasonable steps to determine the purchaser's age, and he reasonably believed that the purchaser was not under the age of 16<sup>4</sup>. Further, it is a defence for a person charged with such an offence in respect of a sale effected by another person to prove that he (the defendant) took all reasonable steps to avoid the commission of an offence<sup>5</sup>.

It is the duty of every local weights and measures authority<sup>6</sup>: (1) to consider, at least once in every period of 12 months, the extent to which it is appropriate for the authority to carry out in its area a programme of enforcement action in relation to the above provisions<sup>7</sup>; and (2) to the extent that it considers it appropriate to do so, to carry out such a programme<sup>8</sup>. For these purposes, a programme of enforcement action is a programme involving all or any of the following: (a) the bringing of prosecutions in respect of offences<sup>9</sup>; (b) the investigation of complaints in respect of alleged offences; and (c) the taking of other measures intended to reduce the incidence of offences<sup>10</sup>.

1 'Aerosol paint container' means a device which contains paint stored under pressure and is designed to permit the release of the paint as a spray: Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 s 54(2).

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3, see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733. Certain persons or indorsements mentioned in this paragraph are specified for the purposes of Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 37, Schs 5, 6 (meaning of 'regulator' for the purposes of imposing civil sanctions), see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 196A.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/ (7) FORGERY/346. Meanings of 'false' and 'instrument'.

(7) FORGERY

346. Meanings of 'false' and 'instrument'.

For the purposes of the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981, 'instrument' means:

- 293 (1) any document, whether of a formal or informal character<sup>1</sup>;
- 294 (2) any stamp<sup>2</sup> issued or sold by a postal operator<sup>3</sup>;
- 295 (3) any Inland Revenue stamp<sup>4</sup>; and
- 296 (4) any disc, tape, sound track or other device on or in which information is recorded or stored by mechanical, electronic or other means<sup>5</sup>.

A currency note<sup>6</sup> is not, however, an instrument<sup>7</sup>.

For these purposes, an instrument is false:

- 297 (a) if it purports<sup>8</sup> to have been made<sup>9</sup> in the form in which it is made by a person who did not in fact make it in that form<sup>10</sup>;
- 298 (b) if it purports to have been made in the form in which it is made on the authority of a person who did not in fact authorise its making in that form<sup>11</sup>;
- 299 (c) if it purports to have been made in the terms in which it is made by a person who did not in fact make it in those terms<sup>12</sup>;
- 300 (d) if it purports to have been made in the terms in which it is made on the authority of a person who did not in fact authorise its making in those terms<sup>13</sup>;
- 301 (e) if it purports to have been altered in any respect by a person who did not in fact alter it in that respect<sup>14</sup>;
- 302 (f) if it purports to have been altered in any respect on the authority of a person who did not in fact authorise the alteration in that respect<sup>15</sup>;
- 303 (g) if it purports to have been made or altered on a date on which, or at a place at which, or otherwise in circumstances<sup>16</sup> in which, it was not in fact made or altered<sup>17</sup>; or
- 304 (h) if it purports to have been made or altered by an existing person but he did not in fact exist<sup>18</sup>.

1 Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 8(1)(a).

2 A mark denoting payment of postage which a postal operator authorises to be used instead of an adhesive stamp is to be treated for these purposes as if it were a stamp issued by the postal operator concerned: ibid s 8(3) (amended by the Postal Services Act 2000 (Consequential Modifications No 1) Order 2001, SI 2001/1149, art 3, Sch 1 para 50(1), (3)). 'Postal operator' has the same meaning as in the Postal Services Act 2000 (see s 125(1); and POST OFFICE vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 10 et seq): Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 8(3A) (added by the Postal Services Act 2000 (Consequential Modifications No 1) Order 2001, SI 2001/1149, Sch 1 para 50(1), (4)).

3 Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 8(1)(b) (amended by the Postal Services Act 2000 (Consequential Modifications No 1) Order 2001, SI 2001/1149, Sch 1 para 50(1), (2)).

4 Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 8(1)(c). For these purposes, 'Inland Revenue stamp' means a stamp as defined in the Stamp Duties Management Act 1891 s 27: Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 8(4). See STAMP DUTIES AND STAMP DUTY RESERVE TAX vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1106.

5 Ibid s 8(1)(d). Electronic impulses keyed in in the course of computer 'hacking' are not a 'device' within the meaning of s 8(1)(d) (see head (4) in the text), nor is the user segment of the databank; and information, such as a customer identification number and password, which is received, held for a moment while checking takes place and then expunged is not 'recorded and stored' within s 8(1)(d): R v Gold, R v Schifreen [1987] QB 1116, [1987] 3 All ER 618, CA; affd [1988] AC 1063, [1988] 2 All ER 186, HL. The practice of computer 'hacking', which was held to be outside the scope of the offence of forgery in R v Gold; R v Schifreen, is now covered by new offences created by the Computer Misuse Act 1990: see PARA 358 et seq post.

6 For the meaning of 'currency note' see PARA 544 note 2 ante.

7 Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 8(2).

8 The consistent use of the word 'purports' throughout ibid s 9(1)(a)-(h) (see the text and notes 10-18 infra) imports a requirement that for an instrument to be false it must tell a lie about itself: R v More [1987] 3 All ER 825 at 830, [1987] 1 WLR 1578 at 1585, HL, per Lord Ackner.

9 A person is to be treated for these purposes as making a false instrument if he alters an instrument so as to make it false in any respect, whether or not it is false in some other respect apart from that alteration: Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 9(2).

10 Ibid s 9(1)(a). Where documents which purport to have been made by a company come into existence after the company has been wound up, the documents are false within the meaning of s 9(1)(a): R v Lack (1987) 84 Cr App Rep 342, CA.

11 Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 9(1)(b).

12 Ibid s 9(1)(c).

13 Ibid s 9(1)(d). A cheque signed on behalf of a company by various unknown individuals with no connection to the company, and without any authority to sign cheques on its behalf, is a 'false instrument' for these purposes: see R v Atunwa [2006] EWCA Crim 673, [2006] All ER (D) 133 (Mar).

14 Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 9(1)(e).

15 Ibid s 9(1)(f).

16 The words 'otherwise in circumstances' in ibid s 9(1)(g) (see head (g) in the text) clearly include circumstances directly related to the making of the instrument, eg the presence of witnesses, but they have also been held to include cases where the falsity relates to some past fact required to exist before an instrument could be 'properly made or altered'; if that fact did not exist, the instrument will tell a lie about itself because it will say that it was made in circumstances which do not exist: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 2000) [2001] 1 WLR 331, [2001] 1 Cr App Rep 218, CA, applying (and interpreting) R v Donnelly [1984] 1 WLR 1017 at 1019, 79 Cr App Rep 76 at 78, CA (valuation certificate stating that jewellery had been examined; the jewellery did not exist and the certificate was a sham to defraud insurers; certificate was a false instrument); approved in R v Jeraj [1994] Crim LR 595, CA (bank manager signed document to the effect that he had received a letter of credit (when he had not, because it was non-existent) and had indorsed it; document a false instrument).

17 Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 9(1)(g).

18 Ibid s 9(1)(h). A withdrawal form, signed in a false name by a person who has opened a building society account in that name, is not a false instrument within the meaning of s 9(1)(h): R v More [1987] 3 All ER 825, [1987] 1 WLR 1578, HL.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/ (7) FORGERY/347. Forgery.

347. Forgery.

If a person makes<sup>1</sup> a false instrument<sup>2</sup>, with the intention that he or another will use it to induce somebody to accept it as genuine, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to his own or any other person's prejudice<sup>3</sup>, he is guilty of forgery<sup>4</sup> and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>6</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'make a false instrument' see PARA 346 note 9 ante.

2 For the meanings of 'false' and 'instrument' see PARA 346 ante.

3 An intention that somebody should be induced to accept the instrument as genuine is not sufficient; there must also be an intention to induce the recipient to act or omit to act to his own or another person's prejudice: R v Tobierre [1986] 1 All ER 346, 82 Cr App Rep 212, CA (decided under the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 3 (see PARA 349 post)); R v Garcia [1988] Crim LR 115, CA. See also R v Campbell (1985) 80 Cr App Rep 47, CA. The intentions must exist when the defendant makes the false instrument: R v Ondhia [1998] 2 Cr App Rep 150, CA.

For the purposes of this offence, and of the offences described in PARAS 348-351 post, an act or omission intended to be induced is to a person's prejudice if, and only if, it is one which, if it occurs: (1) will result (a) in his temporary or permanent loss of property; or (b) in his being deprived of an opportunity to earn remuneration or greater remuneration; or (c) in his being deprived of an opportunity to gain a financial advantage otherwise than by way of remuneration; or (2) will result in somebody being given an opportunity (a) to earn remuneration or greater remuneration from him; or (b) to gain a financial advantage from him otherwise than by way of remuneration; or (3) will be the result of his having accepted a false instrument as genuine, or a copy of a false instrument as a copy of a genuine one, in connection with his performance of any duty: Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 10(1). For these purposes, 'loss' includes not getting what one might get as well as parting with what one has: s 10(5). An act which a person has an enforceable duty to do and an omission to do an act which a person is not entitled to do are to be disregarded for these purposes: s 10(2).

References to inducing somebody to accept a false instrument as genuine, or a copy of a false instrument as a copy of a genuine one, include references to inducing a machine to respond to the instrument or copy as if it were a genuine instrument or, as the case may be, a copy of a genuine one: s 10(3). Where s 10(3) applies, the act or omission intended to be induced by the machine responding to the instrument or copy is to be treated as an act or omission to a person's prejudice: s 10(4).

Dishonesty is not an element of the offence: R v Campbell (1984) 80 Cr App Rep 47, CA; Horsev v Hutchings (1984) Times, 8 November, DC. It follows, for example, that it is irrelevant that the defendant believed that he was legally entitled to a gain which he intended to make as a result of falsifying the instrument. Indeed, it is not a defence in itself that the defendant might have actually been entitled to have the property transferred to him if he had made a true claim (but not if he made a false statement). If, as would normally be the case, the maker of a false instrument is proved to have had the two intentions referred to above he can be convicted of forgery: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 2001) [2002] EWCA Crim 1768, [2002] 3 All ER 840, [2003] 1 Cr App Rep 131.

4 Computer 'hacking' does not constitute forgery: see R v Gold, R v Schifreen [1987] QB 1116, [1987] 3 All ER 618, CA (affd [1988] AC 1063, [1988] 2 All ER 186, HL); and see PARA 346 note 5 ante.

The Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 abolished the offence of forgery at common law for all purposes not relating to offences committed before 28 October 1981: see ss 13, 33.

5 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 See the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 ss 1, 6(1)-(3). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140. 3 By analogy with the interpretation of the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 1 (see PARA 347 ante) and s 3 (see PARA 349 post), the defendant must have the intent that he or another will use the copy of the false instrument to induce somebody to accept it as a copy of a genuine instrument, and the intent to induce that person by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to his own or any other person's prejudice. For the meanings of 'induce' and 'prejudice' see PARA 347 note 3 ante.

350. Using a copy of a false instrument.

If a person uses a copy of an instrument which is, and which he knows or believes to be, a false instrument<sup>1</sup>, with the intention of inducing somebody to accept it as a copy of a genuine instrument, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to his own or any other person's prejudice<sup>2</sup>, he is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>3</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>4</sup>.

1 For the meanings of 'false' and 'instrument' see PARA 346 ante.

2 By analogy with the interpretation of the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 1 (see PARA 347 ante) and s 3 (see PARA 349 ante), the defendant must have the intent that he or another will use the copy of the false instrument to induce somebody to accept it as a copy of a genuine instrument, and the intent to induce that person by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to his own or any other person's prejudice. For the meanings of 'induce' and 'prejudice' see PARA 347 note 3 ante.

3 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/ (7) FORGERY/351. Money orders, share certificates, passports etc.

351. Money orders, share certificates, passports etc.

If a person:

- 305 (1) has in his custody or under his control<sup>1</sup> a specified instrument<sup>2</sup> which is, and which he knows or believes to be, false<sup>3</sup>, with the intention that he or another will use it to induce<sup>4</sup> somebody to accept it as genuine, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to his own or any other person's prejudice<sup>5</sup>; or
- 306 (2) has in his custody or under his control, without lawful authority or excuse, a specified instrument which is, and which he knows or believes to be, false<sup>6</sup>; or
- 307 (3) makes or has in his custody or under his control a machine or implement, or paper or any other material, which to his knowledge is or has been specially designed or adapted for the making of a specified instrument, with the intention that he or another will make a specified instrument which is false and that he or another will use the instrument to induce somebody to accept it as genuine, and by reason of so accepting it to do or not to do some act to his own or any other person's prejudice<sup>7</sup>; or
- 308 (4) makes or has in his custody or under his control any such machine, implement, paper or material, without lawful authority or excuse<sup>8</sup>, he is guilty of an offence and liable:

- 309 (a) in the case of an offence under heads (1) and (3) above, on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>9</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>10</sup>;
- 310 (b) in the case of an offence under heads (2) and (4) above, on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>11</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>12</sup>.

1 'Custody' means physical custody; and 'control' imports the notion of the power to direct what is to be done with the property in question: see Warner v Metropolitan Police Comr [1969] 2 AC 256, 52 Cr App Rep 373, HL.

2 The instruments to which the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 5 (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-8 infra) applies are: (1) money orders; (2) postal orders; (3) United Kingdom postage stamps; (4) Inland Revenue stamps; (5) share certificates; (6) cheques and other bills of exchange; (7) travellers' cheques; (8) bankers' drafts; (9) promissory notes; (10) cheque cards; (11) debit cards; (12) credit cards; (13) certified copies relating to an entry in a register of births, adoptions, marriages, civil partnerships or deaths and issued by the Registrar General, the Registrar General for Northern Ireland, a registration officer or a person lawfully authorised to issue certified copies relating to such entries; and (14) certificates relating to entries in such registers: s 5(5) (amended by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 88(1)-(3); the Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc) Act 2004 s 3(1)-(3); the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 261(1), Sch 27 para 67; and the Identity Cards Act 2006 s 44(2), Sch 2). For these purposes, 'share certificate' means an instrument entitling or evidencing the title of a person to a share or interest in any public stock, annuity, fund or debt of any government or state, including a state which forms part of another state, or in any stock, fund or debt of a body, whether corporate or unincorporated, established in the United Kingdom or elsewhere: see the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 5(6).

Section 5 (as amended) also applies to an instrument if it is a monetary instrument specified for these purposes by an order made by the Secretary of State: s 5(7) (s 5(7), (8) added by the Crime (International Co-operation) Act 2003 s 88(1), (3)). The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 5(8) (as so added).

3 For the meaning of 'false' see PARA 346 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'induce' see PARA 347 note 3 ante.

5 Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 s 5(1). For the meaning of 'prejudice' see PARA 347 note 3 ante. An allegation of an offence contrary to s 5(1) probably amounts to or includes (expressly or by necessary implication) an allegation of an offence contrary to s 5(2) (see the text and note 6 infra) for the purposes of the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 6(3) (see PARA 1335 post) but it is advisable to charge the two offences in separate counts: R v Fitzgerald [2003] EWCA Crim 576 at [16]-[17], [2003] 2 Cr App Rep 269 at [16]-[17] per Pill LJ.

352. Powers of search, forfeiture and seizure.

If it appears to a justice of the peace, from information given to him on oath, that there is reasonable cause to believe that a person has in his custody or under his control<sup>1</sup>:

- 311 (1) any thing which he or another has used, or intends to use, for the making of any false instrument<sup>2</sup> or copy of a false instrument in contravention of the provisions<sup>3</sup> relating to forgery or copying a false instrument<sup>2</sup>; or
- 312 (2) any false instrument or copy of a false instrument which he or another has used, or intends to use, in contravention of the provisions<sup>4</sup> relating to using a false instrument or using a copy of a false instrument<sup>5</sup>; or
- 313 (3) any thing custody or control of which without lawful authority or excuse is an offence under the provisions<sup>6</sup> relating to offences in connection with specified instruments<sup>7</sup>, the justice may issue a warrant authorising a constable to search for and to seize the object in question, and for that purpose to enter any premises specified in the warrant<sup>8</sup>.

At any time after the seizure of any object suspected of falling within any of heads (1) to (3) above (whether the seizure was effected by virtue of a warrant or otherwise), a constable may apply to a magistrates' court for an order with respect to the object; and the court, if it is satisfied both that the object in fact falls within any of heads (1) to (3) above and that it is conducive to the public interest to do so, may make such order as it thinks fit for the forfeiture of the object and its subsequent destruction or disposal<sup>9</sup>. The court by or before which a person is convicted of an offence under the above provisions<sup>10</sup> may order any object shown to the satisfaction of the court to relate to the offence to be forfeited and either destroyed or dealt with in such other manner as the court may order<sup>11</sup>. The court may not, however, order any object to be forfeited under these provisions where a person claiming to be the owner of or otherwise interested in it applies to be heard by the court, unless an opportunity has been given to him to show cause why the order should not be made<sup>12</sup>.

353. Indictments under the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981.

In an indictment for an offence against the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 with reference to any instrument, it is sufficient to refer to the instrument, by any name or designation by which it is usually known, or by its purport, without setting out any copy or facsimile of the whole or part of it<sup>1</sup>.

It is usual in an indictment for forgery, where the facts so justify, to allege in one count a forgery and in a second count using a false instrument<sup>2</sup>.

1 Where the specific offence with which a defendant is charged in an indictment is one created by or under an enactment, the statement of offence must contain a reference to the section of the Act creating the offence; and the particulars must disclose the essential elements of the offence: see the Indictment Rules 1971, SI 1971/1253, r 6; and PARA 1218 post.

2 As to the offences of using false instruments and copies of false instruments see PARAS 349-350 ante.

- 316 (3) fraudulently mutilates any stamp, with intent that any use should be made of any part of such stamp<sup>5</sup>;
- 317 (4) fraudulently fixes or places upon any material or upon any stamp, any stamp or part of a stamp which, whether fraudulently or not, has been cut, torn or in any way removed from any other material, or out of or from any other stamp<sup>6</sup>;
- 318 (5) fraudulently erases or otherwise really or apparently removes from any stamped material any name, sum, date or other matter or thing whatsoever written on it, with the intent that any use should be made of the stamp upon such material<sup>7</sup>;
- 319 (6) knowingly sells or exposes for sale or utters or uses any stamp which has been fraudulently printed or impressed from a genuine die<sup>8</sup>;
- 320 (7) knowingly, and without lawful excuse<sup>9</sup>, the proof whereof lies on the person accused, has in his possession any stamp which has been fraudulently printed or impressed from a genuine die, or any stamp or part of a stamp which has been fraudulently cut, torn or otherwise removed from any material, or any stamp which has been fraudulently mutilated, or any stamped material out of which any name, sum, date or other matter or thing has been fraudulently erased or otherwise either really or apparently removed<sup>10</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>11</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or to both<sup>12</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'material' includes every sort of material upon which words or figures can be expressed: see the Stamp Duties Management Act 1891 s 27.

2 Ibid s 13(3). For these purposes, 'die' includes any plate, type, tool or implement used under the direction of the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs for expressing or denoting any duty, or rate of duty, or the fact that any duty or rate of duty or penalty has been paid, or that an instrument is duly stamped or is not chargeable with any duty, or for denoting any fee, and also any part of any such plate, type, tool or implement: s 27; Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (7). The Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs are appointed under the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 1 and have taken over the functions of the former Inland Revenue and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise: see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 900 et seq; INCOME TAXATION. See also VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 13. All statutory and other references to the Commissioners of Customs and Excise and their officers are, in so far as it is appropriate, now to be taken as references to the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and their officers: see s 50(1), (2), (7).

3 For these purposes, 'stamp' means a stamp impressed by means of a die as well as an adhesive stamp for denoting any duty or fee: see the Stamp Duties Management Act 1891 s 27.

7 Ibid s 13(7).

8 Ibid s 13(8) (amended by the Forgery Act 1913 s 20, Schedule). As to uttering forged stamps by delivery to an employee for forwarding see R v Collicott (1812) Russ & Ry 212, CCR. A person who sells a forged stamp commits an offence even though the stamp when sold bore a cancellation mark: R v Lowden [1914] 1 KB 144, 9 Cr App Rep 195, CCA.

9 Possession of a die to illustrate a stamp catalogue does not constitute a lawful excuse: Dickins v Gill [1896] 2 QB 310, DC. The innocent purchase of fictitious social security stamps from an unauthorised source does not constitute a lawful excuse for the possession of such stamps: Winkle v Wiltshire [1951] 1 KB 684, [1951] 1 All ER 479, DC.

10 Stamp Duties Management Act 1891 s 13(9) (amended by the Forgery Act 1913 Schedule).

11 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(1), Sch 1 (s 32(1) prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(1)); and MAGISTRATES vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARAS 655-656), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 282(4) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/ (7) FORGERY/355. Forgery etc of proof marks on gunbarrels.

355. Forgery etc of proof marks on gunbarrels.

Any person who:

- 321 (1) fraudulently erases, obliterates or defaces, or fraudulently causes to be erased, obliterated or defaced, from any barrel<sup>1</sup> any mark<sup>2</sup> of any stamp<sup>3</sup> or part of a stamp provided or used by either of the two companies<sup>4</sup> for marking barrels<sup>5</sup>; or
- 322 (2) knowingly<sup>6</sup> forges or counterfeits any stamp, or any part of a stamp, provided or used by either of the two companies for marking any barrel<sup>7</sup>; or
- 323 (3) knowingly sells or parts with the possession of any such forged or counterfeit stamp or part of a stamp<sup>8</sup>; or
- 324 (4) knowingly marks any barrel with any such forged or counterfeit stamp, or with any part of any such forged or counterfeit stamp<sup>9</sup>; or
- 325 (5) knowingly makes up any barrel so marked<sup>10</sup>; or
- 326 (6) knowingly has in his possession or sells or parts with the possession of any barrel so marked<sup>11</sup>; or
- 327 (7) knowingly forges, counterfeits, or by any means whatsoever produces upon any barrel an imitation of any mark of any stamp, or any part of a stamp, provided or used by either of the two companies for marking any barrel<sup>12</sup>; or
- 328 (8) knowingly sells or parts with the possession of any such mark<sup>13</sup>; or
- 329 (9) knowingly transposes or removes from any barrel to any other barrel, or from one part of a barrel to another part of the same barrel, any mark of any stamp, or any part of a stamp, provided or used by either of the two companies for marking any barrel<sup>14</sup>; or
- 330 (10) knowingly has in his possession or sells or parts with the possession of any mark so transposed or removed<sup>15</sup>; or
- 331 (11) knowingly has in his possession any such forged or counterfeit stamp or part of a stamp, or any such forged or counterfeit mark or imitation of a mark, or any such transposed or removed mark<sup>16</sup>; or
- 332 (12) knowingly cuts or severs from any barrel any mark of any stamp provided or used by either of the two companies for stamping any barrel, with intent that the mark be placed upon or joined or affixed to any other barrel or any other part of the barrel from which the mark is cut or severed<sup>17</sup>; or
- 333 (13) knowingly places upon or joins or affixes to any barrel any such mark so cut or severed<sup>18</sup>; or
- 334 (14) with intent to defraud uses any genuine stamp, or part of a genuine stamp, provided or used by either of the two companies for marking any barrel<sup>19</sup>, commits an offence and is liable:

- 335 (a) in the case of head (1) above, on conviction on indictment to a fine, or on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>20</sup>; and
- 336 (b) in the case of heads (2) to (14) above, on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years<sup>21</sup>.

2 'Mark' includes every mark and other impression of and made with any stamp (see note 3 infra), or produced by any other means, on any metal whatsoever: Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868 s 4.

3 'Stamp' includes every stamp, die, punch, tool and other instrument by means of which any mark can be made on any metal whatsoever: see ibid s 4.

4 'The two companies' means and includes the Gunmakers Company of the City of London and the Birmingham Proof House: see ibid s 4.

5 Ibid s 122(6) (amended by the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1978 s 8(2), Sch 4).

6 Where the person charged with an offence under the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868 s 121(1) (as amended) (see heads (2)-(14) in the text) was at the time when the offence is alleged to have been committed a gunmaker, a gunbarrel maker, or a maker of or dealer in small arms or barrels (or any part of such), knowledge on his part is presumed until the contrary is shown: s 121(1) proviso (s 121(1) amended by the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1978 s 8(1), Sch 3 para 10).

7 Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868 s 121(1)(1) (as amended: see note 6 supra). Any person who, with respect to any stamp or mark, or any part of any stamp or mark of a foreign country, registered by either of the two companies, or with respect to any forgery, counterfeit or imitation of any such stamp or mark or part, or with respect to any barrel marked with any such forged or counterfeited stamp or part of a stamp, knowingly commits any such offence as is expressed in s 121(1) (as amended) (see heads 2-14 in the text) with respect to any stamp or any part of any stamp provided or used by either of the two companies for marking any barrel, or with respect to any mark of any such stamp or part of a stamp, is guilty of an offence: s 121(1)(14) (as so amended).

Any person who, with respect to: (1) any stamp or part of a stamp provided or used at any time by an official proof house of any foreign state for impressing upon any barrel a mark which is or at any time was a convention proof mark; (2) any mark of any such stamp or part of a stamp; (3) any forgery, counterfeit or imitation of any such stamp or part of a stamp or of any such mark; or (4) any barrel marked with any such forged or counterfeit stamp or part of a stamp, knowingly does anything which would be an offence under s 121(1) (as amended) (see heads 2-14 in the text) if done with respect to any stamp or any part of a stamp provided or used at any time by either of the two companies for marking any barrel, or with respect to any mark of any such stamp or part of a stamp, is guilty of an offence under s 121(1) (as amended): s 121(2) (added by the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1978 Sch 3 para 10(2)). For these purposes, 'convention proof mark' means any mark, sign or character of which a specimen is for the time being included in the register of proof marks published by the Permanent International Commission established under the Convention for the Reciprocal Recognition of Proof Marks on Small Arms (Brussels, 1 July 1969, TS 84 (1980); Cmd 8063), not being a mark, sign or character included in it as a United Kingdom proof mark: Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868 s 129(1) (substituted by the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1978 s 1(1), Sch 1).

8 Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868 s 121(1)(2) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

9 Ibid s 121(1)(3) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

10 Ibid s 121(1)(4) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

11 Ibid s 121(1)(5) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

12 Ibid s 121(1)(6) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

13 Ibid s 121(1)(7) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

14 Ibid s 121(1)(8) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

15 Ibid s 121(1)(9) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

16 Ibid s 121(1)(10) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

17 Ibid s 121(1)(11) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

18 Ibid s 121(1)(12) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

19 Ibid s 121(1)(13) (as amended: see note 6 supra).

20 See ibid s 122 (amended by the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1978 Sch 3 para 11). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) para 140.

21 See the Gun Barrel Proof Act 1868 s 121(1) (as amended: see note 6 supra). As to the counterfeiting etc of dies and marks under the Hallmarking Act 1973 see s 6 (as amended); and TRADE MARKS AND TRADE NAMES vol 48 (2007 Reissue) PARA 481.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/ (7) FORGERY/356. Destroying etc register of births etc.

356. Destroying etc register of births etc.

Any person who:

- 337 (1) unlawfully destroys, defaces or injures, or causes or permits to be destroyed, defaced or injured, any register of births, baptisms, marriages, deaths or burials authorised or required by law to be kept in England or Northern Ireland, or any part of any such register, or any certified copy of any such register or any part of it;
- 338 (2) knowingly and unlawfully inserts or causes or permits to be inserted in any such register, or in any certified copy of it, any false entry of any matter relating to any birth, baptism, marriage, death or burial;
- 339 (3) knowingly and unlawfully gives any false certificate relating to any birth, baptism, marriage, death or burial;
- 340 (4) certifies any writing to be a copy or extract from any such register, knowing such writing, or the part of the register from which the copy or extract is so given, to be false in any material particular;
- 341 (5) offers, utters, disposes of or puts off any such register, entry, certified copy or certificate, knowing the same to be false;
- 342 (6) offers, utters, disposes of or puts off any copy of any entry in any such register, knowing such entry to be false, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> See the Forgery Act 1861 s 36 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1892; the Statute Law Revision (No 2) Act 1893; and the Forgery Act 1913 s 20, Schedule Pt 1); the Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1; and the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a). As to the register of births etc see REGISTRATION CONCERNING THE INDIVIDUAL vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 504 et seq.

As to the correction of errors notwithstanding the Forgery Act 1861 s 36 (as amended) see ECCLESIASTICAL LAW vol 14 PARAS 1034, 1116. It is not necessary that the entry should be made with intent to defraud, nor is it necessary (where the matter relates to a marriage register) that the marriage should be valid: R v Asplin (1873) 12 Cox CC 391. Making an entry in a register (eg as a witness to a marriage) in the name of another constitutes making a false entry: R v Asplin supra (where it was held that it was immaterial that a witness signing a marriage register in a false name was a third witness). Any person who wilfully inserts or causes to be inserted in a register or record any false entry of any birth or baptism, naming or dedication, death or burial, or marriage, or wilfully gives any false certificate, or certifies any writing to be an extract from any register or record knowing the register or record to be false in any part is guilty of an offence: see the Non-parochial Registers Act 1840 s 8 (amended by the Forgery Act 1913 s 20, Schedule; and the Criminal Damage Act 1971 s 11(8), Schedule Pt 1); and the Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a).

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/ (7) FORGERY/357. Making false entries in copies of registers sent to registrars.

357. Making false entries in copies of registers sent to registrars.

Any person who:

- 343 (1) knowingly and wilfully inserts or causes or permits to be inserted in any copy of any register directed or required by law to be transmitted to any registrar or other officer any false entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage or burial;
- 344 (2) knowingly and wilfully signs or verifies any copy of any such register so directed or required to be transmitted, which copy is false in any part of it, knowing the same to be false;
- 345 (3) unlawfully destroys, defaces or injures or for any fraudulent purpose takes from its place of deposit or conceals any such copy of any register, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>1</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(8) COMPUTER MISUSE/358. Unauthorised access to computer material.

(8) COMPUTER MISUSE

358. Unauthorised access to computer material.

A person is guilty of an offence if: (1) he causes a computer to perform any function with intent<sup>1</sup> to secure access to any program or data held in any computer<sup>2</sup>; (2) the access he intends to secure is unauthorised<sup>3</sup>; and (3) he knows at the time when he causes the computer to perform the function that that is the case<sup>4</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale or to both<sup>5</sup>.

It is immaterial whether any act or other event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence occurred in England and Wales<sup>6</sup>, or whether the defendant was in England and Wales at the time of the act or event<sup>7</sup>. However, at least one significant link<sup>8</sup> with domestic jurisdiction must exist in the circumstances of the case for the offence to be committed<sup>9</sup>. It is also immaterial to guilt whether or not the defendant was a British citizen at the time of any act, omission or other event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence<sup>10</sup>.

A search warrant may be issued by a circuit judge where he is satisfied by information on oath given by a constable that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the above offence has been or is about to be committed and that evidence that such an offence has been or is about to be committed is on those premises<sup>11</sup>; and the provisions creating the offence are deemed to have effect without prejudice to any enactment relating to powers of inspection, search or seizure<sup>12</sup>.

1 The intended access need not be directed at any particular program or data, a program or data of any particular kind, or a program or data held in any particular computer: Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1(2).

2 A person secures access to any program or data held in a computer if, by causing a computer to perform any function, he: (1) alters or erases the program or data; (2) copies or moves it to another storage medium or to a different location in the storage medium where it is held; (3) uses it; or (4) has it output from the computer in which it is held (whether by having it displayed or in any other manner): ibid s 17(2). A person uses a program if the function he causes the computer to perform causes the program to be executed or is itself a function of the program: s 17(3). References to any program or data held in a computer include references to a program or data held in a disc or other or other removable storage medium for the time being in a computer: s 17(6).

3 Access of any kind by any person to any program held in a computer is unauthorised if he is not himself entitled to control access of the kind in question to the program or data, and he does not have consent to access by him of the kind in question to the program or data from any person so entitled: see ibid s 17(5). Authority to access one piece of data is not authority to access other pieces of data 'of the same kind' which the person concerned does not have authority to access: R v Bow Street Metropolitan Stipendiary Magistrate, ex p Government of the United States of America (No 2) [2000] 2 AC 216, [1999] 4 All ER 1, HL (disapproving a dictum by Astill J in DPP v Bignell [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 1 at 12-13).

4 Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1(1). The Computer Misuse Act 1990 does not require the use of one computer to gain unauthorised access to another: A-G's Reference (No 1 of 1991) [1993] QB 94, [1992] 3 All ER 897, CA. A person does not commit an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 if he accesses a computer at an authorised level but for an unauthorised purpose: DPP v Bignell [1998] 1 Cr App Rep 1, DC. Proceedings for an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 may be brought within a six-month period from the date on which evidence sufficient in the prosecutor's opinion to warrant the proceedings came to his knowledge: see s 11(2), (4), (5); and Morgans v DPP [1999] 1 WLR 968 (revsd on different grounds [2001] 1 AC 315, [2000] 2 All ER 522, HL). No such proceedings may be brought by virtue of the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 more than three years after the commission of the offence: s 11(3).

5 Ibid s 1(3). As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS VOL 92 (2010) PARA 142.

6 Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 4(6).

7 Ibid s 4(1)(a).

8 Either of the following is a significant link with the jurisdiction of England and Wales: (1) that the defendant was in England and Wales when he did the act which caused the computer to perform the function; or (2) that any computer containing any program or data to which the defendant secured or intended to secure unauthorised access by doing that act was in England and Wales at that time: ibid s 5(1), (2).

9 Ibid s 4(2).

10 See ibid s 9(1), (2)(a).

11 Ibid s 14(1). As from a day to be appointed such a warrant may also be issued by a district judge: see s 14(1) (prospectively amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 65, Sch 4 para 7). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. See also PARA 879 post.

The power conferred by the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 14(1) does not extend to authorising a search for material of the kinds mentioned in the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 9(2) (privileged, excluded and special procedure material: see PARA 874 post): Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 14(2). A warrant under s 14 (as amended) may authorise persons to accompany any constable executing the warrant; and it remains in force for three months from the date of its issue: s 14(3) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 174, Sch 16 para 7). In executing a warrant issued under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 14 (as amended) a constable may seize an article if he reasonably believes that it is evidence that an offence under s 1 has been or is about to be committed: s 14(4). For these purposes, 'premises' includes land, buildings, movable structures, vehicles, vessels, aircraft and hovercraft: s 14(5).

12 See ibid s 10 (amended by the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 s 162(1)).

UPDATE

358-361 Computer misuse

A person is guilty of an offence if he makes, adapts, supplies or offers to supply any article intending it to be used to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 (see PARA 358) or s 3 (see PARA 360): s 3A(1) (s 3A added by the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 37). A person is guilty of an offence if he supplies or offers to supply any article believing that it is likely to be used to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 or s 3: s 3A(2). A person is guilty of an offence if he obtains any article with a view to its being supplied for use to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under s 1 or s 3: s 3A(3). In s 3A 'article' includes any program or data held in electronic form: s 3A(4). A person guilty of an offence under s 3A is liable (1) on summary conviction in England and Wales, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both; and (2) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both: s 3A(5).

As to transitional and saving provision see the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 38 (amended by the Serious Crime Act 2007 s 61(4)).

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(8) COMPUTER MISUSE/359. Unauthorised access with intent to commit etc further offences.

359. Unauthorised access with intent to commit etc further offences.

A person who commits an offence of unauthorised access<sup>1</sup> with intent to commit an offence ('a relevant offence') for which the sentence is fixed by law<sup>2</sup> or for which an offender of 21 or over (not previously convicted) may be sentenced<sup>3</sup> to a term of five years' imprisonment<sup>4</sup>, or with intent to facilitate the commission of such an offence (whether by himself or another), is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years<sup>5</sup> or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>6</sup>. It is immaterial whether the further offence is to be committed on the same occasion as the unauthorised access or on some future occasion<sup>7</sup>, and a person may be guilty of this offence even though the facts are such that the commission of the further offence is impossible<sup>8</sup>.

Provisions concerning jurisdiction are the same as those for the offence of unauthorised access<sup>9</sup>, with the exception that there is no need for a significant link to exist for the commission of the unauthorised access offence to be established in proof of an allegation to that effect in proceedings for an offence of unauthorised access with intent to commit or facilitate an offence<sup>10</sup>. Where a 'significant link'<sup>11</sup> does in fact exist in the case of an offence of unauthorised access and commission of that offence is alleged in proceedings for an offence of unauthorised access with intent to commit (or facilitate) an offence, the provisions relating to the latter offence apply as if anything which the defendant intended to do (or facilitate) in any place outside England and Wales which would be such an offence if it took place in England and Wales were the offence in question<sup>12</sup>, provided that what the defendant intended to do (or facilitate) would involve the commission of an offence under the law of the country where the whole or part of it was intended to take place<sup>13</sup>.

A person who on trial on indictment is found not guilty of this offence may nevertheless be convicted on the lesser charge of unauthorised access if he could have been found guilty of that offence within the time limits<sup>14</sup> applicable to such proceedings<sup>15</sup>.

1    I.e. the offence under Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1: see PARA 358 ante.

2    See ibid s 2(2)(a).

3    Or might be sentenced but for the restrictions imposed by the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 33 (as amended; prospectively amended): see PARA 1114 post.

4    See the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 2(2)(b). As from a day to be appointed s 2(2)(b) applies to a person who has attained the age of 18 with no previous convictions: see s 2(2)(b) (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 s 74, Sch 7 Pt II para 98). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5    As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6    Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 2(1), (5). The intent is not limited to an intent to commit the further offence in England and Wales: see the text to note 8 infra. As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

12 Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 4(4).

13 Ibid s 8(1). This condition is to be taken to be satisfied unless not later than rules of court may provide the defence serves on the prosecution a notice: (1) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the relevant conduct (ie what the defendant intended to do), the condition is not in its opinion satisfied; (2) showing the grounds for that opinion; and (3) requiring the prosecution to show that it is satisfied: s 8(5), (6)(a). However, the court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied without the prior service of such a notice: s 8(7). In the Crown Court the question whether the condition is satisfied is to be decided by the judge alone: s 8(9).

UPDATE

358-361 Computer misuse

A person is guilty of an offence if he makes, adapts, supplies or offers to supply any article intending it to be used to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 (see PARA 358) or s 3 (see PARA 360): s 3A(1) (s 3A added by the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 37). A person is guilty of an offence if he supplies or offers to supply any article believing that it is likely to be used to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 or s 3: s 3A(2). A person is guilty of an offence if he obtains any article with a view to its being supplied for use to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under s 1 or s 3: s 3A(3). In s 3A 'article' includes any program or data held in electronic form: s 3A(4). A person guilty of an offence under s 3A is liable (1) on summary conviction in England and Wales, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both; and (2) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both: s 3A(5).

As to transitional and saving provision see the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 38 (amended by the Serious Crime Act 2007 s 61(4)).

359 Unauthorised access with intent to commit etc further offences

TEXT AND NOTES 5, 6--A person guilty of an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 2 is now liable (1) on summary conviction in England and Wales, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both; and (2) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both: s 2(5) (substituted by the Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 14 para 17).

TEXT AND NOTES 14, 15--Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 12 repealed: Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 14 para 24.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/4. OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(8) COMPUTER MISUSE/360. Unauthorised modification of computer material.

360. Unauthorised modification of computer material.

A person who does any act which causes an unauthorised<sup>1</sup> modification<sup>2</sup> of the contents of any computer, and at the time when he does the act has the requisite intent<sup>3</sup> and the requisite knowledge<sup>4</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>5</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>6</sup>.

It is immaterial whether any act or other event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence occurred in England and Wales<sup>7</sup>, or whether the defendant was in England and Wales at the time of the act or event<sup>8</sup>. However, at least one significant link<sup>9</sup> with domestic jurisdiction must exist in the circumstances of the case for the offence to be committed<sup>10</sup>. It is also immaterial to guilt whether or not the defendant was a British citizen at the time of any act, omission or event proof of which is required for conviction of the offence<sup>11</sup>.

A person who is found not guilty of this offence, or any attempt to commit such an offence, may nevertheless be convicted on the lesser charge of unauthorised access if he could have been found guilty of that offence within the time limits applicable to such proceedings<sup>12</sup>.

1 Modification is 'unauthorised' if the person whose act causes it is not entitled to determine whether the modification should be made, and he does not have consent to the modification from any person who is so entitled: Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 17(8). See DPP v Lennon [2006] All ER (D) 147 (May).

2 A modification of the contents of a computer takes place if, by the operation of any function of the computer concerned or any other computer, any program or data held in the computer is altered or erased, or any program or data is added to its contents: see the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 17(7). As to the meaning of 'program or data held in a computer' see PARA 358 note 2 ante. Any act which contributes towards causing a modification is regarded as causing it: see s 17(7).

3 I.e. an intent to cause a modification of the contents of any computer and by so doing to impair its operation, or to prevent or hinder access to any program or data held in it, or impair the operation of any such program or the reliability of any such data: ibid s 3(2). For the purposes of s 3(2), a computer's reliability is impaired if it is used to record information as deriving from a particular person when it is, in fact, derived from someone else: Zezev and Yarimaka v Governor of Brixton Prison [2002] EWHC 589 (Admin), [2002] 2 Cr App Rep 515. Although the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3(2) seems to require a double intent, Zezev and Yarimaka v Governor of Brixton Prison supra indicates that, where the modification necessarily impairs reliability, the two intents become telescoped; according to this decision, where a computer is caused to record information which shows that it came from one person, when it came from another, as where an e-mail is sent which purports to come from X when in fact it comes from Y, that causes an unauthorised modification of the computer's contents, and there is an intent to cause that modification and thereby to impair the reliability of the data in the computer: see Zezev and Yarimaka v Governor of Brixton Prison supra.

The requisite intent need not be directed at any particular computer, any particular program or data or a program or data of any particular kind, or any particular modification or a modification of any particular kind: Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3(3).

It is immaterial whether an unauthorised modification or any intended effect of it is, or is intended to be, permanent or merely temporary: s 3(5).

4 I.e. knowledge that any modification he intends to cause is unauthorised: ibid s 3(4).

5 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

6 See the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3(1), (7). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

7 See ibid s 4(6).

8 Ibid s 4(1).

9 For the purposes of this offence, either of the following is a significant link with the English and Welsh jurisdiction: (1) that the defendant was in England and Wales when he did the act which caused the unauthorised modification; or (2) that the unauthorised modification took place in England and Wales: ibid s 5(1), (3).

10 Ibid s 4(2). As to the extent to which external law is relevant see s 8 (amended by the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 s 9(1), (2), Sch 1 para 6).

11 See the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 9(1), (2)(a).

12 See ibid s 12; and PARA 1338 post.

UPDATE

358-361 Computer misuse

A person is guilty of an offence if he makes, adapts, supplies or offers to supply any article intending it to be used to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 (see PARA 358) or s 3 (see PARA 360): s 3A(1) (s 3A added by the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 37). A person is guilty of an offence if he supplies or offers to supply any article believing that it is likely to be used to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 1 or s 3: s 3A(2). A person is guilty of an offence if he obtains any article with a view to its being supplied for use to commit, or to assist in the commission of, an offence under s 1 or s 3: s 3A(3). In s 3A 'article' includes any program or data held in electronic form: s 3A(4). A person guilty of an offence under s 3A is liable (1) on summary conviction in England and Wales, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both; and (2) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both: s 3A(5).

As to transitional and saving provision see the Police and Justice Act 2006 s 38 (amended by the Serious Crime Act 2007 s 61(4)).

360 Unauthorised modification of computer material

TEXT AND NOTES 1-6--Replaced. A person is guilty of an offence if (1) he does any unauthorised act in relation to a computer; (2) at the time when he does the act he knows that it is unauthorised; and (3) the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3(2) or (3) applies: s 3(1) (s 3 substituted by the Police and Justice Act s 36, and amended by the Serious Crime Act 2007 s 61(3)). The Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3(2) applies if the person intends by doing the act to impair the operation of any computer, to prevent or hinder access to any program or data held in any computer, or to impair the operation of any such program or the reliability of any such data: s 3(2). Section 3(3) applies if the person is reckless as to whether the act will do any of the things mentioned in s 3(2): s 3(3). An act done in relation to a computer is unauthorised if the person doing the act, or causing it to be done is not himself a person who has responsibility for the computer and is entitled to determine whether the act may be done and does not have consent to the act from any such person; for these purposes 'act' includes a series of acts: Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 17(8) (s 17(8) substituted by the Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 14 para 29(4)).

The intention referred to in the Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 3(2) above, or the recklessness referred to in s 3(3), need not relate to any particular computer, any particular program or data, or a program or data of any particular kind: s 3(4). In s 3, (a) a reference to doing an act includes a reference to causing an act to be done; (b) 'act' includes a series of acts; and (c) a reference to impairing, preventing or hindering something includes a reference to doing so temporarily: s 3(5). A person guilty of an offence under s 3 is liable (i) on summary conviction in England and Wales, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both and (ii) on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both: s 3(6).

Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 17(7) repealed: Police and Justice Act 2006 Sch 14 para 29(3).

See R v Waters [2007] All ER (D) 298 (Jan), CA (value of computer surveillance operation to defendant valid factor in determining length of sentence).

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(8) COMPUTER MISUSE/361. Inchoate offences related to computer misuse offences.

361. Inchoate offences related to computer misuse offences.

On a charge of conspiracy to commit a computer misuse offence<sup>1</sup>, it is immaterial to the defendant's guilt where any person became a party to the conspiracy, and whether any act, omission or event occurred in England and Wales<sup>2</sup>. On a charge of attempting to commit the offence of unauthorised modification of computer material<sup>3</sup>, it is immaterial to guilt where the attempt was made, and whether it had an effect in England and Wales<sup>4</sup>. On a charge of incitement to commit a computer misuse offence, the question where the incitement took place is immaterial to the defendant's guilt<sup>5</sup>.

If any act done by a person in England and Wales would amount to the offence of incitement to commit an offence under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 but for the fact that what he had in view would not be an offence triable in England and Wales, what he had in view is to be treated as such an offence for the purposes of any charge of incitement brought in respect of that act; and any such charge is to be accordingly triable in England and Wales<sup>6</sup>.

1    Ie under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 ss 1-3: see PARAS 358-360 ante.

2    Ibid ss 4(6), 6(1).

3    Ie under ibid s 3: see PARA 360 ante.

4    Ibid ss 4(6), 6(2).

5    Ibid ss 4(6), 6(3). As to the territorial scope of inchoate offences related to offences under external law corresponding to offences under the Computer Misuse Act 1990 see s 7(4) (see the text and note 6 infra); and PARAS 68, 79 ante.

6    See ibid s 7(4). A person is guilty of an offence triable by virtue of s 7(4) or by virtue of the Criminal Attempts Act 1981 s 1A (as added) (see PARA 79 ante) only if what he had in view would involve the commission of an offence under the law in force where the whole or any part of it was intended to take place: Computer Misuse Act 1990 s 8(3). This condition is to be taken to be satisfied unless not later than rules of court may provide the defence serves on the prosecution a notice: (1) stating that, on the facts as alleged with respect to the relevant conduct (ie what the defendant intended to do), the condition is not in its opinion satisfied; (2) showing the grounds for that opinion; and (3) requiring the prosecution to show that it is satisfied: s 8(5), (6)(c). However, the court, if it thinks fit, may permit the defence to require the prosecution to show that the condition is satisfied without the prior service of such a notice: s 8(7). In the Crown Court the question whether the condition is satisfied is to be decided by the judge alone: s 8(9).

OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY/(9) JURISDICTION/362. Jurisdiction in relation to theft, offences of fraud and certain other offences.

(9) JURISDICTION

362. Jurisdiction in relation to theft, offences of fraud and certain other offences.

A person may be guilty of an offence, known as a Group A offence<sup>1</sup>, if any of the events which are relevant events<sup>2</sup> in relation to the offence occurred in England and Wales<sup>3</sup>. The Group A offences are: (1) an offence under the Theft Act 1968 of theft<sup>4</sup>, obtaining property by deception<sup>5</sup>, obtaining a money transfer by deception<sup>6</sup>, obtaining pecuniary advantage by deception<sup>7</sup>, false accounting<sup>8</sup>, false statements by company directors etc<sup>9</sup>, procuring execution of valuable security by deception<sup>10</sup>, blackmail<sup>11</sup>, handling stolen goods<sup>12</sup>, and retaining wrongful credits<sup>13</sup>; (2) an offence under the Theft Act 1978 of obtaining services by deception<sup>14</sup> and of evading liability by deception<sup>15</sup>; (3) an offence under the Forgery and Counterfeiting Act 1981 of forgery<sup>16</sup>, copying a false instrument<sup>17</sup>, using a false instrument<sup>18</sup>, using a copy of a false instrument<sup>19</sup>, and offences relating to money orders, share certificates, passports etc<sup>20</sup>, offences of counterfeiting notes and coins<sup>21</sup>, offences of passing etc counterfeit notes and coins<sup>22</sup>, offences involving the custody or control of counterfeit notes and coins<sup>23</sup>, offences involving the making or custody or control of counterfeiting materials and implements<sup>24</sup>, an offence against the prohibition of importation of counterfeit notes and coins<sup>25</sup>, an offence against the prohibition of exportation of counterfeit notes and coins<sup>26</sup>; (4) the common law offence of cheating in relation to the public revenue<sup>27</sup>.

A person may be guilty of a Group A offence whether or not he was a British citizen<sup>28</sup> at any material time<sup>29</sup>, and whether or not he was in England and Wales at any such time<sup>30</sup>.

For the purpose of determining whether a relevant event has occurred within England and Wales in relation to a Group A offence, there is an obtaining of property in England and Wales if the property is either despatched from or received at a place in England and Wales<sup>31</sup>; and there is a communication in England and Wales of any information, instruction, request, demand or other matter if it is sent by any means from a place in England and Wales to a place elsewhere, or from a place elsewhere to a place in England and Wales<sup>32</sup>.

1 See the Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 1(1)(a). As to Group B offences see note 27 infra.

The provisions in this paragraph came into force on June 1 1999: Criminal Justice Act 1993 (Commencement No 10) Order 1999, SI 1999/1189; Criminal Justice Act 1993 (Commencement No 11) Order 1999, SI 1999/1499. They do not apply to any act or event before that date: Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 78(5). The common law rules as to jurisdiction apply to acts etc before that date. As to those rules see PARA 1050 et seq post.

2 'Relevant event', in relation to any Group A offence, means any act or omission or other event (including any result of one or more acts or omissions) proof of which is required for conviction of the offence: ibid s 2(1). See also note 1 supra. For the purpose of determining whether or not a particular event is a relevant event in relation to a Group A offence, any question as to where it occurred is to be disregarded: s 2(2). An offence under the Identity Cards Act 2006 s 25 (possession of false identity documents) is also a Group A offence: see the Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 1(2) (as so amended; further amended by the Identity Cards Act 2006 s 30(1)).

The Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt I (ss 1-6) (as amended) lists four related offences ('Group B offences'): (1) conspiracy to commit a Group A offence (s 1(3)(a)); (2) conspiracy to defraud (s 1(3)(b)); (3) attempting to commit a Group A offence (s 1(3)(c)); and (4) incitement to commit a Group A offence (s 1(3)(d)). The Secretary of State may by order amend s 1(2) (as amended) or s 1(3) by adding or removing any offence: s 1(4). The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument but no order may be made unless a draft of it has been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 1(5), (6). As to the offence of cheating the public revenue see PARA 322 ante.

29    Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 3(1)(a). This provision does not apply where jurisdiction is given to try the offence in question by an enactment which makes provision by reference to the nationality of the person charged: s 3(4). On a charge of conspiracy to commit a Group A offence, or on a charge of conspiracy to defraud in England and Wales, the defendant may be guilty of the offence whether or not: (1) he became a party to the conspiracy in England and Wales; (2) any act or omission or other event in relation to the conspiracy occurred in England and Wales: s 3(2). On a charge of attempting to commit a Group A offence, the defendant may be guilty of the offence whether or not: (a) the attempt was made in England and Wales; (b) it had an effect in England and Wales: s 3(3). See also note 30 infra.

30    Ibid s 3(1)(b). The provisions of s 3(1) are also applicable to Group B offences (see note 27 supra): see s 3(1). See also note 29 supra.

31 Ibid s 4(a). See also note 32 infra.

32 Ibid s 4(b). The provisions of s 4 are also applicable to Group B offences (see note 27 supra): see s 4.

UPDATE

362 Jurisdiction in relation to theft, offences of fraud and certain other offences

NOTE 2--Definition is now subject to Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 2(1A): s 2(1) (amended by Fraud Act 2006 Sch 1 para 25(2)). In relation to an offence under s 1 (see PARA 309A.1), 'relevant event' includes (1) if the fraud involved an intention to make a gain and the gain occurred, that occurrence; (2) if the fraud involved an intention to cause a loss or to expose another to a risk of loss and the loss occurred, that occurrence: 1993 Act s 2(1A) (added by 2006 Act Sch 1 para 25(3)).

NOTE 27--1993 Act s 1(2) further amended: 2006 Act Sch 1 para 24(1), (2), Sch 3. Group A offences now also include an offence under any of the following provisions (1) s 1 (see PARA 309A.1); (2) s 6 (see PARA 309A.5); (3) s 7 (see PARA 309A.6); (4) s 9 (see PARA 309A.7); (5) s 11 (see PARA 309A.8): 1993 Act s 1(2)(bb) (added by 2006 Act Sch 1 para 24(3)). See further PARA 309A.

See further Serious Crime Act 2007 Sch 6 para 21(a) (references to common law offence of incitement).

5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY

(1) TREASON AND RELATED OFFENCES

363. Acts constituting treason.

By statute a person is guilty of treason who:

- 346 (1) levies war against the Sovereign in Her realm, or is adherent to the Sovereign's enemies in Her realm giving them aid and comfort in the realm, or elsewhere<sup>1</sup>;
- 347 (2) compasses or imagines the death of the Sovereign<sup>2</sup>;
- 348 (3) compasses or imagines the death of the King's wife or of the Sovereign's eldest son and heir<sup>3</sup>;
- 349 (4) violates the King's wife or the Sovereign's eldest daughter unmarried or the wife of the Sovereign's eldest son and heir<sup>4</sup>;
- 350 (5) endeavours to deprive or hinder any person who is next in succession to the Crown for the time being<sup>5</sup> from succeeding after the demise of the Sovereign to the Crown and the dominions and territories belonging to the Crown and attempts the same maliciously, advisedly and directly by overt act or deed; or, knowing such offence to be done, is an abettor, procurer and comforter of the offender<sup>6</sup>;

351 (6) slays the chancellor, treasurer, or the king's justices<sup>7</sup>, being in their places, doing their offices<sup>8</sup>.

Anyone who owes allegiance to the Crown may commit treason<sup>9</sup>.

A person convicted of treason is liable to life imprisonment or any shorter term<sup>10</sup>.

1 Treason Act 1351. The treason of levying war against the Sovereign in Her realm may be of two kinds: (1) express and direct, as where war is raised against the Sovereign or Her forces with a view to injure Her person or to imprison Her or to force Her to remove any of Her ministers or counsellors; or (2) constructive, as where there is a rising for some general public purpose, as opposed to a limited or local purpose: Fost 208, 210, 213; 1 Hale PC 131-133, 143, 149. It is the treasonable purpose which distinguishes treason from riot: R v Hardie (1820) 1 State Tr NS 609 at 765. Adherence must be evidenced by an overt act (see PARA 366 post) done with intent to aid and assist the Sovereign's enemies (ie foreign states in actual hostility against the Sovereign (see 1 East PC 77), and the subjects of a foreign state in amity with us who act against us without the commission of their Sovereign (1 Hale PC 162)): see R v Ahlers [1915] 1 KB 616, 11 Cr App Rep 63, CCA (jury not directed that it must consider whether German consul who was British subject acted with intention of assisting enemy or in belief that his duty was to assist German subjects; conviction quashed). A person is adherent to the Sovereign's enemies who does an act which strengthens or tends to strengthen the Sovereign's enemies in the conduct of a war against the Sovereign or which weakens or tends to weaken the power of the Sovereign and of the country to resist or attack the enemies of the Sovereign and the country (R v Casement [1917] 1 KB 98, 12 Cr App Rep 99, CCA); or who sends the Sovereign's enemies money or provisions or renders them any kind of aid or comfort which, when given to a rebel within the realm, would make the subject guilty of levying war (1 East PC 78; Fost 217); or who, in conjunction with the Sovereign's enemies, commits hostile acts upon an ally of the Sovereign who is also at war with the Sovereign's enemies (1 East PC 79; Fost 220). Communications with the Sovereign's enemies from which they may derive information to shape their attack or defence constitutes an adherence to the enemy: Fost 217; R v Grahme (1691) 12 State Tr 645; R v Gregg (1708) 14 State Tr 1371; R v Tyrie (1782) 21 State Tr 815; R v Jackson (1795) 25 State Tr 783; R v Sheares (1798) 27 State Tr 255.

2 Treason Act 1351. It is an overt act of compassing the Sovereign's death, wilfully to do or attempt anything whereby the Sovereign's life may be endangered or to conspire to carry out that purpose (Fost 195; R v Rookwood (1696) 13 State Tr 139) or to meet with others to kill the Sovereign though no agreement is then come to (1 East PC 59; R v Despard (1803) 28 State Tr 346 at 349-350). It is therefore an overt act of the treason of compassing the death of the Sovereign to enter into measures for deposing or imprisoning Her, or to agree with foreigners to invade Her dominions or to go into a foreign country to that end or to levy or conspire to levy war against Her or to raise an insurrection against Her or to destroy the constitution of the country: Fost 197, 210; 1 Hale PC 108-128 (where the earlier authorities are fully cited); R v Hardy (1794) 24 State Tr 199; R v Horne Tooke (1794) 25 State Tr 1; R v Freind (1696) 13 State Tr 1; R v Charnock, King and Keyes (1696) 12 State Tr 1377; R v Rookwood supra; R v Ings (1820) 33 State Tr 957. Arguments and words of advice or persuasion, uttered in contemplation of some traitorous purpose actually on foot or intended, and in prosecution of it, and consulting together for such a purpose, are also overt acts: Fost 200; R v Charnock, King and Keyes supra at 1452; R v Parkyns (1696) 13 State Tr 63 at 132. Cf Pine's Case (1628) 3 State Tr 359 ('loose words, not relative to any act or design . . . are not overt acts').

As to the citation of the Act of Settlement see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 35.

6 Treason Act 1702 s 3 (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 36(2)(c)).

7 'Chancellor' means the Lord Chancellor: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 477-497. 'Treasurer' means the Lord High Treasurer; the office has been in commission since 1714: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 512 et seq. The Treason Act 1351 (as amended) refers to 'the King's justices of the one bench or the other, justices in eyre, or justices of assise, and all other justices assigned to hear and determine'. These descriptions of the Queen's justices are no longer applicable and it is not clear how the statute might now be held to apply.

10 Treason Act 1702 s 3 (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 36(2)(c)); Treason Act 1814 s 1 (amended by the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 s 36(4)). As to disqualifications consequent upon a conviction for treason see PARA 1818 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(1) TREASON AND RELATED OFFENCES/364. Duty of allegiance.

364. Duty of allegiance.

The essence of the offence of treason lies in the violation of the allegiance owed to the Sovereign<sup>1</sup>. Natural allegiance is due from all British subjects<sup>2</sup> at all times wherever they may be<sup>3</sup>; local allegiance is owed by an alien under the protection of the Crown so long as he is resident within the realm and by a resident alien who goes abroad leaving his family or effects within the realm or goes abroad in possession of a British passport<sup>4</sup>. An alien enemy may also be convicted of treason if he has accepted British protection during a war<sup>5</sup>. An ambassador who is not a subject of the state to which he is accredited does not owe any temporary allegiance to that state<sup>6</sup>.

1 See Joyce v DPP [1946] AC 347 at 365, 31 Cr App Rep 57 at 85, HL, per Lord Jowitt LC.

2 'British subject' is the term used in the judgment from which this statement is taken, but this term is now used to refer only to a narrow class of British national. As to British nationality see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 7 et seq.

3 See R v Casement [1917] 1 KB 98 at 137, 12 Cr App Rep 99 at 119, CCA.

4 Joyce v DPP [1946] AC 347 at 367, 31 Cr App Rep 57 at 87-88, HL, per Lord Jowitt LC. An alien who goes abroad may withdraw from his allegiance, possibly even though he holds a passport; but an act of treason cannot itself constitute such a withdrawal: see Joyce v DPP supra at 371 and 89-90 per Lord Jowitt LC. The duty of allegiance is not dependent upon a person's having taken the oath of allegiance: see R v Arrowsmith [1975] 1 All ER 463 at 469, 60 Cr App Rep 211 at 216-217, CA. As to allegiance generally see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 29-32.

5 Joyce v DPP [1946] AC 347 at 374-375, 31 Cr App Rep 57 at 96-99, HL, per Lord Porter.

6 As to ambassadors and diplomatic agents generally see INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 31. Ambassadors and persons attached to embassies are, it seems, amenable to the English laws of treason only if they are British subjects (see note 2 supra): see Fost 187; 1 Hale PC 96; 1 Hawk PC c 2 s 5; Story's Case (1571) 3 Dyer 300b; R v Owen (alias Collins) (1615) 1 Roll Rep 185.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(1) TREASON AND RELATED OFFENCES/365. Misprision of treason.

365. Misprision of treason.

It is an offence at common law, punishable by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court<sup>1</sup>, for a person who knows<sup>2</sup> that treason is being planned or committed not to report it as soon as he can to a justice of the peace or other authority<sup>3</sup>.

1 See SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 31, 139.

2 He without being a party or consenting to the treason: 1 East PC 139; R v Tonge (1662) 6 State Tr 225.

3 1 Hale PC 372; 1 East PC 139. See Regicides' Case (1660) 5 State Tr 947 at 985; R v Tonge (1662) 6 State Tr 225; R v Walcot (1683) 9 State Tr 519 at 553; R v Thistlewood (1820) 33 State Tr 681 at 690-691. To constitute the offence there must be a knowledge of the persons concerned and of the design or offence; merely to be told that there will be a rising and to conceal the information is not misprision of treason: Kel 21; 1 East PC 139.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(1) TREASON AND RELATED OFFENCES/366. Treason and misprision of treason; evidence and procedure.

366. Treason and misprision of treason; evidence and procedure.

The procedure on trials for treason or misprision of treason is the same as that on trials for murder<sup>1</sup>. An indictment for treason or misprision of treason committed in any part of the United Kingdom must be signed within three years from the commission of the offence<sup>2</sup>, except in the case of the treason of designing, endeavouring or attempting the assassination of the Sovereign where there is no limitation of time<sup>3</sup>. Treason committed abroad may be tried in England<sup>4</sup>.

The treason alleged must be proved by overt acts<sup>5</sup>. It seems that the overt acts upon which it is intended to rely must be expressly alleged in the indictment<sup>6</sup> and that no evidence is admissible of any overt act that is not so alleged unless it affords direct proof of the overt acts that are laid<sup>7</sup>. Where the overt acts alleged in the indictment include acts of conspiracy, evidence may be given of acts committed by co-conspirators in execution of the common design even if committed after the date of the overt acts alleged and after the defendant's arrest<sup>8</sup>.

1 Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(6). As to treason being an exception to the general rule of convicting for an offence other than that charged see PARA 1335 post.

2 See the Treason Act 1695 s 5; the Treason Act 1708 s 1; the Treason (Ireland) Act 1821; the Administration of Justice (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1933 s 2(8), Sch 2 para 1; and Fost 249. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

3 Treason Act 1695 s 6.

5 See 3 Co Inst 12.

6 Provision to this effect was contained in the Treason Act 1695 s 8 (repealed). Quaere whether overt acts must be alleged in order to comply with the Indictments Act 1915 s 3(1): see PARA 1212 post. If the overt acts alleged consist of words or documents, it is sufficient to set out their effect: R v Francia (1717) 15 State Tr 897; R v Watson (1817) 2 Stark 116 at 132; Vaughan's Trial (1696) 13 State Tr 485 at 498. Several overt acts may be laid in one count: see PARA 1220 note 5 post.

7 See R v Rookwood (1696) 13 State Tr 139 at 217; R v Laver (1722) 16 State Tr 94 at 223; Deacon's Case (1746) 18 State Tr 365; R v Thistlewood (1820) 33 State Tr 681 at 686 per Abbott CJ.

UPDATE

366 Treason and misprision of treason; evidence and procedure

NOTE 2--Administration of Justice (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1933 Sch 2 para 1 amended: Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 116(1)(d), Sch 23 Pt 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(1) TREASON AND RELATED OFFENCES/367. Treason felony.

367. Treason felony.

Any person who:

- 352 (1) within the United Kingdom<sup>1</sup> or without, compasses, imagines, invents, devises or intends (a) to deprive or depose the Sovereign from the style, honour or royal name of the Crown of the United Kingdom or of any other of Her Majesty's dominions and countries<sup>2</sup>; or (b) to levy war<sup>3</sup> against Her Majesty within any part of the United Kingdom in order by force or constraint to compel Her to change Her measures or counsels or in order to put any force or constraint upon or in order to intimidate or overawe both Houses or either House of Parliament; or (c) to move or stir any foreigner or stranger with force to invade the United Kingdom or any other of Her Majesty's dominions or countries; and
- 353 (2) expresses, utters or declares such compassings etc by publishing any printing or writing or by any overt act<sup>4</sup> or deed, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life or for any shorter term<sup>5</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2 R v Mitchel (1848) 6 State Tr NS 599; R v Gallagher (1883) 15 Cox CC 291; Mulcahy v R (1866) IR 1 CL 12 (affd (1868) LR 3 HL 306); R v Davitt (1870) 11 Cox CC 676.

3 R v Gallagher (1883) 15 Cox CC 291; R v Mitchel (1848) 6 State Tr NS 599; R v Dowling (1848) 3 Cox CC 509; Mulcahy v R (1866) IR 1 CL 12 (affd (1868) LR 3 HL 306).

4 Some overt act must be committed within the Sovereign's dominions: see R v Meany (1867) 10 Cox CC 506, CCR. Where the defendant has conspired with others to commit any offence under the Treason Felony Act 1848 and a co-conspirator commits acts within the Sovereign's dominions in furtherance of the common purpose, it is a sufficient overt act to allege the conspiracy: R v Meany supra. See also Mulcahy v R (1866) IR 1 CL 12 (affd (1868) LR 3 HL 306); R v Davitt (1870) 11 Cox CC 676; R v Deasy (1883) 15 Cox CC 334. Several overt acts may be alleged in one count: Mulcahy v R supra.

5 Treason Felony Act 1848 s 3 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1891; and the Statute Law Revision Act 1892); Penal Servitude Act 1857 s 2 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1892); Penal Servitude Act 1891 s 1; Criminal Justice Act 1948 s 1; Criminal Law Act 1967 s 12(5)(a). The Treason Felony Act 1848 does not lessen the force of, or in any manner affect anything enacted by, the Treason Act 1351 (see PARA 363 ante): Treason Felony Act 1848 s 6 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1892). If matters alleged in an indictment or proved at the trial for any offence under the Treason Felony Act 1848 s 3 (as amended) amount in law to treason, this does not render the indictment defective or entitle the defendant to be acquitted; but an acquittal or conviction for any such offence is a bar to a prosecution for treason on the same facts: s 7; and see R v Mitchel (1848) 6 State Tr NS 599.

The Treason Felony Act 1848 s 3 (as amended) must be read so as not to cover the publication of articles advocating the peaceful abolition of the monarchy, in order to be compliant with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 10 (freedom of expression): R (on the application of Rusbridger) v A-G [2003] UKHL 38, [2004] 1 AC 357 at [8] per Lord Steyn and at [40] per Lord Scott of Foscote. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(1) TREASON AND RELATED OFFENCES/368. Assaults on the Sovereign.

368. Assaults on the Sovereign.

Any person who:

- 354 (1) with intent to injure the person of the Sovereign or to break public peace or whereby the public peace may be endangered or to alarm the Sovereign (a) wilfully discharges or attempts to discharge or points, aims, or presents at or near to the person of the Sovereign any gun, pistol or any other firearm or other arms, whether the same does or does not contain any explosive or destructive material, or discharges or causes to be discharged or attempts to discharge any explosive substance or material near to the Sovereign's person; (b) wilfully strikes or strikes at or attempts to strike or strike at the Sovereign with any offensive weapon or in any other manner whatsoever; (c) wilfully throws or attempts to throw any substance, matter or thing at or upon the person of the Sovereign; or
- 355 (2) wilfully produces or has near the person of the Sovereign any gun, pistol or any other description of firearm or other arms whatsoever, or any explosive, destructive, or dangerous matter or thing whatsoever, with intent to use the same to injure the person of the Sovereign or to alarm Her, is guilty of high misdemeanour<sup>1</sup>, and liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years<sup>2</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(1) TREASON AND RELATED OFFENCES/369. Contempt of the Sovereign.

369. Contempt of the Sovereign.

Contempt of the Sovereign is an offence at common law<sup>1</sup>. It is triable only on indictment and punishable by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court<sup>2</sup>.

1 See 1 Hawk PC c 6; 2 Hawk PC c 25, s 4; 4 BI Com (14th Edn) 122; 3 Co Inst 140, where contempts against the King's palaces or courts of justice or against His person, title, prerogative or government are listed under the headings of 'contempts' or 'misprisions'. As to criminal contempt of court see CONTEMPT OF COURT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 404 et seq. No prosecution for a contempt of the Sovereign appears to have been brought since 1840: see R v Price (1840) 11 Ad & El 727.

(2) SEDITIOUS WORDS AND LIBEL

370. Seditious words and seditious libel.

It is an offence at common law, punishable with a fine or imprisonment at the discretion of the court<sup>1</sup>, to do an act or speak words which have a seditious tendency with a seditious intention<sup>2</sup> or to publish matter<sup>3</sup> which has a seditious tendency with a seditious intention. Free comment, criticism and censure must, however, be distinguished from seditious words or seditious libel<sup>4</sup>.

The defences of absolute<sup>5</sup> and qualified<sup>6</sup> privilege appear to apply to a charge of seditious libel. Qualified privilege ceases if the publication was made with malice<sup>7</sup>. It is uncertain whether the composition of a seditious writing with the intention that it should be published, but without actual publication, constitutes a seditious libel<sup>8</sup>.

1 See SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARAS 31, 139. On a conviction for a seditious libel, the court may make an order for seizure of all copies of the libel: Criminal Libel Act 1819 s 1. As to powers of entry, search and seizure see PARA 869 et seq post.

2 For the meanings of 'seditious tendency' and 'seditious intention' see PARA 371 post.

3 The libel may be in writing or print or may be contained in a drawing or engraving, or painted picture, or sculpture, or any permanent representation: R v Sullivan, R v Pigott (1868) 11 Cox CC 44 at 55.

4 See R v Sullivan, R v Pigott (1868) 11 Cox CC 44 at 49 (the freest public discussion, comment, criticism, and censure, either at meetings or in the press, in relation to all political or party questions, all public acts of the servants of the Crown, all acts of the government, and all proceedings of courts of justice are permissible, and no narrow construction is to be put upon the expressions used in such discussion etc, but the criticism and censure must be without malignity, and must not impute corrupt or malicious motives). See also R v Collins (1839) 9 C & P 456 at 460-461 per Littledale J ('every man has a right to give every public matter a candid, full and free discussion; something must be allowed for feeling in men's minds and for some warmth of expression, but an intention to incite the people to take the power into their own hands and to provoke them to tumult and disorder is a seditious intention'); R v Burdett (1820) 1 State Tr NS 1 at 50; R v Aldred (1909) 74 JP 55, 22 Cox CC 1.

5 As to statements to which absolute privilege attaches see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 94 et seq.

6 As to statements to which qualified privilege attaches see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 109 et seq.

7 For the meaning of 'malice' see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 149 et seq.

8 R v Burdett (1820) 1 State Tr NS 1 at 122, 138. In every case in which any verdict or judgment by default is had against any person for composing, printing or publishing any blasphemous libel (see PARA 826 post) or any seditious libel tending to bring into hatred or contempt the person of Her Majesty or the government and constitution of the United Kingdom as by law established, or either House of Parliament, or to excite Her Majesty's subjects to attempt the alteration of any matter in church or state as by law established, otherwise than by lawful means, it is lawful for the judge or the court before whom or in which such verdict has been given, or the court in which judgment by default is had, to make an order for the seizure and carrying away and detaining in safe custody, in such manner as shall be directed in such order, of all copies of the libel which are in the possession of the person against whom such verdict or judgment has been had, or in the possession of any other person named in the order for his use, evidence upon oath having been previously given to the satisfaction of such court or judge that a copy or copies of such libel is or are in the possession of such other person for the use of the person against whom such verdict or judgment has been so had: Criminal Libel Act 1819 s 1 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1890). In every such case it is lawful for any justice of the peace, or for any constable or other peace officer, acting under any such order, or for any person or persons acting with or in aid of any such justice of the peace, constable or other peace officer, to search for any copies of such libel in any house, building or other place whatsoever belonging to the person against whom any such verdict or judgment is had, or to any other person so named, in whose possession any copies of any such libel, belonging to the person against whom any such verdict or judgment is had, are; and in case admission is refused or not obtained within a reasonable time after it has first been demanded, to enter by force by day into any such house, building or place whatsoever, and to carry away all copies of the libel there found, and to detain the same in safe custody until the same are restored under the Criminal Libel Act 1819, or disposed of according to any further order made in relation thereto: s 1. As to powers of entry, search and seizure see PARA 869 et seq post; and as to the power of a constable to use reasonable force see PARA 858 post.

If in any such case judgment is arrested or if, after judgment has been entered, the same is reversed upon any writ of error, all copies so seized must forthwith be returned to the person or persons from whom the same have been so taken free of all charge and expense, and without the payment of any fees whatever; and in every case in which final judgment is entered upon the verdict so found against the person or persons so charged with having composed, printed or published such libel, then all copies so seized must be disposed of as the court in which such judgment is given orders and directs: s 2. Writs of error were abolished by the Criminal Appeal Act 1907 s 20(1) (repealed). As to the right to apply to the court for judgment to be arrested see PARA 1349 post.

The Criminal Libel Act 1819 s 1 (as amended) appears to treat the composition, printing and publishing of a seditious libel as separate offences. As to evidence of publication see PARA 372 post.

370 Seditious words and seditious libel

NOTE 8--The offences of blasphemy and blasphemous libel under the common law of England and Wales are abolished and accordingly in the Criminal Libel Act 1819 s 1 the words 'any blasphemous libel, or' are omitted: Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008 s 79(1), (2), Sch 28 Pt 5.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(2) SEDITIOUS WORDS AND LIBEL/371. Seditious tendency and seditious intention.

371. Seditious tendency and seditious intention.

Sedition in the common law consists of any act done, or words spoken or written and published, which has or have a seditious tendency and is done or are spoken or written and published with a seditious intention<sup>1</sup>. Words may be said to have a seditious tendency if they have any of the following tendencies or a person may be said to have a seditious intention if he has any of the following intentions and acts:

- 356 (1) to bring into hatred or contempt, or to excite disaffection against, the Sovereign or the government and constitution of the United Kingdom or either House of Parliament, or the administration of justice<sup>2</sup>; or
- 357 (2) to excite the Sovereign's subjects to attempt, otherwise than by lawful means, the alteration of any matter in church or state by law established; or
- 358 (3) to incite persons to commit any crime in disturbance of the peace; or
- 359 (4) to raise discontent or disaffection amongst the Sovereign's subjects; or
- 360 (5) to promote feelings of ill-will and hostility between different classes of those subjects<sup>3</sup>.

The act or words must also have a tendency to incite public disorder and violence<sup>4</sup>.

An intention is not seditious if the object is to show that the Sovereign has been misled or mistaken in Her measures, or to point out errors or defects in the government or constitution with a view to their reformation, or to excite the subjects to attempt by lawful means the alteration of any matter in church or state by law established, or to point out, with a view to their removal, matters which are producing, or have a tendency to produce, feelings of hatred and ill-will between classes of the Sovereign's subjects<sup>5</sup>.

Seditious intention does not merely consist of an intention to bring about one of the five heads set out above. There must also be an intention to incite to violence or to create public disturbance or disorder against Her Majesty or the institutions of government. Thus proof of an intention to promote feelings of ill-will or hostility between different classes of subjects does not establish a seditious intention. Not only must there be an incitement to violence in this connection, but it must be violence or resistance or defiance for the purpose of disturbing constituted authority (that is some person or body holding public office or discharging some public function of the state)<sup>6</sup>.

The character of the words used may be good evidence of the nature of the intention<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to seditious words and seditious libel see PARA 370 ante. It is an offence for an alien to attempt to do any act calculated or likely to cause sedition: see the Aliens Restriction (Amendment) Act 1919 s 3(1) (as amended); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 13. For these purposes, 'alien' does not include a British protected person: British Nationality Act 1948 s 3(3). For the meaning of 'British protected person' see the British Nationality Act 1981 s 50(1); and BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 72.

The corresponding passage, in substantially the same terms, in the first edition at 55-56, was adopted in R v Burns (1886) 16 Cox CC 355 at 359-360 per Cave J, and in R v M'Hugh [1901] 2 IR 569 at 578. 7 R v M'Hugh [1901] 2 IR 569 at 578. Formerly it was held that if the words used had a direct tendency to cause unlawful meetings and disturbances and to lead to a violation of the laws, they were seditious, as the defendant was taken to have intended the natural consequences of what he had done (R v Lovett (1839) 9 C & P 462 at 466 per Littledale J; R v Sullivan, R v Pigott (1868) 11 Cox CC 44 at 58; and see also R v Horne (1778) 20 State Tr 651 at 762, HL; R v Aldred (1909) 74 JP 55, 22 Cox CC 1); but as to the subjective test see now the Criminal Justice Act 1967 s 8; and PARA 1366 post.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(2) SEDITION WORDS AND LIBEL/372. Indictment and evidence in cases of seditious words or seditious libel.

372. Indictment and evidence in cases of seditious words or seditious libel.

In an indictment for seditious words or seditious libel, the words alleged to be seditious must be specified<sup>1</sup>. So much of the words alleged as will support the charge of sedition must be proved at the trial; but, if what is proved substantially constitutes sedition, it is immaterial that a portion is unproved<sup>2</sup>.

If the manuscript of a seditious libel is proved to be in the handwriting of the defendant, and it is also proved that the same libel was in fact published, this is prima facie evidence for the jury of a publication by the defendant, though no evidence is adduced that he directed the publication<sup>3</sup>. To prove that the publication was with an unlawful intent or was not accidental, evidence of the publication of other libels is admissible, provided they expressly refer to the subject matter of the libel which is charged in the indictment<sup>4</sup>. If words spoken or published are seditious, it is no defence that they are true, and evidence to prove their truth is inadmissible<sup>5</sup>.

1 See the opinion of the judges in Sacheverell's Case (1710) 15 State Tr 1 at 466; R v Sparling (1722) 1 Stra 497; Bradlaugh v R (1878) 3 QBD 607 at 619, CA. It is not essential that the indictment should allege that the words were spoken or published 'seditiously', if it alleges an intent which the law defines to be a seditious intention: R v M'Hugh [1901] 2 IR 569.

2 R v Fussell (1848) 3 Cox CC 291 at 294. If any part of the speech or writing varied or controlled the sense of the words alleged to be seditious, the onus is on the defendant to show it: see R v Crowe (1848) 3 Cox CC 123. Where an alleged seditious libel is contained in a newspaper, the defendant is entitled to have read in evidence any passage from the same newspaper tending to show his intention in publishing the passage complained of: R v Lambert and Perry (1810) 2 Camp 398.

3 R v Lovett (1839) 9 C & P 462; R v Aldred (1909) 74 JP 55, 22 Cox CC 1. As to what amounts to a publication see further LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 60 et seq.

4 R v Pearce (1791) Peake 106, where Lord Kenyon CJ admitted such evidence even to prove the fact of publication and that the defendant was the author of a libel; but see Finnerty v Tipper (1809) 2 Camp 72; Chubb v Westley (1834) 6 C & P 436; Plunkett v Cobbett (1804) 5 Esp 136; Pearson v Lemaitre (1843) 5 Man & G 700 at 719-720.

5 R v Aldred (1909) 74 JP 55, 22 Cox CC 1. The Libel Act 1843 s 6 (as amended) and the Newspaper Libel and Registration Act 1881 s 4 (see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARAS 294, 296) do not apply to seditious libels: R v Duffy (1846) 2 Cox CC 45; Ex p O'Brien (1883) 15 Cox CC 180; R v M'Hugh [1901] 2 IR 569.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(3) INCITING DISAFFECTION AMONG HER MAJESTY'S FORCES AND THE POLICE/373. Incitement to disaffection.

(3) INCITING DISAFFECTION AMONG HER MAJESTY'S FORCES AND THE POLICE

373. Incitement to disaffection.

Any person who maliciously and advisedly endeavours to seduce any member of Her Majesty's forces from his duty or allegiance to Her Majesty is guilty of an offence<sup>1</sup>.

Any person who, with intent so to commit, or to aid, abet, counsel or procure the commission of, such an offence, has in his possession or under his control any document of such a nature that the dissemination of copies among members of Her Majesty's forces would constitute such an offence, is guilty of an offence<sup>2</sup>.

No prosecution for either offence may take place without the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions<sup>3</sup>. These offences are punishable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine or both, or on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding four months<sup>4</sup> or a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or both<sup>5</sup>. Where any person is convicted of such an offence, the court dealing with the case may order any documents connected with the offence to be destroyed or dealt with in such other manner as may be specified in the order, but no documents may be so destroyed before the expiration of the period within which an appeal may be lodged; and, if an appeal is lodged, no document may be destroyed until after the appeal has been heard and decided<sup>6</sup>.

A judge of the High Court, if satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that such an offence<sup>7</sup> has been committed and that evidence of its commission is to be found at any premises or place specified in the information, may, on the application made by a police officer of a rank not lower than that of inspector, grant a warrant valid for three months authorising the entry into the premises or place, by force if necessary, the searching of them and of every person found there, and the seizing of anything found which is reasonably suspected to be evidence of the commission of that offence<sup>8</sup>.

1 Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 s 1. Section 1 creates a single offence which is committed by a person who endeavours to seduce members of the forces with a particular intent. The intent may be to seduce them from their duty or from their allegiance or both. A count stating the intent in the alternative is not bad for duplicity: see the Indictment Rules 1971, SI 1971/1253, r 7; and PARA 1218 post. See also R v Arrowsmith [1975] 1 All ER 463, 60 Cr App Rep 211, CA. 'Maliciously' in the Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 s 1 does not bear the meaning of spite or ill-will. It means 'something which is wilful or intentional: deliberate . . . wilfully and intentionally to do an unlawful act': R v Arrowsmith supra. There is no basis for reading the words 'without lawful excuse' into the Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 s 1: R v Arrowsmith supra. As to causing disaffection amongst the police see PARA 377 post.

2 Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 s 2(1).

3 Ibid s 3(2). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post. Where the Director of Public Prosecutions is carrying on a prosecution under the Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934, a court of summary jurisdiction may not deal with the case summarily without his consent: s 3(3).

4 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

5 Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 s 3(1) (amended by the Criminal Law Act 1977 s 32(1); and the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(2)). As to the prescribed sum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141.

6 Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 s 3(4).

7 ie an offence under ibid s 1 or s 2(1).

8 Ibid s 2(2) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 174(1), Sch 16 para 1). A warrant may only be issued in respect of an offence suspected to have been committed within the previous three months: Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 s 2(2) proviso (a). If a warrant has been executed on any premises; the occupier must be notified that a search has taken place and of anything removed: s 2(2) proviso (b). No woman may be searched except by a woman: s 2(3). Anything seized may be retained for a period not exceeding one month or, if proceedings for an offence under s 1 or s 2(1) are commenced within that period, until the conclusion of those proceedings; and in relation to property which has come into the possession of the police under s 2(2), the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 s 31 has effect subject to the provisions of the Incitement to Disaffection Act 1934 ss 2(4), 3(4): s 2(4) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1972 s 64(1), Sch 5; and by the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 s 74, Sch 4 para 1). As to powers of entry, search and seizure see PARA 869 et seq post.

TEXT AND NOTES--Army Act 1955 and Air Force Act 1955 repealed: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 17. As to aiding and abetting desertion, see now the Armed Forces Act 2006 s 344.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(3) INCITING DISAFFECTION AMONG HER MAJESTY'S FORCES AND THE POLICE/376. Obstructing members of regular forces in execution of duty; aiding malingering.

376. Obstructing members of regular forces in execution of duty; aiding malingering.

Any person who<sup>1</sup> wilfully obstructs or otherwise interferes with any officer, warrant officer or non-commissioned officer of the regular forces<sup>2</sup> or the regular air force<sup>3</sup> or any soldier of the regular forces or any airman of the regular air force acting in the execution of his duty is guilty of an offence<sup>4</sup>. The offence is a summary one and is punishable by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale or both<sup>5</sup>.

Any person who<sup>6</sup>:

- 361 (1) produces in an officer, warrant officer, non-commissioned officer, soldier of the regular forces or airman of the regular air force any sickness or disability; or
- 362 (2) supplies to or for him any drug or preparation calculated or likely to render him, or lead to the belief that he is, permanently or temporarily unfit for service, with a view to enabling him to avoid military service, whether permanently or temporarily, is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine or both, or on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three<sup>7</sup> months or a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or both<sup>8</sup>.

1    Ie whether in the United Kingdom or any colony: see the Army Act 1955 s 193 (as amended), the Air Force Act 1955 s 193 (as amended); and the text and notes 2-8 infra. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

5    Army Act 1955 s 193; Air Force Act 1955 s 193 (both amended by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46). As from a day to be appointed, the reference to imprisonment is removed and the punishment will simply be a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale: see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 280(1), (3), Sch 25 paras 40, 47 (not yet in force). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed. As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

6    Ie whether within or without Her Majesty's dominions: see the Army Act 1955 s 194 (as amended), the Air Force Act 1955 s 194 (as amended); and ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 45.

7    As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(3) INCITING DISAFFECTION AMONG HER MAJESTY'S FORCES AND THE POLICE/377. Causing disaffection amongst the police.

377. Causing disaffection amongst the police.

Any person who causes, or attempts to cause, or does any act calculated to cause, disaffection amongst the members of any police force<sup>1</sup>, or induces or attempts to induce, or does any act calculated to induce, any member of a police force to withhold his services is guilty of an offence<sup>2</sup>. The offence is punishable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine or both, or on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>3</sup> months or a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or both<sup>4</sup>.

Any person who causes, or attempts to cause, or does any act calculated to cause, disaffection amongst the members of the Ministry of Defence Police, or induces or attempts to induce, or does any act calculated to induce, any member of the Ministry of Defence Police to withhold his services or to commit breaches of discipline, is guilty of an offence<sup>5</sup>. The offence is punishable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine or both, or on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>6</sup> months or a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or both<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>3</sup> As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

(4) UNAUTHORISED WEARING OF NAVAL, MILITARY, AIR FORCE AND POLICE UNIFORMS

378. Naval, military and air force uniforms.

Any person not serving in Her Majesty's naval or military forces<sup>1</sup> or the air force, who (1) without Her Majesty's permission wears the uniform of any of those forces, or any dress having the appearance or bearing any of the regimental or other distinctive marks of any such uniform, in such manner or in such circumstances as to be likely to bring contempt upon that uniform; or (2) employs any other person so to wear that uniform or dress, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month or a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>2</sup>.

Any person not serving in Her Majesty's military forces or the air force who without Her Majesty's permission wears the uniform of any of those forces, or any dress having the appearance or bearing any regimental or other distinctive marks of any such uniform is guilty of an offence<sup>3</sup>. Such an offence is punishable on summary conviction by a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>4</sup>.

There is a corresponding offence in respect of the wearing of the merchant navy uniform<sup>5</sup>.

1 'Her Majesty's naval forces' means the Royal Navy, the naval reserve forces, and such of the marine forces, and of the naval forces of a Commonwealth country or raised under the law of any colony, as are for the time being subject to the Naval Discipline Act 1957; and 'Her Majesty's military forces' does not include any Commonwealth force: Army Act 1955 s 225(1); Naval Discipline Act 1957 s 132(5) (amended by the Armed Forces Act 1976 s 4, Sch 2 para 4; the Armed Forces Act 1981 s 28(2) Sch 5; the Armed Forces Act 1996 Sch 7 Pt III; and the Armed Forces Act 2001 Sch 6 para 24, Sch 7 Pt 6); Uniforms Act 1894 s 4 (substituted by the Armed Forces Act 1981 s 20(1), Sch 3 para 5). See ARMED FORCES vol 2(2) (Reissue) PARA 20.

2 Uniforms Act 1894 s 3 (amended by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46). This provision is applied to the air force by the Air Force (Application of Enactments) (No 2) Order 1918, SR & O 1918/548 (amended by SI 1964/ 488). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

3 Uniforms Act 1894 s 2(1). This provision is applied to the air force by the Air Force (Application of Enactments) (No 2) Order 1918 (as amended: see note 2 supra). It is not an offence, however, to wear any uniform or dress in the course of a stage play performed in a place duly licensed or authorised for the public performance of stage plays, or in the course of a music hall or circus performance, or in the course of any bona fide military representation: Uniforms Act 1894 s 2(1) proviso.

4 Ibid s 2(2) (amended by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46).

5 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 57 (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 332, Sch 37 Pt 9; and prospectively repealed by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 314(3), Sch 14 para 6). At the date at which this volume states the law no day had been appointed for the amendment or the repeal of this provision to come into effect. See further SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW vol 94 (2008) PARA 1161.

378 Naval, military and air force uniforms

NOTE 1--Definitions of 'Her Majesty's naval forces' and 'Her Majesty's military forces' amended: Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 11.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(4) UNAUTHORISED WEARING OF NAVAL, MILITARY, AIR FORCE AND POLICE UNIFORMS/379. Police uniforms.

379. Police uniforms.

Any person who, not being a constable, wears any article of police uniform<sup>1</sup> in circumstances where it gives him an appearance so nearly resembling that of a member or special constable of a police force (including a constable or special constable of the British Transport Police<sup>2</sup> and a member of the Civil Nuclear Constabulary<sup>3</sup>) as to be calculated to deceive<sup>4</sup>, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>5</sup>. There is an identical offence in relation to those who are not members of the Ministry of Defence Police wearing an article of the uniform of the Ministry of Defence Police; it is triable and punishable in the same way<sup>6</sup>.

Any person who, not being a member of a police force<sup>7</sup> or a special constable, has in his possession any article of police uniform is, unless he proves<sup>8</sup> that he obtained possession of that article lawfully and has possession of it for a lawful purpose, guilty of a summary offence and liable to a fine not exceeding level 1 on the standard scale<sup>9</sup>. There is an identical offence in relation to those who are not members of the Ministry of Defence Police Force who have in their possession any article of uniform of that force<sup>10</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'article of police uniform' means any article of uniform or any distinctive badge or mark or document of identification usually issued to members of police forces or special constables, or anything having the appearance of such an article, badge, mark or document; and 'special constable' means a special constable appointed for a police area: Police Act 1996 s 90(4)(a), (b). For the meaning of 'police area' see s 101; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136.

2 Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 68(2).

3 Energy Act 2004 s 68(2).

4 The words 'calculated to deceive' mean 'likely or reasonably likely to deceive' and do not involve an intention to deceive: Turner v Shearer [1973] 1 All ER 397, [1972] 1 WLR 1387, DC.

5 Police Act 1996 s 90(2). See further POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 481. As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

6 Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987 s 5(2). In relation to this offence, 'article of uniform' means any article of uniform or any distinctive badge or mark or document of identification usually issued to members of the Ministry of Defence Police, or any thing having the appearance of such an article, badge, mark or document: s 5(4).

7 'Member of a police force' includes a member of the British Transport Police Force: Police Act 1996 s 90(4) (aa) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 101, Sch 7 paras 20, 25). 'Member or special constable of a police force' includes a constable or special constable of the British Transport Police: Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 68(2). The Police Act 1996 s 90 has effect as if reference to a member of a police force included a member of the Civil Nuclear Constabulary: Energy Act 2004 s 68(2).

8 As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden of proof or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 et seq post. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

9 Police Act 1996 s 90(3). See further POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 481.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(5) POLITICAL AND QUASI-MILITARY ORGANISATIONS/380. Wearing political uniforms.

(5) POLITICAL AND QUASI-MILITARY ORGANISATIONS

380. Wearing political uniforms.

Subject as otherwise provided<sup>1</sup>, any person who in any public place<sup>2</sup> or at any public meeting<sup>3</sup> wears uniform<sup>4</sup> signifying his association<sup>5</sup> with any political organisation or with the promotion of any political object is guilty of an offence<sup>6</sup>. The offence is punishable on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months<sup>7</sup> or a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale or both<sup>8</sup>.

Where any person is charged before a court with such an offence, no further proceedings in respect thereof may be taken against him, except such as are authorised by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985<sup>9</sup>, without the consent of the Attorney General<sup>10</sup>. If such person is remanded in custody, he is entitled, after the expiration of a period of eight days from the date on which he was so remanded, to be released on bail without sureties unless within that period the Attorney General has consented to such further proceedings<sup>11</sup>.

1 If the chief officer of police is satisfied that the wearing of any such uniform on any ceremonial, anniversary or other special occasion will not be likely to involve risk of public disorder, he may, with the consent of a Secretary of State, by order permit the wearing of such uniform on that occasion either absolutely or subject to such conditions as may be specified in the order: Public Order Act 1936 s 1(1) proviso. Any such order may be revoked or varied by a subsequent order: see s 9(3) (amended by the Public Order Act 1986 s 40(3), Sch 3). 'Chief officer of police' means: (1) in relation to a police force maintained under the Police Act 1996 s 2 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136), the chief constable; (2) in relation to the metropolitan police force, the Metropolitan Police Commissioner; and (3) in relation to the City of London police force, the City of London Police Commissioner: s 101(1); definition applied by the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1. See further POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 105.

2 For these purposes, 'public place' includes any highway and any other premises or place to which at the material time the public has or is permitted to have access, whether on payment or otherwise: Public Order Act 1936 s 9(1) (definition substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 1972 s 33). Whether a place is a public place depends upon its status at the material time. Consequently a shop car park was not a public place at 11.30 pm when the shop was shut: Marsh v Arscott (1982) 75 Cr App Rep 211, DC (decided under the Public Order 1936 s 5 (repealed)). A public house was a public place even though the landlord could refuse entry to particular people: Lawrenson v Oxford [1982] Crim LR 185, DC (decided under the Public Order Act 1936 s 5 (repealed)). The front garden of a house is not a public place because people have access as lawful visitors and not as members of the public: R v Edwards, R v Roberts (1978) 67 Cr App Rep 228, CA (decided under the Public Order Act 1936 s 5 (repealed)). A 'public place' is public in its entirety though it contains areas to which the public is denied access: Cawley v Frost [1976] 3 All ER 743, [1976] 1 WLR 1207, DC (football ground) (decided under the Public Order Act 1936 s 5 (repealed)). Cf the Prevention of Crime Act 1953 s 1(4) (see PARA 699 note 5 post); the Firearms Act 1968 s 57(4) (see PARA 670 post); the Terrorism Act 2000 s 13 (see PARA 389 post).

3 'Public meeting' includes any meeting in a public place and any meeting which the public or any section of the public (as to which see PARA 563 note 2 post) is permitted to attend, whether on payment or otherwise; and 'meeting' means a meeting held for the purpose of the discussion of matters of public interest or for the purpose of expression of views on such matters: Public Order Act 1936 s 9(1).

4 See O'Moran v DPP [1975] QB 864, [1975] 1 All ER 473, DC ('uniform' may consist of particular articles of clothing (black berets) worn by each member of group to indicate that they are together and in association).

5 See O'Moran v DPP [1975] QB 864, [1975] 1 All ER 473, DC (proof may be by evidence (1) that the uniform in question had in the past been used as the uniform of a political organisation (and for that purpose it is not necessary to specify the particular organisation; it is sufficient to show that it had been associated with a political organisation capable of identification in some manner); or (2) that a group of persons assembling together had worn uniform to indicate their association with each other and, furthermore, by their conduct had indicated that the uniform associated them with other activity of a political character).

6 Public Order Act 1936 s 1(1). A constable may enter and search any premises for the purpose of arresting a person for an offence under s 1 (as amended): see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 17(1)(c)(i) (as amended); and PARA 884 post.

As to wearing articles of dress indicating membership of a proscribed organisation under the Terrorism Act 2000 see PARA 389 post.

7 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks: see the Public Order Act 1936 s 7(2) (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 280(2), (3), Sch 26 para 8). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

8 Public Order Act 1936 s 7(2) (amended by the Public Order Act 1963 s 1(2); the Public Order Act 1986 s 40(3), Sch 3; and by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 ss 38, 46). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

9 le by the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985 s 25: see PARA 1071 post.

10 Public Order Act 1936 s 1(2) (amended by the Criminal Jurisdiction Act 1975 s 14(4), Sch 5 para 1); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post.

11 Public Order Act 1936 s 1(2) (amended by the Bail Act 1976 s 12, Sch 2 para 10).

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3, see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(5) POLITICAL AND QUASI-MILITARY ORGANISATIONS/381. Quasi-military organisations.

381. Quasi-military organisations.

If the members or adherents of any association of persons, whether incorporated or not, are:

- 363 (1) organised or trained or equipped for the purpose of enabling them to be employed in usurping the functions of the police or of the armed forces of the Crown; or
- 364 (2) organised and trained or organised and equipped either for the purpose of enabling them to be employed for the use or display of physical force in promoting any political object, or in such a manner as to arouse reasonable apprehension<sup>1</sup> that they are organised and either trained or equipped for that purpose, any person who takes part in the control or management of the association, or in so organising or training any members or adherents of it, is guilty of an offence<sup>2</sup>. The offence is punishable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine or both, or on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>3</sup> months or a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum or both<sup>4</sup>. No prosecution for such an offence may, however, be instituted without the consent of the Attorney General<sup>5</sup>.

In any criminal or civil proceedings under the provisions described above, proof of things done or of words written, spoken or published (whether or not in the presence of any party to the proceedings) by any person taking part in the control or management of the association or in organising, training or equipping members or adherents of an association is admissible as evidence of the purposes for which, or the manner in which, members or adherents of the association (whether those persons or others) were organised, or trained, or equipped<sup>6</sup>.

If satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that such an offence has been committed, and that evidence of its commission is to be found at any premises or place specified in the information, a High Court judge may, on an application made by a police officer of a rank not lower than that of inspector, grant a search warrant authorising any such officer named in the warrant and any other police officers to enter the premises or place at any time within three months from the date of the warrant, if necessary by force, and to search the premises or place and every person<sup>7</sup> found there, and to seize anything found there or on any such person which the officer has reasonable ground for suspecting to be evidence of the commission of the offence<sup>8</sup>.

If, on the application of the Attorney General, it appears to the High Court that any association is an association of which members or adherents are organised, trained or equipped in contravention of the prohibition described above<sup>9</sup>, the court may:

- 365 (a) make such order as appears necessary to prevent any disposition without the leave of the court of property held by or for the association;
- 366 (b) direct an inquiry and report to be made as to any such property and as to the affairs of the association;
- 367 (c) make such further orders as appear to the court to be just and equitable for the application of such property in or towards (i) the discharge of liabilities of the association lawfully incurred before the date of the application or since that date with the approval of the court; (ii) the repayment of moneys to persons who became subscribers or contributors to the association in good faith and without knowledge of any contravention of above prohibition; and (iii) any costs incurred in connection with any such inquiry and report or in winding up or dissolving the association; and 368 (d) order any property which is not directed to be so applied to be forfeited to the Crown<sup>10</sup>.

1 The mere fact that there is no evidence of specific training for attacks on opponents or plans for such attacks does not remove the grounds for reasonable apprehension: R v Jordan, R v Tyndall [1963] Crim LR 124, CCA. It need not be proved that the defendant intended the use or display of physical force; reasonable apprehension is the test: R v Evans (1969) unreported.

2 Public Order Act 1936 s 2(1). It is a defence for a person charged with an offence of taking part in the control or management of such an association to prove that he neither consented to nor connived at the organisation, training or equipment of members or adherents of the association in contravention of s 2: s 2(1) proviso. As to whether this imposes a legal (or persuasive) burden of proof or an evidential one, and, if the former, its compatibility with the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6(2) (the presumption of innocence), see PARA 1368 et seq post. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

Nothing in the Public Order Act 1936 s 2 is to be construed as prohibiting the employment of a reasonable number of persons as stewards to assist in the preservation of order at any public meeting held upon private premises, or the making of arrangements for that purpose or the instruction of the persons to be so employed in their lawful duties as such stewards, or their being furnished with badges or other distinguishing signs: s 2(6). 'Private premises' means premises to which the public has access (whether on payment or otherwise) only by permission of the owner, occupier, or lessee of the premises: s 9(1). For the meaning of 'public meeting' see PARA 380 note 3 ante.

3 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(i) Introduction/383. Meaning of 'terrorism'.

(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM

(i) Introduction

383. Meaning of 'terrorism'.

For the purposes of the legislation relating to terrorism<sup>1</sup>, 'terrorism' means the use or threat of action where:

- 369 (1) the action<sup>2</sup> involves serious violence against a person or serious damage to property<sup>3</sup>, or endangers a person's life (other than that of the person committing the action), or creates a serious risk to the health or safety of the public<sup>4</sup> or a section of the public, or is designed seriously to interfere with or seriously to disrupt an electronic system<sup>5</sup>;
- 370 (2) the use or threat of action is designed to influence the government<sup>6</sup> or an international governmental organisation or to intimidate the public or a section of the public<sup>7</sup>; and
- 371 (3) the use or threat of action is made for the purpose of advancing a political, religious or ideological cause<sup>8</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'the legislation relating to terrorism' is the Terrorism Act 2000 and the Terrorism Act 2006 Pt 1 (ss 1-20) (see PARA 386 et seq post). The Terrorism Act 2000 received Royal Assent on 20 July 2000, on which date most of the provisions came into force. Remaining provisions were brought into force by the Terrorism Act 2000 (Commencement No 1) Order 2000, SI 2000/2800, the Terrorism Act 2000 (Commencement No 2) Order 2000, SI 2000/2944, and the Terrorism Act 2000 (Commencement No 3) Order 2001, SI 2001/421: see the Terrorism Act 2000 ss 128, 131. The Terrorism Act 2006 received Royal Assent on 30 March 2006 and was brought into force on 13 April 2006 (see the Terrorism Act 2006 (Commencement No 1) Order 2006, SI 2006/1013), except that the Terrorism Act 2006 ss 23-25 and the repeals in Sch 3 relating to the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(1) and the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 306(2), (3) came into force on 25 July 2006 (see the Terrorism Act 2006 s 39(2), (3); and the Terrorism Act 2006 (Commencement No 2) Order 2006, SI 2006/1936).

The legislation extends, with certain exceptions, to the whole of the United Kingdom: see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 130; and the Terrorism Act 2006 s 39(5). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante. Her Majesty may by Order in Council direct that any provisions of the latter Act are to extend, with such modifications (which includes omissions, additions and alterations) as appear to Her Majesty to be appropriate, to any of the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man: s 39(6), (7). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made.

As to the procedure for the Secretary of State to make orders and regulations under the Terrorism Act 2000 see s 123. As to directions given thereunder see s 124.

The Secretary of State has a duty to appoint a person to provide reports on the operation of both the Terrorism Act 2000 and the Terrorism Act 2006 (see the Terrorism Act 2006 s 36; and PARA 385 post). The Secretary of State also continues to be under a duty to lay before both Houses of Parliament at least once in every 12 months a report on the working of the Criminal Justice (Terrorism and Conspiracy) Act 1998 (s 8), even though the substantive provisions of that Act have been repealed.

2 'Action' includes action outside the United Kingdom: Terrorism Act 2000 s 1(4)(a).

3 The reference to 'person' or to 'property' is a reference to any person, or to any property, wherever situated: ibid s 1(4)(b).

5 Ibid s 1(1)(a), (2); Terrorism Act 2006 s 20(1).

4 'The public' includes the public of a country other than the United Kingdom: Terrorism Act 2000 s 1(4)(c).

6 'The government' means the government of the United Kingdom, of a part of the United Kingdom, or of a country other than the United Kingdom: ibid s 1(4)(d).

7 Ibid s 1(1)(b) (amended by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 34(a)). The use or threat of action falling within head (1) in the text which involves the use of firearms or explosives is terrorism whether or not head (2) is satisfied: Terrorism Act 2000 s 1(3).

8 Ibid s 1(1)(c).

385. Review of legislation relating to terrorism.

The Secretary of State has a duty to appoint a person to review the operation of the provisions of the legislation relating to terrorism<sup>1</sup>. That person may from time to time carry out a review of those provisions and, where he does so, must send a report on the outcome of such review to the Secretary of State as soon as reasonably practicable after completing it<sup>2</sup>, and must carry out and report on such a review at least once in every 12-month period<sup>3</sup>. On receiving a report the Secretary of State must lay a copy of it before Parliament<sup>4</sup>.

1 Terrorism Act 2006 s 36(1). For these purposes, 'the legislation relating to terrorism' is the Terrorism Act 2000 and the Terrorism Act 2006 Pt 1 (ss 1-20): see PARA 383 note 1 ante; and see also PARA 386 et seq post. The Secretary of State may, out of money provided by Parliament, pay a person appointed to carry out such a review both his expenses and also such allowances as the Secretary of State determines: s 36(6).

The Secretary of State was also required to appoint a committee to conduct a review of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001: see ss 122, 123. The Privy Counsellor Review Committee Report on the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 Review (HC 100) was laid before Parliament on 18 December 2003.

2 Terrorism Act 2006 s 36(2). The appointed person must carry out and report on his first review under s 36 before the end of the period of 12 months after the laying before Parliament of the last report required to be so laid under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 126 (repealed) before 13 April 2006 (ie the date on which the Terrorism Act 2006 s 36 was brought into force by the Terrorism Act 2006 (Commencement No 1) Order 2006, SI 2006/1013): Terrorism Act 2006 s 36(3).

(ii) Proscribed Organisations

386. Proscription.

An organisation is 'proscribed' if (1) it is listed in the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>1</sup>; or (2) it operates under the same name as an organisation so listed<sup>2</sup>. The Secretary of State has power by order to add an organisation to the list if he believes that it is concerned in terrorism<sup>3</sup> and also to provide that a name which is not specified in the list<sup>4</sup> is to be treated as another name for a listed organisation if he believes either that a listed organisation is operating wholly or partly under that non-specified name (whether as well as or instead of under the specified name)<sup>5</sup> or that an organisation that is operating under a name that is not so specified is otherwise for all practical purposes the same as an organisation so listed<sup>6</sup>. An organisation is 'concerned in terrorism' if it commits or participates in acts of terrorism<sup>7</sup>, prepares for terrorism<sup>8</sup>, promotes or encourages terrorism<sup>9</sup>, or is otherwise engaged in terrorism<sup>10</sup>.

An application may be made to the Secretary of State for the removal of an organisation from the list<sup>11</sup> or for a name to cease to be treated as a name for a listed organisation<sup>12</sup>. Where such an application is refused, an appeal lies to the Proscribed Organisations Appeal Commission<sup>13</sup>. A further appeal from a decision of the Commission may be made to the Court of Appeal on a question of law with the permission of the Commission or, if the Commission refuses permission, with the permission of the Court of Appeal<sup>14</sup>. If an appeal to the Commission is successful and an order has been made either deproscribing an organisation<sup>15</sup> or providing for a specified name to cease to be treated as a name for a particular organisation<sup>16</sup>, a person who has been convicted of an offence<sup>17</sup> in respect of the organisation<sup>18</sup> on the basis of activity which took place on or after the date of the refusal<sup>19</sup> may appeal against the conviction<sup>20</sup> to the Court of Appeal (if the conviction was on indictment)<sup>21</sup> or to the Crown Court (if the conviction was by a magistrates' court)<sup>22</sup>, and the Court of Appeal or the Crown Court (as the case may be) must allow the appeal<sup>23</sup>. An application may be made for compensation for miscarriage of justice in such a case<sup>24</sup>.

The following types of evidence are inadmissible as evidence in proceedings for a range of specified terrorism offences<sup>27</sup>:

- 404 (a) evidence of anything done in relation to an application<sup>28</sup> to the Secretary of State for deproscription<sup>29</sup>;
- 405 (b) evidence of anything done in relation to proceedings before the Proscribed Organisations Appeal Commission<sup>30</sup>;
- 406 (c) evidence of anything done in relation to proceedings on further appeal<sup>31</sup>;
- 407 (d) any document submitted for the purposes of proceedings mentioned in heads (a) to (c) above<sup>32</sup>.

This does not, however, prevent evidence from being adduced on behalf of the defendant<sup>33</sup>.

1 le listed in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 3, Sch 2 (as amended). The following are listed as proscribed organisations: The Irish Republican Army (see infra); Cumann na mBan, Fianna na hEireann; The Red Hand Commando; Saor Eire; The Ulster Freedom Fighters; The Ulster Volunteer Force; The Irish National Liberation Army; The Irish People's Liberation Organisation; The Ulster Defence Association; The Loyalist Volunteer Force; The Continuity Army Council; The Orange Volunteers (see infra); The Red Hand Defenders; Al-Qa'ida; Egyptian Islamic Jihad; Al-Gama'at al-Islamiya; Armed Islamic Group (Groupe Islamique Armée) (GIA); Salafist Group for Call and Combat (Groupe Salafiste pour la Prédication et le Combat) (GSPC); Babbar Khalsa; International Sikh Youth Federation; Harakat Mujahideen; Jaish e Mohammed; Lashkar e Tayyaba; Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE); Hizballah External Security Organisation; Hamas-Izz al-Din al-Qassem Brigades; Palestinian Islamic Jihad - Shaqaqi; Abu Nidal Organisation; Islamic Army of Aden; Mujaheddin e Khalq; Kurdistan Workers' Party (Partiya Karkeren Kurdistan) (PKK) (also known as Kongra Gele Kurdistan or KADEK); Revolutionary Peoples' Liberation Party - Front (Devrimci Halk Kurtulus Partisi-Cephesi) (DHKP-C); Basque Homeland and Liberty (Euskadi ta Askatasuna) (ETA); 17 November Revolutionary Organisation (N17); Abu Sayyaf Group; Asbat Al-Ansar; Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan; Jemaah Islamiyah (see infra); Al Ittihad Al Islamia; Ansar Al Islam; Ansar Al Sunna; Groupe Islamique Combattant Marocain; Harakat-ul-Jihad-ul-Islami (Bangladesh); Harakat-ul-Mujahideen/Alami; Hezb-e Islami Gulbuddin; Islamic Jihad Union; Jamaat ul-Furquan; Jundallah; Khuddam ul-Islam; Lashkar-e Jhangvi; Libyan Islamic Fighting Group; Sipah-e Sahaba Pakistan; Al-Ghurabaa; the Saved Sect; Baluchistan Liberation Army; Teyrebaz Azadiye Kurdistan: Sch 2 (amended by the Terrorism Act 2000 (Proscribed Organisations) (Amendment) Order 2001, SI 2001/1261, art 2; the Terrorism Act 2000 (Proscribed Organisations) (Amendment) Order 2002, SI 2002/2724, art 1; the Terrorism Act 2000 (Proscribed Organisations) (Amendment) Order 2005, SI 2005/2892, art 1; and the Terrorism Act 2000 (Proscribed Organisations) (Amendment) Order 2006, SI 2006/2016, art 2; and by virtue of the Proscribed Organisations (Name Change) Order 2006, SI 2006/1919, art 2). The entry for The Orange Volunteers refers to the organisation which uses that name and in the name of which a statement described as a press release was published on 14 October 1998. The entry for Jemaah Islamiyah refers to the organisation using that name that is based in south-east Asia, members of which were arrested by the Singapore authorities in December 2001 in connection with a plot to attack United States and other Western targets in Singapore. The term 'Irish Republican Army' was intended to encompass splinter groups for the Irish Republican Army and thus includes the Real IRA, a group formed by dissident members of the IRA in 1997: R v Z (A-G for Northern Ireland's Reference) [2005] UKHL 35, [2005] 2 AC 645, [2005] 3 All ER 95.

2 Terrorism Act 2000 s 3(1). Head (2) in the text does not apply to an organisation listed in Sch 2 if its entry is subject to a note in that Schedule: s 3(2). 'Organisation' includes any association or combination of persons: s 121.

3 Ibid s 3(3)(a), (4). The Secretary of State may also by order remove an organisation from the list or amend the list in some other way: s 3(3)(b), (c). For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante. An order under s 3(3) must be made by statutory instrument, and may contain savings and transitional provisions and make different provisions for different purposes: s 123(1). Such an order may not be made unless a draft has been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 123(4)(a). However, an order may be made without having been so approved if the Secretary of State is of the opinion that it is necessary by reason of urgency; in such a case the order must contain a declaration of the Secretary of State's opinion, and it ceases to have effect at the end of the period of 40 days beginning with the day of its making unless approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 123(5).

4 le specified in ibid Sch 2 (as amended).

5 Ibid s 3(6)(a) (ss 3(5A)-(5C), (6)-(9), 5(5A), 7(1A), 9(4)(c) added, s 4(1) substituted, and ss 4(2)(b), 5(3)-(5), 7(2), (4)(a), (5), (7)(a), 9(2)(a), (4)(a), Sch 3 amended, by the Terrorism Act 2006 ss 21, 22, 37, Sch 3). Where an order under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 3(6) (as added) provides for a name to be treated as another name for an organisation, the Act has effect in relation to acts occurring while the order is in force and the organisation continues to be listed in Sch 2 (as amended) as if the organisation were listed in Sch 2 (as amended) under the other name, as well as under the name specified in Sch 2 (as amended): s 3(7) (as so added). The Secretary of State may at any time by order revoke an order under s 3(6) (as added) or otherwise provide for a name specified in such an order to cease to be treated as a name for a particular organisation: s 3(8) (as so added). Nothing in s 3(6)-(8) (as added) prevents any liability from being established in any proceedings by proof that an organisation is the same as an organisation listed in Sch 2 (as amended), even though it is or was operating under a name specified neither in Sch 2 (as amended) nor in an order under s 3(6) (as added): s 3(9) (as so added).

6 Ibid s 3(6)(b) (as added: see note 5 supra).

7 Ibid s 3(5)(a).

8 Ibid s 3(5)(b).

9 Ibid s 3(5)(c). The cases in which an organisation promotes or encourages terrorism for these purposes include any case in which activities of the organisation either include the unlawful glorification of the commission or preparation (whether in the past, in the future or generally) of acts of terrorism (s 3(5A)(a) (as added: see note 5 supra) or are carried out in a manner that ensures that the organisation is associated with statements containing any such glorification (s 3(5A)(b) (as so added)). For these purposes, 'statement' includes a communication without words consisting of sounds or images or both, and 'glorification' includes any form of praise or celebration (cognate expressions being construed accordingly) (s 3(5C) (as so added)); and the glorification of any conduct is unlawful for the purposes of s 3(5A) (as added) if there are persons who may become aware of it who could reasonably be expected to infer that what is being glorified, is being glorified as either conduct that should be emulated in existing circumstances (s 3(5B)(a) (as so added)) or conduct that is illustrative of a type of conduct that should be so emulated (s 3(5B)(b) (as so added)).

10 Ibid s 3(5)(d).

11 Ibid ss 3(3)(b), 4(1)(a) (s 4(1) as substituted: see note 5 supra). The application may be made by the proscribed organisation (s 4(2)(a)) or any person affected by the organisation's proscription or by the treatment of the name as a name for the organisation (s 4(2)(b) (as so amended)). As to the procedure for applications see the Proscribed Organisations (Applications for Deproscription) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/2299, made under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 4(3), (4).

12 Ibid s 4(1)(b) (as substituted: see note 5 supra).

13 Ibid s 5(1), (2). As to the constitution of the Commission see s 5(6), Sch 3 (as amended (see note 5 supra); further amended by the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 s 82(1), (2), Sch 4 para 12(2), Sch 5; and the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 15(1), Sch 4 paras 287, 289; and prospectively amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 145, Sch 17 para 29). As to the practice and procedure to be followed see the Proscribed Organisations Appeal Commission (Procedure) Rules 2001, SI 2001/443; and the Court of Appeal (Appeals from Proscribed Organisations Appeal Commission) Rules 2002, SI 2002/1843. The Commission must allow an appeal against a refusal to deproscribe an organisation or to provide for a name to cease to be treated as a name for an organisation if it considers that the decision to refuse was flawed when considered in the light of the principles applicable to a judicial review application: Terrorism Act 2000 s 5(3) (as amended: see note 5 supra). Where the Commission allows an appeal it may make an order under s 5(4): s 5(4) (as so amended). Where such an order is made in respect of an appeal against a refusal to deproscribe an organisation, the Secretary of State must as soon as reasonably practicable either lay before Parliament a draft deproscription order under s 3(3)(b) in accordance with s 123(4) or, if of the opinion that the matter is one of urgency, a deproscription order; the former is subject to approval in resolution of each House of Parliament, and the latter requires the order to contain a declaration of the Secretary of State's opinion and ceases to have effect unless within 40 days of the making of the order by the Secretary of State each House of Parliament passes a resolution approving the order: s 5(5) (as so amended), s 123(4), (5). Where such an order is made in respect of an appeal against a refusal to provide for a name to cease to be treated as a name for an organisation, the Secretary of State must as soon as is reasonably practicable make an order under s 3(8) (see note 5 supra) providing that the name in question is to cease to be so treated in relation to that organisation: s 5(5A) (as so added). However, the Secretary of State is not required to take any action until the final determination or disposal of an appeal under s 6 (see the text and note 14 infra) (including any appeal to the House of Lords): s 6(3). As from a day to be appointed, the words 'Supreme Court' are substituted for the words 'House of Lords', by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40(4), Sch 9 Pt I. At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

14 Terrorism Act 2000 s 6(1), (2). The Court of Appeal is the appropriate court only if the appeal to the Commission was heard in England and Wales; if it was heard in Scotland or in Northern Ireland, the appropriate court is the Court of Session or the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland respectively: see s 6(1). With regard to such appeal to the Court of Appeal, the Court of Appeal must secure that information is not disclosed contrary to the interests of national security: Court of Appeal (Appeals from Proscribed Organisations Appeal Commission) Rules 2002, SI 2002/1843, r 4(1). In particular, the Court of Appeal may exclude any party (other than the Secretary of State and his representative) from the whole or part of the proceedings before it: r 4(2), (3).

15 Terrorism Act 2000 s 7(1)(a), (b). Orders deproscribing an organisation are made under s 3(3)(b) (see the text and note 11 supra).

16 Ibid s 7(1A)(a), (b) (as added: see note 5 supra). Orders providing for a name to cease to be treated as a name for a particular organisation are made under s 3(8) (as added) (see note 5 supra).

17 Is an offence under ibid ss 11-13, 15-19, 56: see PARAS 387-394, 441 post.

18 Ibid s 7(1)(c), (1A)(c) (s 7(1A) as added: see note 5 supra).

20    Terrorism Act 2000 s 7(1)(d), (1A)(d) (s 7(1A) as added: see note 5 supra). An appeal to the Court of Appeal must be brought within 28 days, and an appeal to the Crown Court must be brought within 21 days, beginning with the date of the order (see s 7(4)(a), (7)(a) (as so amended)) and is treated as an appeal under the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 s 1 (see PARA 1837 post), except that an appeal to the Court of Appeal does not require leave (Terrorism Act 2000 s 7(4)(b), (7)(b)). As to appeals in Northern Ireland see s 8.

26    See the Terrorism Act 2000 s 9(1); and the Proscribed Organisations Appeal Commission (Human Rights Act 1998 Proceedings) Rules 2006, SI 2006/2290. The Terrorism Act 2000 ss 5(4), (5), (5A), 6, 7, Sch 3 paras 4-7 (as amended) apply to such proceedings: see s 9(2)(a)-(d)) (s 9(2)(a) as amended (see note 5 supra); and s 9(2)(d) amended by the Investigation of Regulatory Powers Act 2000 Sch 4 para 12(1)). In the application of those provisions a reference to the Commission allowing an appeal is taken as a reference to the Commission determining that an action of the Secretary of State is incompatible with a Convention right (Terrorism Act 2000 s 9(4)(a) (as so amended)), a reference to the refusal to deproscribe against which an appeal was brought is taken as a reference to the action of the Secretary of State which is found to be incompatible with a Convention right (s 9(4)(b)), and a reference to a refusal to provide for a name to cease to be treated as a name for an organisation is taken as a reference to the action of the Secretary of State which is found to be incompatible with a Convention right (s 9(4)(c) (as so added)). The Commission must decide proceedings in accordance with the principles applicable on an application for judicial review: s 9(3).

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

386 Proscription

NOTE 1--Mujaheddin e Khalq; Hizballah External Security Organisation omitted from, Jammāt-ul Mujahideen Bangladesh; Tehrik Nefaz-e Shari'at Muhammadi; the military wing of Hizballah including the Jihad Council and all units reporting to it (including the Hizballah External Security Organisation), Jama'at ud Da'wa (to be treated as another name for Lashkar e Tayyaba), Al Shabaab added to, list of proscribed organisations: 2000 Act Sch 2 (amended by SI 2007/2184, SI 2008/1645, SI 2008/1931, SI 2010/611, and by virtue of SI 2009/578). Al Muhajiroun (ALM), Call to Submission, Islam4UK, Islamic Path, and London School of Sharia are to be treated as other names for both Al-Ghurabaa and The Saved Sect: Proscribed Organisations (Name Changes) Order 2010, SI 2010/34.

An organisation which has no capacity to carry on terrorist activities and is taking no steps to acquire such capacity or otherwise to promote or encourage terrorist activities cannot be said to be concerned in terrorism simply because its leaders have the contingent intention to resort to terrorism in the future: Lord Alton of Liverpool v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2008] EWCA Civ 443, [2008] 1 WLR 2341.

NOTE 13--SI 2001/4413 replaced: SI 2007/1286.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(ii) Proscribed Organisations/387. Membership.

387. Membership.

A person commits an offence if he belongs or professes to belong to a proscribed organisation<sup>1</sup>. A person guilty of this offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>2</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>3</sup>.

It is a defence for a person charged with such an offence to prove<sup>4</sup>: (1) that the organisation was not proscribed on the last (or only) occasion on which he became a member or began to profess to be a member; and (2) that he has not taken part in the activities of the organisation at any time while it was proscribed<sup>5</sup>.

1 Terrorism Act 2000 s 11(1). Although s 11(1) does not have extra-territorial effect, a person who joined a proscribed organisation outside the jurisdiction is guilty of the present offence if he continues to be a member while in this country: R v Hundal, R v Dhaliwal [2004] EWCA Crim 389, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 307. As to proscribed organisations see PARA 386 ante. As to the meaning of 'organisation' see PARA 386 note 2 ante.

Proceedings in England and Wales for the offence require the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: Terrorism Act 2000 s 117(1), (2)(a). Where, however, it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence to which s 117 (as amended) applies has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, his consent for these purposes may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General: s 117(2A) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(2)). As to the effect of these restrictions see PARA 1071 post. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

As to the inadmissibility of certain evidence see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 10; and PARA 386 ante. As to the additional right of appeal arising after a successful appeal against the Secretary of State's refusal to deproscribe a proscribed organisation see PARA 386 ante.

2 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 Terrorism Act 2000 s 11(3). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

4 This imposes an evidential burden only: Sheldrake v DPP, A-G's Reference (No 4 of 2002) [2004] UKHL 43, [2005] 1 AC 264, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 450.

5 Terrorism Act 2000 s 11(2). For the purposes of this defence, 'proscribed' is not limited to 'proscribed' for the purposes of the Terrorism Act 2000 (see PARA 386 ante); it also means 'proscribed' for the purposes of the following Acts: the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1996, the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991, the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989, the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984, the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978, the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1976, the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1974, and the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1973 (all now repealed): see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 11(4). These Acts were predecessors of the Terrorism Act 2000, where the concept of 'proscribed organisation' was employed in anti-terrorism legislation.

387 Membership

NOTE 1--Where an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 11 is committed in the United Kingdom, proceedings for the offence may be taken at any place in the United Kingdom and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed at any such place: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 28(1), (2)(a).

NOTE 1--After 'committed' read 'outside the United Kingdom or': Terrorism Act 2000 s 117(2A) (amended by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 29).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(ii) Proscribed Organisations/388. Support.

388. Support.

A person commits an offence if he invites support for a proscribed organisation<sup>1</sup>, and the support is not, or is not restricted to, the provision of money or other property<sup>2</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he arranges, manages or assists in arranging or managing a meeting<sup>3</sup> which he knows is:

- 408 (1) to support a proscribed organisation<sup>4</sup>,
- 409 (2) to further the activities of a proscribed organisation<sup>5</sup>; or
- 410 (3) to be addressed by a person who belongs or professes to belong to a proscribed organisation<sup>6</sup>.

Where a person is charged with an offence under head (3) above in respect of a private meeting<sup>7</sup> it is a defence for him to prove<sup>8</sup> that he had no reasonable cause to believe that the address in question would support a proscribed organisation or further its activities<sup>9</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he addresses a meeting and the purpose of his address is to encourage support for a proscribed organisation or to further its activities<sup>10</sup>.

A person guilty of an offence under the above provisions is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>11</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to proscribed organisations see PARA 386 ante.

2 Terrorism Act 2000 s 12(1). Proceedings in England and Wales for the offence require the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 117(1), (2)(a). Where, however, it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence to which s 117 (as amended) applies has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, his consent for these purposes may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General: s 117(2A) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(2)). As to the effect of these restrictions see PARA 1071 post. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

As to the inadmissibility of certain evidence see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 10; and PARA 386 ante. For the additional right of appeal arising after a successful appeal against the Secretary of State's refusal to deproscribe a proscribed organisation see PARA 386 ante.

The reference to 'the provision of money or other property' is a reference to its being given, lent or otherwise made available, whether or not for consideration: s 15; applied by s 12(1)(b). 'Property' includes property wherever situated and whether real or personal, heritable or moveable, and things in action and other intangible or incorporeal property: s 121.

3 'Meeting' means a meeting of three or more persons, whether or not the public is admitted: ibid s 12(5)(a).

4 Ibid s 12(2)(a). The provisions of ss 10, 117 (see PARA 386 ante) apply to such an offence.

5 Ibid s 12(2)(b). See note 4 supra.

6 Ibid s 12(2)(c). See note 4 supra.

7 A meeting is private if the public is not admitted: ibid s 12(5)(b).

8 If the person adduces evidence which is sufficient to raise an issue with respect to the matter, the court or jury must assume that the defence is satisfied unless the prosecution proves beyond reasonable doubt that it is not: ibid s 118(1), (2), (5).

9 Ibid s 12(4).

10 Ibid s 12(3).

Where an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 18 is committed in the United Kingdom, proceedings for the offence may be taken at any place in the United Kingdom and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed at any such place: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 28(1), (2)(a).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iii) Terrorist Property/394. Failure to disclose information.

394. Failure to disclose information.

If a person (1) believes or suspects that another person has committed an offence relating to terrorist property under the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>1</sup>; and (2) bases his belief or suspicion on information which comes to his attention in the course of a trade, profession, business or employment, he commits an offence if he does not disclose to a constable<sup>2</sup> as soon as is reasonably practicable his belief or suspicion and the information on which it is based<sup>3</sup>. This does not apply if the information came to the person in the course of a business in the regulated sector<sup>4</sup>.

It is a defence for the defendant to prove<sup>5</sup> that he had a reasonable excuse for not making the disclosure<sup>6</sup>. In addition, where a person is in employment and his employer has established a procedure for making disclosures of his belief or suspicion and the information on which it is based, it is a defence for him to prove<sup>7</sup> that he disclosed those matters in accordance with the procedure<sup>8</sup>.

These provisions do not require disclosure by a professional legal adviser of information which he obtains in privileged circumstances, or a belief or suspicion based on information which he obtains in privileged circumstances<sup>9</sup>.

A person guilty of an offence under these provisions is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>10</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>11</sup>.

1     I.e. an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 ss 15-18: see PARA 390 et seq ante. For the purposes of head (1) in the text, a person is treated as having committed an offence under ss 15-18 if he has taken an action or been in possession of a thing, and he would have committed an offence under one of those provisions if he had been in the United Kingdom at the time when he took the action or was in possession of the thing: s 19(7). 'Action' and 'act' include an omission: s 121. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2     The reference to a constable includes a reference to a member of the staff of the Serious Organised Crime Agency authorised for this purpose by the Director General of that Agency: ibid s 19(7B) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 3, Sch 2 para 5(4); and amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 59, Sch 4 paras 125, 126).

3     Terrorism Act 2000 s 19(1), (2).

In these circumstances a person may make disclosure to a constable (or a person authorised for this purpose by the Director General of the Serious Organised Crime Agency) notwithstanding any restriction on the disclosure of information imposed by statute or otherwise (eg by contract): see s 20(2), (3), (5) (as added and amended). See further s 20(4); and PARA 395 post.

Proceedings in England and Wales for these offences require the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 117(1), (2)(a). Where, however, it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence to which s 117 (as amended) applies has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, his consent for these purposes may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General: s 117(2A) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(2)). As to the effect of these restrictions see PARA 1071 post.

As to the inadmissibility of certain evidence see PARA 386 ante. For the additional right of appeal arising after a successful appeal against the Secretary of State's refusal to deproscribe a proscribed organisation see PARA 386 ante.

As to the application of the Terrorism Act 2000 ss 15-23 to the Director of Savings see PARA 390 note 1 ante. However, s 19 (as amended) does not apply to the following persons: (1) the Bank of England; (2) the Financial Services Authority; (3) a designated professional body within the meaning of the Financial Services Act 1986 s 362(2) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 494); (4) the Council of Lloyds; (5) the Registrar of Credit Unions for Northern Ireland; (6) the Assistant Registrar of Credit Unions for Northern Ireland; and (7) any person who is employed by, or otherwise engaged in, the service of any person referred to above for the purpose of performing such functions: Terrorism Act 2000 s 119(2); Terrorism Act 2000 (Crown Servants and Regulators) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/192, reg 4 (amended by the SI 2002/1555).

Corresponding provision in relation to the failure to disclose information is made for certain British overseas territories by the Anti-terrorism (Financial and Other Measures) (Overseas Territories) Order 2002, SI 2002/1822.

4 Terrorism Act 2000 s 19(1A) (added by the Anti-terrorism Crime and Security Act 2001 s 3, Sch 2 para 5(1), (3)). As to business in the regulated sector see the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A (as added) (see PARA 397 post): s 19(7A) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 Sch 2 para 5(1), (4)).

5 Note that this is not one of the defences to be proved by the defendant to which the Terrorism Act 2000 s 118 applies (which states that in relation to certain provisions of the Act where the defendant has the burden of proof that burden is only an evidential one): see s 118. It may therefore be inferred that the burden imposed on the defendant of proving the present defence is a legal (or persuasive) one, but that implication was not drawn in respect of the corresponding issue in the context of s 11 (see PARA 387 ante): see Sheldrake v DPP, A-G's Reference (No 4 of 2002) [2004] UKHL 43, [2005] 1 AC 264, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 450. See further PARA 1368 et seq post.

6 Terrorism Act 2000 s 19(3).

7 See note 5 supra.

8 Terrorism Act 2000 s 19(4).

9 Ibid s 19(5). For these purposes, information is obtained by an adviser in privileged circumstances if it comes to him, otherwise than with a view to furthering a criminal purpose: (1) from a client or a client's representative, in connection with the provision of legal advice by the adviser to the client; (2) from a person seeking legal advice from the adviser, or from the person's representative; or (3) from any person, for the purpose of actual or contemplated legal proceedings: s 19(6).

10 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

11 Terrorism Act 2000 s 19(8). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

394 Failure to disclose information

NOTES 2, 7--In the Terrorism Act 2000 ss 19-21B 'employment' means any employment (whether paid or unpaid) and includes (1) work under a contract for services or as an office-holder, (2) work experience provided pursuant to a training course or programme or in the course of training for employment, and (3) voluntary work: s 22A(a) (added by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 77(3)). 'Employer' has a corresponding meaning: Terrorism Act 2000 s 22A(b). See also the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 77(4).

NOTE 3--Where an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 19 is committed in the United Kingdom, proceedings for the offence may be taken at any place in the United Kingdom and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed at any such place: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 28(1), (2)(a).

TEXT AND NOTE 3--Terrorism Act 2000 s 19(1) amended: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 77(1).

NOTE 3--After 'committed' read 'outside the United Kingdom or': Terrorism Act 2000 s 117(2A) (amended by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 29).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iii) Terrorist Property/395. Permitted disclosure of information.

395. Permitted disclosure of information.

The disclosure of information is permitted in two cases notwithstanding any restriction on its disclosure by statute or otherwise (for example, by contract)<sup>1</sup>.

The first case is where a person believes or suspects that another person has committed an offence relating to terrorist property under the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>2</sup>, and bases his belief or suspicion on information which comes to his attention in the course of a trade, profession, business or employment<sup>3</sup>. In this case he may disclose such information to a constable<sup>4</sup>.

The second case is that a person may disclose to a constable<sup>5</sup> (1) a suspicion or belief that any money or other property is terrorist property or is derived from terrorist property<sup>6</sup>; and (2) any matter on which the suspicion or belief is based<sup>7</sup>.

Where an employee's employer has established a procedure for the making of disclosures of the two kinds mentioned above<sup>8</sup>, these permissions to disclose have effect in relation to that person as if any reference to disclosure to a constable included a reference to disclosure in accordance with the procedure<sup>9</sup>.

Certain public authorities<sup>10</sup> are authorised to disclose information<sup>11</sup> for the following purposes:

- 414 (a) any criminal investigation<sup>12</sup> whatever which is being or may be carried out, whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere;
- 415 (b) any criminal proceedings<sup>13</sup> whatever which have been or may be initiated, whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere;
- 416 (c) the initiation or bringing to an end of any such investigation or proceedings;
- 417 (d) facilitating a determination of whether any such investigation or proceedings should be initiated or brought to an end<sup>14</sup>.

The Secretary of State<sup>15</sup> may give a direction prohibiting the disclosure of such information for the purposes of any overseas proceedings<sup>16</sup> if it appears to him that they relate to a matter in respect of which it would be more appropriate for any jurisdiction or investigation to be exercised or carried out by a court or other authority of the United Kingdom or of a third country<sup>17</sup>. A person who, knowing of any direction, discloses any information in contravention of that direction is guilty of an offence<sup>18</sup>.

2 ie an offence under ibid ss 15-18: see PARA 390 et seq ante.

3 See ibid ss 19(1), (2); and PARA 394 ante.

4 Ibid s 20(2). See PARA 395 ante.

5 The reference to a constable in ibid s 20 includes a reference to a member of the staff of the Serious Organised Crime Agency authorised for this purpose by the Director General of that Agency: s 20(5) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 3, Sch 2 para 5(1), (5); and amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 59, Sch 4 paras 125, 127).

6 For the meaning of 'terrorist property' see PARA 393 ante. For the meaning of 'property' see PARA 388 note 2 ante.

7 Terrorism Act 2000 s 20(1). As to the application of the Terrorism Act 2000 ss 15-23 to the Director of Savings see PARA 390 note 1 ante.

8 le disclosures of the kinds mentioned in ibid ss 19(2), 20(1).

9 Ibid s 20(4).

10 'Public authority' includes a court or tribunal and any person certain of whose functions are functions of a public nature, but does not include either House of Parliament or a person exercising functions in connection with proceedings in Parliament: Human Rights Act 1998 s 6(3); definition applied by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 20(1). As to the disclosure of information held by revenue departments see s 19.

11 'Information' includes: (1) documents; and (2) in relation to a disclosure authorised by a provision to which ibid s 17 applies, anything that falls to be treated as information for the purposes of that provision: s 20(1). For the provisions to which s 17 applies see s 17(1), Sch 4 (amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 278(2), Sch 26; the Communications Act 2003 s 406(7), Sch 19(1); the Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act 2003 s 34, Sch 4 paras 119, 120; the Pensions Act 2004 s 320, Sch 13 Pt 1; and the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 25(1), Sch 2 para 31). As to codes and agreements about the retention of communications data see the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 Pt 11 (ss 102-106); and PARA 429 ante.

12 'Criminal investigation' means an investigation of any criminal conduct, including an investigation of alleged or suspected criminal conduct and an investigation of whether criminal conduct has taken place: ibid s 20(1). 'Conduct' includes acts, omissions and statements; and 'criminal conduct' means any conduct which: (1) constitutes one or more criminal offences under the law of a part of the United Kingdom; or (2) is, or corresponds to, conduct which, if it all took place in a particular part of the United Kingdom, would constitute one or more offences under the law of that part of the United Kingdom: s 20(3). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

13 Proceedings outside the United Kingdom are not to be taken to be criminal proceedings for these purposes unless the conduct with which the defendant in those proceedings is charged is criminal conduct or conduct which, to a substantial extent, consists of criminal conduct: ibid s 20(2).

14 Ibid s 17(2). The Treasury may by order made by statutory instrument add any provision contained in any subordinate legislation to the provisions to which s 17 applies, provided a draft of it has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House: s 17(3), (4). No disclosure of information may be made by virtue of s 17 unless the public authority by which the disclosure is made is satisfied that the making of the disclosure is proportionate to what is sought to be achieved by it: s 17(5). Nothing in s 17 is to be taken to prejudice any power to disclose information which otherwise exists: s 17(6). The information that may be disclosed by virtue of s 17 includes information obtained before the commencement of s 17: s 17(7).

15 See note 17 infra.

16 The following are overseas proceedings for these purposes: (1) criminal proceedings which are taking place, or will or may take place, in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom; (2) a criminal investigation which is being, or will or may be, conducted by an authority of any such country or territory: Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 18(7).

17 See ibid s 18(1)-(3), (8), (9). Section 18 applies to the disclosure of information obtained by or on behalf of the Director of the Assets Recovery Agency or the Lord Advocate under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 390 et seq) disclosed for the purposes of: (1) any criminal investigation which is being or may be carried out, whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere; (2) any criminal proceedings which have been or may be started, whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere: see s 442.

A direction under the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 18 may not have the effect of prohibiting the making of any disclosure by a Minister of the Crown or by the Treasury or the making of any disclosure in pursuance of a Community obligation: s 18(4). A direction may prohibit the making of disclosures absolutely or in such cases, or subject to such conditions as to consent or otherwise, as may be specified in it; and must be published or otherwise issued by the Secretary of State in such manner as he considers appropriate for bringing it to the attention of persons likely to be affected by it: s 18(5).

18 Ibid s 18(6). A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both, and on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both: s 18(6). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iii) Terrorist Property/396. Co-operation with the police.

396. Co-operation with the police.

A person does not commit an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>1</sup> if he is acting with the express consent of a constable<sup>2</sup>. Nor does a person commit an offence<sup>3</sup> by involvement in a transaction or arrangement relating to money or other property<sup>4</sup> if he discloses to a constable (1) his suspicion or belief that the money or other property is terrorist property<sup>5</sup>; and (2) the information on which his suspicion or belief is based<sup>6</sup>. This exemption, however, only applies where a person makes a disclosure after he becomes concerned in the transaction concerned, on his own initiative, and as soon as is reasonably practicable<sup>7</sup>. Moreover, this exemption does not apply to a person if a constable forbids him to continue his involvement in the transaction or arrangement to which the disclosure relates, and he continues his involvement<sup>8</sup>.

It is a defence for a person charged with certain offences<sup>9</sup> to prove<sup>10</sup> that: (a) he intended to make a disclosure of his suspicion or belief that the money or other property was terrorist property, and the information on which his suspicion or belief was based, after becoming concerned in the transaction concerned, on his own initiative and as soon as reasonably practicable; and (b) there is a reasonable excuse for his failure to do so<sup>11</sup>.

Where a person is an employee and his employer has established a procedure for disclosures of the same kind as may be made to a constable as described above<sup>12</sup>, the above provisions have effect in relation to the employee as if any reference in them to a constable included a reference to disclosure in accordance with the procedure<sup>13</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iii) Terrorist Property/396A. Disclosure to the Serious Organised Crime Agency

396A. Disclosure to the Serious Organised Crime Agency

It is a defence to the offences in the Terrorism Act 2000 ss 15-18, if the person has made a disclosure to an authorised officer before becoming involved in a transaction or an arrangement relating to money or other property and the person acts with the consent of the authorised officer: see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 21ZA (ss 21ZA-21ZC, 21C added by SI 2007/3398). The Terrorism Act 2000 s 21ZB provides a further defence to the offences in ss 15-18 to cover those who become involved in a transaction or an arrangement and then make a disclosure, so long as there is a reasonable excuse for failure to make a disclosure in advance. Section 21ZC provides a defence for those who have a reasonable excuse for failure to make a disclosure. For these purposes 'authorised officer' means a member of the staff of the Serious Organised Crime Agency authorised for these purposes by the Director General of that Agency: see ss 21ZA(5), 21ZB(4).

Where a disclosure is made to a constable under Pt III (ss 14-23) (see PARA 390 et seq), or under s 21 (see PARA 395), the constable must disclose it in full to an authorised member of staff of the Serious Organised Crime Agency: s 21C.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iii) Terrorist Property/397. Failure to disclose information obtained in the regulated sector.

397. Failure to disclose information obtained in the regulated sector.

Special rules apply to the non-disclosure by a person of information or other matter which came to him in the course of a business in the regulated sector<sup>1</sup>. A business is in the regulated sector to the extent that it engages in any of the following activities in the United Kingdom<sup>2</sup>:

- 418 (1) a regulated activity<sup>3</sup>;
- 419 (2) the activities of the National Savings Bank<sup>4</sup>;
- 420 (3) any activity carried on for the purpose of raising money authorised to be raised under the National Loans Act 1968 under the auspices of the Director of Savings<sup>5</sup>;
- 421 (4) the business of operating a bureau de change, transmitting money (or any representation of monetary value) by any means or cashing cheques which are made payable to customers<sup>6</sup>;
- 422 (5) any of the specified activities in the Banking Consolidation Directive<sup>7</sup>, when carried on by way of business, ignoring an activity described in any of heads (1) to (4) above;
- 423 (6) estate agency work<sup>8</sup>;
- 424 (7) operating a casino by way of business<sup>9</sup>;
- 425 (8) the activities of a person appointed to act as an insolvency practitioner<sup>10</sup>;
- 426 (9) the provision by way of business of advice about the tax affairs of another person by a body corporate or unincorporate or, in the case of a sole practitioner, by an individual<sup>11</sup>;
- 427 (10) the provision by way of business of accountancy services by a body corporate or unincorporate or, in the case of a sole practitioner, by an individual<sup>12</sup>;
- 428 (11) the provision by way of business of audit services by a person who is eligible for appointment as a company auditor<sup>13</sup>;
- 429 (12) the provision by way of business of legal services by a body corporate or unincorporate or, in the case of a sole practitioner, by an individual and which involves participation in a financial or real property transaction (whether by assisting in the planning or execution of any such transaction or otherwise by acting for, or on behalf of, a client in any such transaction)<sup>14</sup>;
- 430 (13) the provision by way of business of services in relation to the formation, operation or management of a company or a trust<sup>15</sup>;
- 431 (14) the activity of dealing in goods of any description by way of business (including dealing as an auctioneer) whenever a transaction involves accepting a total cash payment of 15,000 euro or more<sup>16</sup>.

A business is not in the regulated sector to the extent that it engages in any of the following activities:

- 432 (a) the issue of withdrawable share capital within the limit set by the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 by a society registered under that Act<sup>17</sup>;
- 433 (b) the acceptance of deposits from the public within the limit set by that Act by such a society<sup>18</sup>;

- 434 (c) the issue of withdrawable share capital within the limit set by the Industrial and Provident Societies Act (Northern Ireland) 1969 by a society registered under that Act<sup>19</sup>;
- 435 (d) the acceptance of deposits from the public within the limit set by that Act by such a society<sup>20</sup>;
- 436 (e) activities carried on by the Bank of England<sup>21</sup>;
- 437 (f) any activity in respect of which an exemption order under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 has effect if it is carried on by a person who is for the time being specified in the order or falls within a class of persons so specified<sup>22</sup>;
- 438 (g) the regulated activities of arranging deals in investments or advising on investments, in so far as the investment consists of rights under a regulated mortgage contract<sup>23</sup>;
- 439 (h) the regulated activities of dealing in investments as agent, arranging deals in investments, managing investments or advising on investments, in so far as the investment consists of rights under, or any right to or interest in, a contract of insurance which is not a qualifying contract of insurance<sup>24</sup>.

A person commits an offence<sup>25</sup> if: (i) he knows or suspects, or has reasonable grounds for knowing or suspecting, that another person has committed an offence relating to terrorist property under the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>26</sup>; (ii) the information or other matter on which his knowledge or suspicion, or which gives him reasonable grounds for such knowledge or suspicion, came to him in the course of a business in the regulated sector<sup>27</sup>; and (iii) he does not disclose the information or other matter to a constable<sup>28</sup> or a nominated officer<sup>29</sup> as soon as is practicable after it comes to him<sup>30</sup>.

A person does not commit such an offence if he has a reasonable excuse for the non-disclosure, or he is a professional legal adviser and the information or other matter came to him in privileged circumstances<sup>31</sup>.

In deciding whether a person committed such an offence the court must consider whether he followed any relevant guidance which was at the time concerned issued by a supervisory authority<sup>32</sup> or any other appropriate body<sup>33</sup>, approved by the Treasury, and published in a manner it approved as appropriate in its opinion to bring the guidance to the attention of persons likely to be affected by it<sup>34</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>35</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>36</sup>.

1 As to the disclosure of information obtained in the course of other trade, profession, business or employment see PARA 394 ante.

2 Terrorism Act 2000 s 21A(10), Sch 3A para 1 (1) (s 21A, Sch 3A both added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 3, Sch 2 para 5(1), (2), (6); and the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A Pt 1 substituted by the Terrorism Act 2000 (Business in the Regulated Sector and Supervisory Authorities) Order 2003, SI 2003/3076, art 2, Schedule). The Treasury has power to amend the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A Pts 1, 2 (as added): see Sch 3A para 5(1) (as so added). Such an amendment must be made by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Sch 3A para 5(2) (as so added). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

Corresponding provision in relation to the failure to disclose information obtained in the regulated sector is made for certain British overseas territories by the Anti-terrorism (Financial and Other Measures) (Overseas Territories) Order 2002, SI 2002/1822.

3 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A para 1(1)(a) (as added and substituted: see note 2 supra). Regulated activities are: (1) accepting deposits; (2) effecting or carrying out contracts of long-term insurance when carried on by a person who has received official authorisation pursuant to the EC Directive concerning life assurance 2002/83 (OJ L345, 19.12.2002, p 1) art 4 or art 51; (3) dealing in investments as principal or agent; (4) arranging deals in investments; (5) managing investments; (6) safeguarding and administering investments; (7) sending dematerialised instructions; (8) establishing (and taking other steps in relation to) collective investment schemes; (9) advising on investments; (10) issuing electronic money: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A paras 1(2), 3(1), (4) (as added and substituted: see note 2 supra). Heads (1), (g), (h) in the text must be read in conjunction with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22, Sch 2 and any relevant order under s 22 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARAS 84-85): Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A para 3(1), (2) (as so added and substituted).

23 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A para 2(g) (as added and substituted: see note 2 supra). As from 6 April 2007 this provision is amended so as to refer also to rights under a regulated home reversion plan or rights under a regulated home purchase plan: see Sch 3A para 2(g) (as so added and substituted; and prospectively amended by the Terrorism Act 2000 (Business in the Regulated Sector) Order 2006, SI 2006/2384).

24 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A para 2(h) (as added and substituted: see note 2 supra).

25 Ibid s 21A(1) (as added: see note 2 supra). Proceedings in England and Wales for such an offence require the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 117(1), (2)(a). Where, however, it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence to which s 117 (as amended) applies has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, his consent for these purposes may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General: s 117(2A) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(2)). As to the effect of this limitation see PARA 1071 post.

As to the application of the Terrorism Act 2000 ss 15-23 to the Director of Savings see PARA 390 note 1 ante.

26 Ibid s 21A(1), (2) (as added: see note 2 supra). The offences in question are those under ss 15-18: see PARA 390 et seq ante. A person is to be taken to have committed such an offence if he has taken an action or been in possession of a thing, and he would have committed the offence if he had been in the United Kingdom at the time when he took the action or was in possession of the thing: s 21A(11) (as so added). For the meaning of 'action' see PARA 394 note 1 ante.

27 Ibid s 21A(1), (3).

28 The reference to a constable includes a reference to a member of the Serious Organised Crime Agency authorised for this purpose by the Director General of that Agency: ibid s 21A(14) (as added (see note 2 supra); and amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 59, Sch 4 paras 125, 128).

29 A disclosure to a nominated officer is a disclosure which is made to a person nominated by the alleged offender's employer to receive disclosures under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 21A (as added), and is made in the course of the alleged offender's employment and in accordance with the procedure established by the employer for the purpose: s 21A(7) (as added: see note 2 supra).

30 Ibid s 21A(1), (4) (as added: see note 2 supra).

31 Ibid s 21A(5) (as added: see note 2 supra). Information or other matter comes to a professional legal adviser in privileged circumstances if it is communicated or given to him: (1) by a client of his (or by a representative of a client) in connection with the giving by the adviser of legal advice to the client; (2) by a person (or by his representative) seeking legal advice from the adviser; or (3) by a person in connection with legal proceedings or contemplated legal proceedings: s 21A(8) (as so added). But this does not apply to information or other matter which is communicated or given with a view to furthering a criminal purpose: s 21A(9) (as so added).

32 Each of the following is a supervisory authority: the Bank of England; the Financial Services Authority; the Council of Lloyd's; the Office of Fair Trading; a body which is a designated professional body for the purposes of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt 20 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 749); the Pensions Regulator; the Gambling Commission: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A para 4(1) (Sch 3A as added (see note 2 supra); Sch 3A para 4 amended by the Enterprise Act 2002 s 278(1), Sch 25 para 41; the Pensions Act 2004 s 319(1), Sch 12 para 78; the Terrorism Act 2000 (Business in the Regulated Sector and Supervisory Authorities) Order 2003, SI 2003/3076, art 3; and the Gambling Act 2005 s 356(1), Sch 16 para 13).

The Secretary of State is also a supervisory authority in the exercise, in relation to a person carrying on a business in the regulated sector, of his functions under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A para 4(2) (Sch 3A as so added). The Treasury is also a supervisory authority in the exercise, in relation to a person carrying on a business in the regulated sector, of its functions under the enactments relating to companies or insolvency or under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 3A para 4(3) (Sch 3A as so added). As to the functions of the Secretary of State and the Treasury under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 see generally FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS.

33 An appropriate body is any body which regulates or is representative of any trade, profession, business or employment carried on by the alleged offender: Terrorism Act 2000 s 21A(13) (as added: see note 2 supra).

34 Ibid s 21A(6) (as added: see note 2 supra).

35 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

36 Terrorism Act 2000 s 21A(12) (as added: see note 2 supra). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

(iv) Terrorist Investigations

A. CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS

407. Meaning of 'terrorist investigation'.

For the purposes of the legislation relating to terrorism<sup>1</sup>, 'terrorist investigation' means an investigation of:

- 443 (1) the commission, preparation or instigation of acts<sup>2</sup> of terrorism<sup>3</sup>;
- 444 (2) an act which appears to have been done for the purposes of terrorism<sup>4</sup>;
- 445 (3) the resources of a proscribed organisation<sup>5</sup>;
- 446 (4) the possibility of making an order adding an organisation to the list of proscribed organisations, removing an organisation from the list, or amending the list in some other way<sup>6</sup>; or
- 447 (5) the commission, preparation or instigation of an offence under the legislation relating to terrorism<sup>7</sup>.

1 Ie the Terrorism Act 2000 and the Terrorism Act 2006 Pt 1 (ss 1-20) (see PARA 383 et seq ante).

2 For the meaning of 'act' see PARA 394 note 1 ante.

3 Terrorism Act 2000 s 32(a). For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante.

4 Ibid s 32(b). 'Action taken for the purposes of terrorism includes a reference to action taken for the benefit of a proscribed organisation': s 1(5). For the meaning of 'action' see PARA 394 note 1 ante.

5 Ibid s 32(c). As to proscribed organisations see PARA 386 ante.

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iv) Terrorist Investigations/A. CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS/408. Cordoned areas.

408. Cordoned areas.

Police officers have the power, for a limited period, to designate and demarcate a specified area as a cordoned area for the purposes of a terrorist investigation<sup>1</sup>.

A designation of a cordoned area<sup>2</sup> may only be made if the person making it considers it expedient for the purposes of a terrorist investigation<sup>3</sup>. If it is made orally, the person making it must confirm it in writing as soon as reasonably practicable<sup>4</sup>. The person making the designation must arrange for the demarcation of the cordoned area, so far as reasonably practicable, by means of tape marked 'police', or in such other manner as a constable considers appropriate<sup>5</sup>.

Normally, a designation<sup>6</sup> may only be made, in an area wholly or partly within a police area, by an officer for the police area who is of at least the rank of superintendent<sup>7</sup>. Where, however, a constable who is not of that rank considers it necessary by reason of urgency to make a designation, he may do so<sup>8</sup>. A constable who makes a designation in such circumstances must as soon as reasonably practicable make a written record of the time at which the designation was made, and ensure that a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent is informed<sup>9</sup>. An officer who is so informed must confirm the designation or cancel it with effect from such time as he may direct; if he cancels the designation, he must make a written record of the cancellation and the reason for it<sup>10</sup>.

A designation<sup>11</sup> has effect during the period beginning at the time when it was made and ending with a date or at a time specified in the designation<sup>12</sup>. That date or time must not occur after the end of the 14-day period beginning with the date on which the designation is made<sup>13</sup>. However, the period during which a designation has effect may be extended in writing from time to time by the person who made it or by another police officer of at least the rank of superintendent<sup>14</sup>. An extension must specify the additional period during which the designation is to have effect<sup>15</sup>. A designation does not have effect after the end of a 28-day period beginning with the day on which it is made<sup>16</sup>.

A constable in uniform (or a community support officer designated for these purposes)<sup>17</sup> may:

- 448 (1) order a person in a cordoned area to leave it immediately<sup>18</sup>;
- 449 (2) order a person immediately to leave premises which are wholly or partly in or adjacent to a cordoned area<sup>19</sup>;
- 450 (3) order the driver or person in charge of a vehicle in a cordoned area to move it from the area immediately<sup>20</sup>;
- 451 (4) arrange for the removal of a vehicle from a cordoned area<sup>21</sup>;
- 452 (5) arrange for the movement of a vehicle within a cordoned area<sup>22</sup>;
- 453 (6) prohibit or restrict access to a cordoned area by pedestrians or vehicles<sup>23</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he fails to comply with such an order, prohibition or restriction<sup>24</sup>. It is, however, a defence for a person charged with an offence under this provision to prove<sup>25</sup> that he had a reasonable excuse for his failure<sup>26</sup>. Such an offence is punishable on summary conviction with imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months<sup>27</sup> or a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale or both<sup>28</sup>.

UPDATE

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iv) Terrorist Investigations/A. CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS/409. Information and evidence: search for material other than excluded or special procedure material.

409. Information and evidence: search for material other than excluded or special procedure material.

For the purposes of a terrorist investigation<sup>1</sup>, a constable may apply to a justice of the peace for the issue of a warrant authorising any constable<sup>2</sup>:

- 454 (1) to enter premises<sup>3</sup> specified in the application<sup>4</sup>;
- 455 (2) to search the premises and any person found there<sup>5</sup>; and
- 456 (3) to seize and retain any relevant material which is found on a search under head (2) above<sup>6</sup>.

For the purposes of head (3) above, material is relevant if the constable has reasonable grounds for believing that (a) it is likely to be of substantial value, whether by itself or together with other material, to a terrorist investigation; and (b) it must be seized in order to prevent it from being concealed, lost, damaged, altered or destroyed<sup>7</sup>.

The warrant does not authorise the seizure and retention of items subject to legal privilege<sup>8</sup>, or authorise a constable to require a person to remove any clothing in public except for headgear, footwear, an outer coat, a jacket or gloves<sup>9</sup>.

A justice of the peace may grant an application for a warrant if satisfied:

- 457 (i) that the warrant is sought for the purposes of a terrorist investigation<sup>10</sup>;
- 458 (ii) that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is material on premises to which the application relates which is likely to be of substantial value, whether by itself or together with other material, to a terrorist investigation and which does not consist of or include excepted material<sup>11</sup>;
- 459 (iii) that the issue of a warrant is likely to be necessary in the circumstances of the case<sup>12</sup>; and
- 460 (iv) in the case of an application for an all premises warrant, that it is not reasonably practicable to specify in the application all the premises which the person so specified occupies or controls and which might need to be searched<sup>13</sup>.

If, however, a justice is not satisfied that the issue of a warrant is likely to be necessary in the circumstances of the case, but is satisfied of the conditions in heads (i) and (ii) above, the justice may nevertheless grant an application for a specific premises warrant if the application is made by a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent and the application does not relate to residential premises<sup>14</sup>. Where a warrant is issued by virtue of this provision<sup>15</sup> the powers to enter and search referred to above are exercisable only within a 24-hour period beginning with the time when the warrant is issued<sup>16</sup>.

Where an application for an all premises warrant is made<sup>17</sup> by a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent<sup>18</sup> and the justice to whom the application is made is not satisfied that the issue of a warrant is likely to be necessary in the circumstances of the case<sup>19</sup>, the justice may grant the application if satisfied of the other matters in relation to which he is required to be satisfied<sup>20</sup> before granting an application for a warrant<sup>21</sup>.

A police officer of at least the rank of superintendent may by a written authority signed by him authorise a search of specified premises wholly or partly within a cordoned area<sup>22</sup>. Where, however, a constable not of that rank considers it necessary by reason of urgency, the constable may authorise such a search<sup>23</sup>. An authorisation must not be given unless the person giving it has reasonable grounds for believing that there is material to be found on the premises which is likely to be of substantial value, whether by itself or together with other material, to a terrorist investigation, and does not consist of or include excepted material<sup>24</sup>. An authorisation authorises any constable: (A) to enter the premises specified in the authority; (B) to search the premises and any person found there; and (C) to seize and retain any relevant material which is found on such a search<sup>25</sup>.

The powers under head (A) or head (B) above may be exercised on one or more occasions, and at any time during the period when the designation of the cordoned area has effect<sup>26</sup>. An authorisation cannot authorise the seizure and retention of items subject to legal privilege, nor authorise a constable to require a person to remove any clothing in public except for headgear, footwear, an outer coat, a jacket or gloves<sup>27</sup>. A person commits an offence if he wilfully obstructs a search under an authorisation<sup>28</sup>. The offence is punishable on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months<sup>29</sup> or a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale or both<sup>30</sup>.

NOTE 28--After 'committed' read 'outside the United Kingdom or': Terrorism Act 2000 s 117(2A) (amended by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 29).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iv) Terrorist Investigations/A. CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS/410. Excluded material and special procedure material: order for production and access.

410. Excluded material and special procedure material: order for production and access.

A constable, for the purposes of a terrorist investigation<sup>1</sup>, may apply to a circuit judge<sup>2</sup> for an order (a 'production order') relating to particular material, or material of a particular kind, which consists of or includes excluded material or special procedure material<sup>3</sup>. An order may require a specified person:

- 461 (1) to produce to a constable within a specified period for seizure and retention any material which he has in his possession, custody or power and to which the application relates<sup>4</sup>;
- 462 (2) to give a constable access to any material of the kind mentioned in head (1) above within a specified period<sup>5</sup>;
- 463 (3) to state to the best of his knowledge and belief the location of material to which the application relates if it is not in, and it will not come into, his possession, custody or power within the period specified under head (1) or head (2) above<sup>6</sup>.

An order may specify a person only if he appears to the judge<sup>7</sup> to have in his possession, custody or power any of the material to which the application relates; and a period specified in an order must be the period of seven days beginning with the date of the order unless it appears to the judge that a different period would be appropriate in the particular circumstances of the application<sup>8</sup>. Where the judge<sup>9</sup> makes an order under head (2) above (that is, an order requiring a specified person to give access to specified material) in relation to material on any premises, he may, on the application of a constable, order any person who appears to the judge to be entitled to grant entry to the premises to allow any constable to enter the premises to obtain access to the material<sup>10</sup>.

A circuit judge<sup>11</sup> may grant an application for a production order if satisfied that the material to which the application relates consists of or includes excluded material or special procedure material, and does not include items subject to legal privilege<sup>12</sup>, and that the specified conditions are satisfied in respect of that material<sup>13</sup>. The conditions are:

- 464 (a) that the order is sought for the purposes of a terrorist investigation<sup>14</sup>, and there are reasonable grounds for believing that the material is likely to be of substantial value, whether by itself or together with other material, to a terrorist investigation<sup>15</sup>; and
- 465 (b) there are reasonable grounds for believing that it is in the public interest that the material should be produced or that access to it should be given, having regard to the benefit likely to accrue to a terrorist investigation if the material is obtained, and to the circumstances under which the person concerned has any of the material in his possession, custody or power<sup>16</sup>.

A production order may be made under the above provision in relation to: (i) material consisting of or including excluded or special procedure material which is expected to come into existence within the period of 28 days beginning with the date of the order<sup>17</sup>; (ii) a person who the circuit judge<sup>18</sup> thinks is likely to have any of the material to which the application relates in his possession, custody or power within that period<sup>19</sup>.

In such a case, the order must require the specified person to notify a named constable as soon as is reasonably practicable after any material to which the application relates comes into his possession, custody or power<sup>20</sup>.

The requirement to produce material is converted into an obligation to produce the material referred to in head (i) above which comes into that person's possession, custody or power<sup>21</sup>; the requirement to state the location of material to which the application relates is a requirement to do so within a 28-day period beginning with the date of the order<sup>22</sup>; and the specified period for the performance of the requirements to produce material, give access to it and state its location set out above is a requirement to do so within the seven-day period beginning with the date of notification (as opposed to the order) unless it appears to the judge that a different period would be appropriate in the particular circumstances of the application<sup>23</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'terrorist investigation' see PARA 407 ante.

2 Or, as from a day to be appointed, to a District Judge (Magistrates' Court): see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 37, Sch 5 paras 5-10 (prospectively amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 65, Sch 4 para 9). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

3 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 para 5(1), (2). The order does not confer any right to production of, or access to, items subject to legal privilege and has effect notwithstanding any restriction on the disclosure of information imposed by statute or otherwise: Sch 5 para 8(1). For the meaning of 'excluded material' see PARA 875 post; definition applied by Sch 5 para 4(a). For the meaning of 'special procedure material' see PARA 876 post; definition applied by Sch 5 para 4(c).

An order may be made in relation to material in the possession, custody or power of a government department: Sch 5 para 9(1). If it is, it must be served as if the proceedings were civil proceedings against the department, and it may require any officer of the department, whether named in the order or not, who may for the time being have in his possession, custody or power the material concerned, to comply with the order: Sch 5 para 9(2). 'Government department' means an authorised government department for the purposes of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 (see CROWN PROCEEDINGS AND CROWN PRACTICE): Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 para 9(3).

An order of a circuit judge (or, as from a day to be appointed, District Judge (Magistrates' Courts)) has effect as if it were an order of the Crown Court: Sch 5 para 10(1) (prospectively amended: see note 2 supra).

Criminal Procedure Rules may make provision about proceedings relating to an order, including the variation or discharge of an order: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 5 para 10(2), (3) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 389(1), (3)).

NOTE 16--See R (on the application of Malik) v Crown Court at Manchester [2008] EWHC 1362 (Admin), [2008] 4 All ER 403, DC.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iv) Terrorist Investigations/A. CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS/411. Search for excluded or special procedure material.

411. Search for excluded or special procedure material.

For the purposes of a terrorist investigation<sup>1</sup>, a constable may apply to a circuit judge<sup>2</sup> for the issue of a warrant authorising any constable:

- 466 (1) to enter the premises specified in the application<sup>3</sup>;
- 467 (2) to search the premises and any person found there<sup>4</sup>; and
- 468 (3) to seize and retain any relevant material which is found on a search under head (2) above<sup>5</sup>.

Material is relevant for the purposes of head (3) above if the constable has reasonable grounds for believing that it is likely to be of substantial value, whether by itself or together with other material, to a terrorist investigation<sup>6</sup>.

The warrant does not authorise the seizure and retention of items subject to legal privilege<sup>7</sup> or authorise a constable to require a person to remove any clothing in public except for headgear, footwear, an outer coat, a jacket or gloves<sup>8</sup>.

A circuit judge<sup>9</sup> may grant an application for a specific premises warrant if satisfied that an order<sup>10</sup> in relation to material on the premises specified in the application has not been complied with<sup>11</sup>. Such a judge<sup>12</sup> may also grant such an application if satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is material on premises specified in the application which consists of or includes excluded material or special procedure material<sup>13</sup> but does not include items subject to legal privilege, and that the specified conditions are satisfied<sup>14</sup>.

The specified conditions are that the warrant is sought for the purposes of a terrorist investigation, and the material is likely to be of substantial value, whether by itself or together with other material, to a terrorist investigation<sup>15</sup>, and that it is not appropriate to make an order for the production of excluded material<sup>16</sup> in relation to the material because:

- 469 (a) it is not practicable to communicate with any person entitled to produce the material<sup>17</sup>;
- 470 (b) it is not practicable to communicate with any person entitled to grant access to the material or entitled to grant entry to the premises to which the application for the warrant relates<sup>18</sup>; or
- 471 (c) a terrorist investigation may be seriously prejudiced unless a constable can secure immediate access to the material<sup>19</sup>.

A circuit judge or a District Judge (Magistrates' Courts) may grant an application for an all premises warrant<sup>20</sup> if satisfied that an order for the production of excluded material<sup>21</sup> has not been complied with<sup>22</sup> and that the person specified in the application is also specified in the order<sup>23</sup>, or if satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that there is material on premises to which the application relates which consists of or includes excluded material or special procedure material but does not include items subject to legal privilege<sup>24</sup> and that the conditions in connection with applications for specific premises warrants<sup>25</sup> are met<sup>26</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iv) Terrorist Investigations/A. CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS/412. Explanation of material seized.

412. Explanation of material seized.

A constable may apply to a circuit judge<sup>1</sup> for an order requiring any person specified in the order to provide an explanation of any material seized in pursuance of a warrant<sup>2</sup>, or produced or made available to a constable under the relevant provisions of the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>3</sup>. An order does not require any person to disclose any information which he would be entitled to refuse to disclose on grounds of legal professional privilege in proceedings in the High Court<sup>4</sup>.

A statement by a person in response to a requirement imposed by an order may be made orally or in writing, and may be used in evidence against him only on a prosecution for the offence described below<sup>5</sup>.

A person commits an offence if, in purported compliance with an order<sup>6</sup> requiring him to give information, he: (1) makes a statement which he knows to be false or misleading in a material particular; or (2) recklessly makes a statement which is false or misleading in a material particular<sup>7</sup>. A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>8</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>9</sup>.

1 Or, as from a day to be appointed, a District Judge (Magistrates' Courts): see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 37, Sch 5 paras 13, 14 (prospectively amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 65(2), Sch 4 para 9). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

2 I.e. a warrant under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 37, Sch 5 para 1 or 11: see PARAS 409, 411 ante.

3 Ibid Sch 5 para 13(1). The relevant provisions referred to in the text are those contained in Sch 5 para 5: see PARA 410 ante. Schedule 5 para 10 (prospectively amended) (see PARA 410 ante) applies to orders under Sch 5 para 13: Sch 5 para 13(5).

4 Ibid Sch 5 para 13(2). However, a lawyer may be required to provide the name and address of his client: Sch 5 para 13(3). For the meaning of 'items subject to legal privilege' see PARA 873 note 8 post; definition applied by Sch 5 para 4(b).

5 Ibid Sch 5 para 13(4). The offence referred to in the text is the offence under Sch 5 para 14: see the text and notes 7-9 infra.

6 I.e. an order under ibid Sch 5 para 13: see the text and notes 1-5 supra.

7 Ibid Sch 5 para 14(1). Proceedings for such an offence require the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 117(1), (2)(a). Where, however, it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence to which s 117 (as amended) applies has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, his consent for these purposes may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General: s 117(2A) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(2)). As to the effect of these restrictions see PARA 1071 post.

8 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

413. Urgent cases.

If a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent has reasonable grounds for believing that the case is one of great emergency, and that immediate action is necessary, that officer may by a written<sup>1</sup> order signed by him give to any constable the authority which may be given by a search warrant under the relevant provisions of the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>2</sup>. Where an order is made particulars of the case must be notified as soon as is reasonably practicable to the Secretary of State<sup>3</sup>. A person commits an offence if he wilfully obstructs a search under such an order<sup>4</sup>. The offence is punishable on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months<sup>5</sup> or a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale or both<sup>6</sup>.

If a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent has reasonable grounds for believing that the case is one of great emergency he may by a written notice signed by him require any person specified in the notice to provide an explanation of any material seized in pursuance of an order described above<sup>7</sup>. A person commits an offence if he fails to comply with such a notice<sup>8</sup>. It is a defence for a defendant to show that he had a reasonable excuse for his failure<sup>9</sup>. The offence is punishable on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>10</sup> or a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale or both<sup>11</sup>.

1 Unless the contrary intention appears, 'writing' includes typing, printing, lithography, photography and other modes of representing or reproducing words in a visible form, and expressions referring to writing are to be construed accordingly: Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1.

2 Terrorism Act 2000 s 37, Sch 5 para 15(1), (2). The reference to a search warrant is a reference to a search warrant under Sch 5 para 1 or 11: see PARAS 409, 411 ante. The additional powers of seizure under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 ss 50, 51 (see PARAS 890-891 post) apply to a seizure under the powers conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000: Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 ss 50(5), 51(5), Sch 1 paras 71, 83. The obligation to return excluded and special procedure material under s 55 (see PARA 894 post) applies to the power of seizure under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 1 para 15, so far only as the power in question is conferred by reference to Sch 5 para 1 (see PARA 409 ante): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 Sch 1 para 109. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iv) Terrorist Investigations/A. CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS/414. Obligation to disclose information about acts of terrorism.

414. Obligation to disclose information about acts of terrorism.

Where a person has information which he knows or believes might be of material assistance (1) in preventing the commission by another person of an act of terrorism<sup>1</sup>; or (2) in securing the apprehension, prosecution or conviction of another person, in the United Kingdom<sup>2</sup>, for an offence involving the commission, preparation or instigation of an act of terrorism, he commits an offence if he does not disclose the information as soon as reasonably practicable to a constable<sup>3</sup>. It is a defence for the defendant to prove that he had a reasonable excuse for not making the disclosure<sup>4</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>5</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>6</sup>.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(iv) Terrorist Investigations/A. CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS/415. Disclosing information etc about a terrorist investigation.

415. Disclosing information etc about a terrorist investigation.

A person who knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that a constable is conducting or proposes to conduct a terrorist investigation<sup>1</sup> commits an offence if he discloses to another anything which is likely to prejudice the investigation, or interferes with material which is likely to be relevant to the investigation<sup>2</sup>.

A person who knows or has reasonable cause to suspect that a disclosure has been or will be made under any of a number of specified provisions<sup>3</sup> commits an offence if he discloses to another anything which is likely to prejudice an investigation resulting from the disclosure under that provision, or interferes<sup>4</sup> with material which is likely to be relevant to an investigation resulting from the disclosure under that provision<sup>5</sup>.

The above offences do not apply to a disclosure which is made by a professional legal adviser to his client or to his client's representative in connection with the provision of legal advice by the adviser to the client and not with a view to furthering a criminal purpose, or to any person for the purpose of actual or contemplated legal proceedings and not with a view to furthering a criminal purpose<sup>6</sup>.

It is a defence for a person charged with one of the above offences to prove: (1) that he did not know and had no reasonable cause to suspect that the disclosure or interference was likely to affect a terrorist investigation<sup>7</sup>; or (2) that he had a reasonable excuse for the disclosure or interference<sup>8</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding five years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>9</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>10</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'terrorist investigation' see PARA 407 ante. A reference to 'conducting a terrorist investigation' includes a reference to taking part in the conduct of, or assisting, a terrorist investigation: Terrorism Act 2000 s 39(8)(a).

2 Ibid s 39(1), (2). Proceedings for an offence under s 39 (as amended) require the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 117(1), (2)(a). Where, however, it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence to which s 117 (as amended) applies has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, his consent for these purposes may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General: s 117(2A) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(2)). As to the effect of these restrictions see PARA 1071 post.

As to the application of the Terrorism Act 2000 s 39 (as amended) to the Director of Savings see PARA 390 note 1 ante.

6 Terrorism Act 2000 s 39(6).

7 Ibid s 39(5)(a). See note 8 infra.

8 Ibid s 39(5)(b). Section 39(5)(a) (see head (1) in the text) is one of the provisions to which s 118(2) applies: see s 118(1), (5). Section 118(2) provides that if the person adduces evidence which is sufficient to raise an issue with respect to the matter the court or jury must assume that the defence is satisfied unless the prosecution proves beyond reasonable doubt that it is not. The fact that s 118(2) is not applied to s 39(5)(b) (see head (2) in the text) implies that the defendant has the legal (or persuasive) burden of proof in respect of it. As to the burden of proof see further PARA 1368 et seq post.

9 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). A constable may arrest without warrant a person whom he reasonably suspects to be a terrorist<sup>1</sup>. The Terrorism Act 2000 contains provisions relating to the detention and treatment of persons so arrested<sup>2</sup>.

1 Terrorism Act 2000 s 41(1). In Pt V (ss 40-53), 'terrorist' means a person who (1) has committed an offence under any of ss 11, 12, 15-18, 54, 56-63 (see PARAS 387-388, 390-393 ante, 439-447, 469 post); or (2) is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism: s 40(1)(a), (b). As to the meaning of 'act' see PARA 394 note 1 ante. For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante. The reference in head (2) supra to a person who has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism includes a reference to a person who has been, whether before or after the passing of the Terrorism Act 2000, concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism within the meaning given by s 1 (see PARA 383 ante): s 40(2).

A person who has the powers of a constable in one part of the United Kingdom may exercise this power of arrest in any part of the United Kingdom: s 41(9). See also PARA 451 post. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2 See ibid s 41(2), Sch 8; and PARAS 421-423 post.

UPDATE

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

420 Arrest without warrant

NOTE 1--Reasonable suspicion is judged according to the knowledge of the arresting officer, not his superiors: Raissi v Metropolitan Police Comr [2008] EWCA Civ 1237, [2009] QB 564, [2009] 3 All ER 14 (fact that person was brother of terrorist suspect did not constitute reasonable suspicion).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(v) Counter-terrorist Powers/421. Treatment of persons detained.

421. Treatment of persons detained.

A constable who arrests a person whom he reasonably suspects to be a terrorist<sup>1</sup> must take him as soon as reasonably practicable to the police station which the constable considers the most appropriate<sup>2</sup>. The Terrorism Act 2000 contains provisions relating to the treatment of persons so detained (and to the treatment of persons detained under the provisions relating to port and border controls)<sup>3</sup>. Further detailed provision is made by Code H: Code of Practice in connection with the Detention, Treatment and Questioning by Police Officers of Persons under Section 41 of, and Schedule 8 to, the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>4</sup>.

An authorised person<sup>5</sup> may take any steps necessary for photographing the detained person, measuring him or identifying him<sup>6</sup>. Where an interview by a police officer of a person detained takes place at a police station, it must be audio recorded (in accordance with the Code of Practice on Audio Recording of Interviews by Police Officers of Persons Detained in a Police Station under the Terrorism Act 2000<sup>7</sup>) and video recorded<sup>8</sup>.

A person detained at a police station is entitled, if he so requests, to have one named person<sup>9</sup> informed as soon as reasonably practicable that he is being detained there<sup>10</sup>, and to consult a solicitor as soon as reasonably practicable, privately and at any time<sup>11</sup>. An officer of at least the rank of superintendent may authorise a delay in so informing the person named and in permitting such consultation<sup>12</sup>. However, that delay cannot exceed the period of 48 hours beginning with the time of the detained person's arrest<sup>13</sup>. An authorisation of delay may be given only if the officer concerned has reasonable grounds for believing:

- 472 (1) in the case of an authorisation delaying informing a named person, that informing the named person of the detained person's detention will have any of the consequences listed in heads (a) to (g) below<sup>14</sup>; or
- 473 (2) in the case of an authorisation delaying consultation with a solicitor, that the exercise of that right at the time when the detained person desires to exercise it will have any of the consequences listed in heads (a) to (g) below<sup>15</sup>.

Those consequences are:

- 474 (a) interference with or harm to evidence of a serious offence<sup>16</sup>;
- 475 (b) interference with or physical injury to any person<sup>17</sup>;
- 476 (c) the alerting of persons who are suspected of having committed a serious offence but who have not been arrested for it<sup>18</sup>;
- 477 (d) the hindering of the recovery of property obtained as a result of a serious offence or in respect of which a forfeiture order could be made<sup>19</sup>;
- 478 (e) interference with the gathering of information about the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism<sup>20</sup>;
- 479 (f) the alerting of a person and thereby making it more difficult to prevent an act of terrorism<sup>21</sup>; and
- 480 (g) the alerting of a person and thereby making it more difficult to secure a person's apprehension, prosecution or conviction in connection with the commission, preparation or instigation of an act of terrorism<sup>22</sup>.

An officer may also authorise such 48-hour delay if he has reasonable grounds for believing that the detained person has benefited from his criminal conduct, and that the recovery of the value of the property constituting the benefit will be hindered by informing the named person of the detained person's detention (in the case of an authorisation to delay informing a named person) or the exercise of the right to consult a solicitor (in the case of an authorisation delaying the exercise of that right)<sup>23</sup>. Where the reason for authorising delay ceases to subsist there may be no further delay in permitting the exercise of the right in the absence of a further authorisation of delay<sup>24</sup>.

A police officer of at least the rank of Commander or Assistant Chief Constable may direct that a person detained at a police station who wishes to exercise the above right to consult a solicitor may do so only in the sight and hearing of a qualified officer<sup>25</sup>. Such a direction may be given only if the officer giving it has reasonable grounds for believing that, unless it is given, the exercise of the right by the detained person will have any of the consequences set out at in heads (a) to (g) above or will hinder the recovery of the value of the benefit obtained from the offence by the detained person<sup>26</sup>. Such a direction ceases to have effect once the reason for giving it ceases to subsist<sup>27</sup>.

Fingerprints or a non-intimate sample<sup>28</sup> may be taken from the detained person only if taken by a constable with the appropriate consent<sup>29</sup> given in writing<sup>30</sup>, or without that consent only if he is detained at a police station and a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent authorises the fingerprints or sample to be taken, or if he has been convicted of a recordable offence<sup>31</sup> and, where a non-intimate sample is to be taken, he was convicted of the offence on or after 10 April 1995<sup>32</sup>.

An officer may give such an authorisation if the officer reasonably suspects that the person has been involved in a specified terrorist offence<sup>33</sup>, and the officer reasonably believes that the fingerprints or sample will tend to confirm or disprove his involvement, or if the officer is satisfied that the taking of the fingerprints or sample from the person is necessary in order to assist in determining whether he is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism<sup>34</sup>.

An officer may also give authorisation for the taking of fingerprints (but not of a non-intimate sample) without the appropriate consent if he is satisfied that the fingerprints of the detained person will facilitate the ascertainment of that person's identity, and that person has refused to identify himself or the officer has reasonable grounds for suspecting that that person is not who he claims to be<sup>35</sup>.

An intimate sample<sup>36</sup> may be taken from the detained person only if (i) he is detained at a police station; (ii) the appropriate consent is given in writing; (iii) a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent authorises the sample to be taken; and (iv) the sample is taken by a constable (except where it must be taken by a registered medical practitioner or registered dentist, as described below)<sup>37</sup>.

Before fingerprints or a sample are taken from a person<sup>38</sup>, he must be informed that the fingerprints or sample may be used for the purposes of specified provisions<sup>39</sup> relating to the checking of fingerprints and samples, and where the fingerprints or a non-intimate sample are to be taken with the appropriate consent, or on the basis that he has been convicted of a recordable offence, he must be informed of the reason for taking the fingerprints or sample<sup>40</sup>.

Before fingerprints or a sample are taken from a person upon an authorisation given by a superintendent<sup>41</sup>, he must be informed that the authorisation has been given, of the grounds upon which it has been given, and where relevant, of the nature of the offence in which it is suspected that he has been involved<sup>42</sup>.

After fingerprints or a sample are taken under these provisions<sup>43</sup> any of the following which apply must be recorded as soon as is reasonably practicable: (A) the fact that the person has been informed as required<sup>44</sup>; (B) the reason for taking the fingerprints or sample to<sup>45</sup>; (C) the authorisation given<sup>46</sup>; (D) the grounds upon which that authorisation has been given<sup>47</sup>; and (E) the fact that the appropriate consent has been given<sup>48</sup>.

Where a sample of hair (other than pubic hair) is to be taken under the provisions described above, the sample may be taken either by cutting hairs or by plucking hairs with their roots so long as no more are plucked than the person taking the sample reasonably considers to be necessary for a sufficient sample<sup>49</sup>.

Where two or more non-intimate samples suitable for the same means of analysis have been taken from a person<sup>50</sup>, and those samples have proved insufficient<sup>51</sup>, and the person has been released from detention<sup>52</sup>, then an intimate sample may be taken from the person if the appropriate consent is given in writing, a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent authorises the sample to be taken, and the sample is taken by a constable (except where it must be taken by a registered medical practitioner or registered dentist as described below)<sup>53</sup>.

Where appropriate written consent to the taking of an intimate sample from a person<sup>54</sup> is refused without good cause, in any proceedings against that person for an offence, the court, in determining whether to commit him for trial or whether there is a case to answer, may draw such inferences from the refusal as appear proper, and the court or jury, in determining whether that person is guilty of the offence charged, may draw such inferences from the refusal as appear proper<sup>55</sup>.

An intimate sample (other than a sample of urine or a dental impression) may be taken<sup>56</sup> only by a registered medical practitioner acting on the authority of a constable<sup>57</sup>. An intimate sample which is a dental impression may be taken only by a registered dentist acting on the authority of a constable<sup>58</sup>.

Fingerprints or samples taken under the provisions described above<sup>59</sup>, and information derived from those samples, may be retained but may not be used by any person except for the purposes of a terrorist investigation<sup>60</sup> or for purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution<sup>61</sup>. In particular, a check may not be made against them<sup>62</sup>, except for the purpose of a terrorist investigation or for purposes related to the prevention or detection of crime, the investigation of an offence or the conduct of a prosecution<sup>63</sup>. Subject to this restriction on their use<sup>64</sup>, the fingerprints, samples or information may be checked against specified fingerprints, samples or information<sup>65</sup>.

1    le a constable who arrests a person under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41: see PARA 420 ante. For the meaning of 'terrorist' see PARA 420 note 1 ante.

2    Ibid s 41(2), Sch 8 para 1(4). In Sch 8 (as amended), a reference to a 'police station' includes a reference to any place which the Secretary of State has designated under his duty under Sch 8 para 1(1) to designate places at which people may be detained under s 41 (see PARA 420 ante) or Sch 7 (port and border controls) (see PARAS 430-431 post): Sch 8 para 1(2).

Where a person is arrested in one part of the United Kingdom and all or part of his detention takes place in another part, the provisions of Sch 8 which apply to detention in a particular part of the United Kingdom apply in relation to him while he is detained in that part: Sch 8 para 1(6). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante. For provisions relating to detention at a police station in Scotland see Sch 8 paras 16-20.

A detained person is deemed to be in legal custody throughout the period of his detention: Sch 8 para 5. See also PARA 451 post.

3    The provisions relating to the treatment of detained persons contained in ibid Sch 8 paras 1-20 (as amended) apply both to persons detained under s 41 (see PARA 420 ante) and to persons detained under Sch 7 (as amended) (see PARAS 430-431 post).

4    Code H: Code of Practice in connection with the Detention, Treatment and Questioning by Police Officers of Persons under Section 41 of, and Schedule 8 to, the Terrorism Act 2000 came into force on 25 July 2006: see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Code of Practice C and Code of Practice H) Order 2006, SI 2006/1938, arts 1, 3. Code H applies to any person arrested under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41 (see PARA 420 ante) (Code H para 1.1) and who is in police detention after midnight on 24 July 2006, notwithstanding that he may have been arrested before that time: Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (Code of Practice C and Code of Practice H) Order 2006, SI 2006/1938, art 4. Code H ceases to apply at any point that a detainee is charged with an offence, or released without charge, or transferred to a prison: Code H para 1.2. Code H does not apply to detention of individuals under any other terrorism legislation; the provisions for the detention, treatment and questioning by police officers of persons other than those in police detention following arrest under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41 are set out in Code of Practice C: Detention, Treatment and Questioning of Persons by Police Officers (see PARA 908 et seq post): Code H para 1.4.

Code H provides that all persons in custody must be dealt with expeditiously, and released as soon as the need for detention no longer applies: Code H para 1.5. There is no provision for bail prior to charge: Code H para 1.6. An officer must perform the assigned duties in the code as soon as practicable: Code H para 1.7. The code (the provisions of which include the Annexes but not the Notes for Guidance) must be readily available at all police stations for consultation: see Code H paras 1.8, 1.9, 1.14. Provision is made for the treatment of persons who appear to be mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable (see Code H para 1.10, Annex E), or who appear to be blind, seriously visually impaired, deaf, unable to read or speak (see Code H paras 1.12, 1.13, 3.14, 3.21, 13) and for the treatment of juveniles, that is anyone who appears to be under the age of 17 (see Code H paras 1.11, 3.15, 3.16). If the detainee is a juvenile, mentally disordered or otherwise mentally vulnerable, the custody officer must inform the appropriate adult and invite them to the police station: Code H paras 3.17-3.20.

Designated persons (ie persons, other than a police officer, designated under the Police Reform Act 2002 Pt 4 (ss 38-77) (as amended) who have specified powers and duties of police officers conferred or imposed on them) must have regard to the provisions of the code, and are entitled to use reasonable force in specified circumstances; and reference to a police officer includes a designated person acting in the exercise or performance of the powers and duties conferred or imposed on them by their designation: Code H para 1.17, 1.118, 1.20. Nothing in Code H prevents the custody officer (as to whom see Code H para 1.15), or other officer given custody of the detainee, from allowing police staff who are not designated persons to carry out individual procedures or tasks at the police station if the law allows; however, the officer remains responsible for making sure the procedures and tasks are carried out correctly in accordance with the codes of practice: Code H para 1.19.

When a person is brought to a police station under arrest, or is arrested under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41 at the police station having attended there voluntarily, he should be brought before the custody officer as soon as practicable after his arrival at the station or, if appropriate, following arrest after attending the police station voluntarily: Code H para 2.1. A custody record must be opened and all information recorded under the code must be recorded in it as soon as practicable: see Code H paras 2.2-2.9. The custody officer must make sure the person is told clearly about his rights, which may be exercised at any stage during the period in custody; that is, he must be told about the right to have someone informed of his arrest (see the text and note 9 infra), about the right to consult privately with a solicitor and that free independent legal advice is available (see the text and note 11 infra), and about the right to consult the code of practice: Code H para 3.1. The detainee must also be given a written notice setting out those rights, the arrangements for obtaining legal advice, the right to a copy of the custody record and the caution (as to which see Code H para 10), together with an additional written notice briefly setting out the entitlements while in custody: Code H paras 3.2. A citizen of an independent Commonwealth country or a national of a foreign country, including the Republic of Ireland, must be informed as soon as practicable about his rights of communication with his high commission, embassy or consulate: see Code H paras 3.3, 7, Annex F.

The code specifies what information must be recorded in the custody record and interview record: see Code H paras 2.9, 3.4, 3.5, 3.22, 3.23, 4.4, 4.5, 5.9, 6.18, 6.19, 7.5, 8.11, 8.12, 9.17-9.19, 10.12, 11, 12.11, 12.12, 12.14, 12.15, 13.4, 14.11-14.15. The grounds for the person's detention must be recorded in the person's presence if practicable: Code H paras 3.22, 3.23.

The custody officer must initiate a risk assessment (which is an ongoing process) to consider whether the detainee is likely to present specific risks to himself or others, and is then responsible for the response to such an assessment: see Code H paras 3.6-3.10. The custody officer must ascertain the property a detainee has on his person and may search him if necessary: see Code H para 4, Annex A.

The code specifies the conditions of detention (including the heating and ventilation of cells, the provision of bedding, washing facilities and food, and the opportunity to exercise and to practise religious observance): see Code H para 8. Provision is made for the medical care and treatment of detainees, particularly in relation to fitness to be interviewed (see Code H para 9, Annex G) and the observation list (Annex H). Notwithstanding other requirements for medical attention, detainees who are held for more than 96 hours must be visited by a healthcare professional at least once every 24 hours: Code H para 9.1.

A person whom there are grounds to suspect of an offence must be cautioned before any questions about an offence (or further questions if the answers provide the grounds for suspicion) are put to him if either the suspect's answers or silence (ie failure or refusal to answer or answer satisfactorily) may be given in evidence to a court in a prosecution: Code H para 10.1. A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must be informed at the time, or as soon as practicable thereafter, that he is under arrest and the grounds for his arrest: Code H paras 3.4, 10.2. A person who is arrested, or further arrested, must also be cautioned unless it is impracticable to do so by reason of his condition or behaviour at the time, or he has already been cautioned immediately prior to arrest: Code H paras 10.3, 10.7. Except where the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence applies (see Code H: Annex C), the caution is as follows (although minor deviations are permitted provided the sense is preserved): 'You do not have to say anything. But it may harm your defence if you do not mention when questioned something which you later rely on in court. Anything you do say may be given in evidence': Code H paras 10.4, 10.6. Where the restriction does so apply the caution is as follows: 'You do not have to say anything, but anything you do say may be given in evidence': see Code H para 10.5, Annex C para 2. The detainee should be informed of the consequences of failure to co-operate: see Code H para 10.18. When a suspect interviewed at a police station or authorised place of detention after arrest fails or refuses to answer certain questions, or to answer satisfactorily, after due warning, a court or jury may draw such inferences as appear proper under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 ss 36, 37 (see PARAS 1553-1554 post): Code H paras 10.9, 10.10. Cautions to juveniles should be repeated in the presence of the appropriate adult: see Code H para 10.11.

An interview (ie the questioning of a person arrested on suspicion of being a terrorist) must be carried out under caution, must be recorded and must comply with the provisions of Code H para 11. Specific provision is made regarding interviews conducted at police stations, including provision for assessing the detainee's fitness to be interviewed, the breaks to be afforded to the detainee and the records that must be kept: see Code H para 12. Written statements under caution must follow the form and procedure set out in Code H Annex D. Interpreters must be provided where necessary: see Code H para 13.

5 An 'authorised person' means (1) a constable; (2) a prison officer; (3) a person authorised by the Secretary of State; or (4) an examining officer: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 2(2). In respect of a constable see also PARA 451 post.

6 Ibid Sch 8 para 2(1); Code H para 3.12. But this does not confer the power to take fingerprints, non-intimate samples or intimate samples: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 2(3)(a); Code H para 3.13.

7 See the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 3(1); and the Terrorism Act 2000 (Code of Practice on Audio Recording of Interviews) (No 2) Order 2001, SI 2001/189, art 2. The code of practice was brought into effect on 19 February 2001 by the Terrorism Act 2000 (Code of Practice on Audio Recording of Interviews) Order 2001, SI 2001/159, art 2.

8 See the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 paras 3(2)-(6); and the Terrorism Act 2000 (Video Recording of Interviews) Order 2000, SI 2000/3179, art 2. The Secretary of State is required to issue a code of practice about such video recording, if he makes such an order: see the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 paras 3(7), 4. Any request to have video cameras switched off is to be refused: Code H para 11. Note that Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recordings with Sound of Interview Suspects (see PARA 986 et seq post) does not apply to interviews under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41: Code F para 3.2.

9 The person named must be a friend of the detained person, a relative, or a person who is known to the detained person or who is likely to take an interest in his welfare: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 6(2); and see Code H para 5. The custody officer must make sure the detainee is told clearly about the right to have someone informed of his arrest: Code H para 3.1.

10 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 6(1). Where a detained person is transferred from one police station to another, he is entitled to exercise this right in respect of the police station to which he is transferred: Sch 8 para 6(3).

11 Ibid Sch 8 para 7(1); and see Code H para 6. The custody officer must make sure the detainee (and any appropriate adult if necessary) is told clearly about the right to consult a solicitor: see Code H paras 3.1, 6.1, 6.2, 6.6. Where such a request is made, the request and the time at which it was made must be recorded: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 7(2); Code H paras 6.18, 6.19.

Code H paras 6.7, 6.8 provide that a detainee who wants legal advice may not be interviewed or continue to be interviewed until he has received such advice unless:

- 45 (1) Annex B applies, when the restriction on drawing adverse inferences from silence in Annex C will apply because the detainee is not allowed an opportunity to consult a solicitor; or
- 46 (2) an officer of superintendent rank or above has reasonable grounds for believing that:
  1. (a) the consequent delay might lead to interference with, or harm to, evidence connected with an offence; lead to interference with, or physical harm to, other people; lead to serious loss of, or damage to, property; lead to alerting other people suspected of having committed an offence but not yet arrested for it; hinder the recovery of property obtained in consequence of the commission of an offence;

2. (b) when a solicitor, including a duty solicitor, has been contacted and has agreed to attend, awaiting his arrival would cause unreasonable delay to the process of investigation;
- 3
- 47 (3) the solicitor that the detainee has nominated or selected from a list:
  3. (a) cannot be contacted;
  - 4
  4. (b) has previously indicated he does not wish to be contacted; or
  - 5
  5. (c) having been contacted, has declined to attend,
  - 6
- 48 and the detainee has been advised of the Duty Solicitor Scheme but has declined to ask for the duty solicitor;
- 49 (4) the detainee changes his mind, about wanting legal advice.

It was held in R v Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, ex p Begley, R v McWilliams [1997] 4 All ER 833, [1997] 1 WLR 1475, HL, that the right to consult a solicitor privately does not extend to a right to have a solicitor present during interview (where persons suspected of having committed offences under the terrorism provisions in Northern Ireland were detained for questioning under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 s 14(1) (repealed: see now the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41; and PARA 420 ante). Code H now provides that a detainee who has been permitted to consult a solicitor is entitled on request to have the solicitor present when he is interviewed unless one of the exceptions in Code H para 6.7 applies (see heads (1)-(4) supra): Code H para 6.9.

The solicitor (as to whom see Code H paras 6.13-6.17) may be requested to leave if his conduct is such that the interviewer is unable properly to put questions to the suspect: see Code H paras 6.10-6.12. No police officer should, at any time, do or say anything with the intention of dissuading a detainee from obtaining legal advice: Code H para 6.3.

12 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 8(1); and see Code H paras 5.2, 6.4, Annex B. If an authorisation is given orally, the person giving it must confirm it in writing as soon as is reasonably practicable: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 8(6). The detained person must be told the reason for the delay as soon as reasonably practicable, and the reason must be recorded as soon as is reasonably practicable: Sch 8 para 8(7).

421 Treatment of persons detained

NOTES 2, 19--Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 paras 8(4)(d), 17 amended: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Sch 3 para 6.

TEXT AND NOTE 26--Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 9(3) substituted by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 82(1).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(v) Counter-terrorist Powers/422. Review of detention.

422. Review of detention.

Where a person is arrested on suspicion of being a terrorist<sup>1</sup> his detention must be periodically reviewed by a review officer<sup>2</sup>. The first review must be carried out as soon as reasonably practicable after the time of the person's arrest<sup>3</sup>. Subsequent reviews must be carried out at intervals of not more than 12 hours<sup>4</sup>, but such a review may be postponed if at the latest time at which it may be carried out in accordance with the above requirement:

- 481 (1) the detained person is being questioned by a police officer and an officer is satisfied that an interruption of the questioning to carry out the review would prejudice the investigation in connection with which the person is being detained<sup>5</sup>;
- 482 (2) no review officer is readily available<sup>6</sup>; or
- 483 (3) it is not practicable for any other reason to carry out the review<sup>7</sup>.

Where a review is postponed it must be carried out as soon as reasonably practicable<sup>8</sup>.

A review officer may authorise a person's continued detention only if satisfied that it is necessary:

- 484 (a) to obtain relevant evidence whether by questioning him or otherwise<sup>9</sup>;
- 485 (b) to preserve relevant evidence<sup>10</sup>;
- 486 (c) pending a decision whether to apply to the Secretary of State for a deportation notice to be served on the detained person<sup>11</sup>;
- 487 (d) pending the making of an application to the Secretary of State for a deportation notice to be served on the detained person<sup>12</sup>;
- 488 (e) pending consideration by the Secretary of State whether to serve a deportation notice on the detained person<sup>13</sup>;
- 489 (f) pending a decision whether the detained person should be charged with an offence<sup>14</sup>; or
- 490 (g) pending the result of an examination or analysis of any relevant evidence or of anything the examination or analysis of which is to be or is being carried out with a view to obtaining relevant evidence<sup>15</sup>.

Before determining whether to authorise a person's continued detention, a review officer must give either the detained person or a solicitor representing him who is available at the time of the review an opportunity to make oral or written<sup>16</sup> representations about the detention<sup>17</sup>.

Where a review officer authorises continued detention he must inform the detained person of any of his rights to inform a named person of his detention and to consult a solicitor<sup>18</sup> which he has not yet exercised, and if the exercise of either of those rights is being delayed<sup>19</sup>, of the fact that it is being so delayed<sup>20</sup>.

Where a review of a person's detention is being carried out at a time when his exercise of the right to inform a named person of his detention or to consult a solicitor is being delayed, the review officer must consider whether the reason or reasons for which the delay was authorised continue to subsist; and, if in his opinion the reason or reasons have ceased to subsist, he must inform the officer who authorised the delay of his opinion (unless he was that officer)<sup>21</sup>.

A review officer carrying out a review must make a written record of the outcome of the review and of any of the following which apply<sup>22</sup>:

- 491 (i) the grounds upon which continued detention is authorised<sup>23</sup>;
- 492 (ii) the reason for postponement of the review<sup>24</sup>;
- 493 (iii) the fact that the detained person has been informed of his rights<sup>25</sup>;
- 494 (iv) the officer's conclusion on whether the reason or reasons for the delay in exercising either of these rights continues to subsist<sup>26</sup>;
- 495 (v) if the reason or reasons have ceased to subsist, the fact that he has taken action to inform the officer who authorised the delay<sup>27</sup>; and
- 496 (vi) the fact that the detained person is being detained pending the making of an application for a warrant of further detention or pending the conclusion of proceedings on an application for such a warrant or an extension for it<sup>28</sup>.

With certain exceptions<sup>29</sup>, a person detained after being arrested on suspicion of being a terrorist must (unless detained under any other power) be released not later than the end of the period of 48 hours beginning with the time of his arrest, or, if he was being detained under the provisions relating to port and border controls<sup>30</sup> when he was so arrested, beginning with the time when his examination under the statutory provisions relating to port and border controls began<sup>31</sup>.

If on a review of a person's detention under the provisions described above<sup>32</sup> the review officer does not authorise continued detention, the person must be released (unless detained in accordance with the power to detain him pending an application for a warrant of continuing detention<sup>33</sup>, the power to detain him pending the conclusion of proceedings on such an application or an application for an extension of such a warrant<sup>34</sup>, or any other power)<sup>35</sup>.

1     Ie under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41: see PARAS 420-421 ante. For the meaning of 'terrorist' see PARA 420 note 1 ante.

2     Ibid Sch 8 para 21(1). The review officer must be an officer who has not been directly involved in the investigation in connection with which the person is detained: Sch 8 para 24(1). In the case of a review carried out within the period of 24 hours beginning with the time of arrest, the review officer must be an officer of at least the rank of inspector: Sch 8 para 24(2). In the case of any other review, the review officer must be an officer of at least the rank of superintendent: Sch 8 para 24(3).

Where:

- 50     (1) the review officer is of a rank lower than superintendent;
- 51     (2) an officer of higher rank than the review officer gives directions relating to the detained person; and
- 52     (3) those directions are at variance with the performance by the review officer of a duty imposed on him under Sch 8, the review officer must refer the matter at once to an officer of at least the rank of superintendent: Sch 8 para 25(1), (2).

A review officer should carry out his duties at the police station where the detainee is held, and be allowed such access to the detainee as is necessary for him to exercise those duties: Code H: Code of Practice in connection with the Detention, Treatment and Questioning by Police Officers of Persons under Section 41 of, and Schedule 8 to, the Terrorism Act para 14.1. For the purposes of reviewing a person's detention, no officer may put specific questions to the detainee regarding his involvement in any offence or in respect of any comments he may make when given the opportunity to make representations or in response to a decision to keep him in detention or extend the maximum period of detention: Code H para 14.2. Such an exchange could constitute an interview and would be subject to the associated safeguards in Code H para 11 (see PARA 421 ante): Code H para 14.2. As to the operation of Code H see PARA 421 note 4 ante.

No review of a person's detention may be carried out after a warrant extending his detention has been issued under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 paras 29-37 (as amended) (see PARA 423 post): Sch 8 para 21(4).

3 Ibid Sch 8 para 21(2).

4 Ibid Sch 8 para 21(3). For the purposes of ascertaining the time within which the next review is to be carried out, a postponed review is deemed to have been carried out at the latest time at which it could have been carried out in accordance with Sch 8 para 21: see Sch 8 para 22(3).

5 Ibid Sch 8 para 22(1)(a).

6 Ibid Sch 8 para 22(1)(b).

7 Ibid Sch 8 para 22(1)(c).

8 Ibid Sch 8 para 22(2).

9 Ibid Sch 8 para 23(1)(a). 'Relevant evidence' means evidence which relates to the commission by the detained person of an offence under any of the provisions described in s 40(1)(a) (ie ss 11 (see PARA 387 ante), 12 (see PARA 388 ante), 15-18 (see PARAS 390-393 ante), 54 (see PARA 439 post), 56-63 (see PARAS 441-442, 447, 469-471 post)), or indicates that the detained person is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism: Sch 8 para 23(4) (amended by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 24(4)). The amendments made by the Terrorism Act 2000 s 24 came into force on 25 July 2006 (see the Terrorism Act 2006 (Commencement No 2) Order 2006, SI 2006/1936, art 2) but they do not apply in a case in which either the arrest of the person detained under Terrorism Act 2000 s 41 (see PARAS 420-421 ante) took place before the commencement of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 24 (ie 25 July 2006) (s 24(6)(a)) or his examination under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 (see PARA 430 post) began before such commencement (Terrorism Act 2006 s 24(6)(b)). As to the meaning of 'act' see PARA 394 note 1 ante. For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante.

The review officer may not authorise continued detention by virtue of head (a) in the text unless he is satisfied that the investigation in connection with which the person is detained is being conducted diligently and expeditiously: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 23(2).

10 Ibid Sch 8 para 23(1)(b). The review officer may not authorise continued detention by virtue of head (b) in the text unless he is satisfied that the investigation in connection with which the person is detained is being conducted diligently and expeditiously: Sch 8 para 23(2).

11 Ibid Sch 8 para 23(1)(c). 'Deportation notice' means notice of a decision to make a deportation order under the Immigration Act 1971: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 23(5).

The review officer may not authorise continued detention by virtue of heads (c)-(f) in the text unless he is satisfied that the process pending the completion of which detention is necessary is being conducted diligently and expeditiously: Sch 8 para 23(3).

12 Ibid Sch 8 para 23(1)(d). See note 11 supra.

13 Ibid Sch 8 para 23(1)(e). See note 11 supra.

14 Ibid Sch 8 para 23(1)(f). See note 11 supra.

15 Ibid Sch 8 para 23(1)(ba) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 24(1)). Note that the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 23(1)(ba) (as added) does not apply in a case in which either the arrest of the person detained under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41 (see PARAS 420-421 ante) took place before the commencement of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 24 (ie 25 July 2006) (s 24(6)(a)) or his examination under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 (see PARA 430 post) began before such commencement (Terrorism Act 2006 s 24(6)(b)). See also note 11 supra.

16 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 26(2). For the meaning of 'written' see PARA 413 note 1 ante. A review officer may refuse to hear oral representations from the detained person if he considers that he is unfit to make representations because of his condition or behaviour: Sch 8 para 26(3).

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(v) Counter-terrorist Powers/423. Extension of detention.

423. Extension of detention.

Where a person has been detained after being arrested on suspicion of being a terrorist<sup>1</sup>, a Crown Prosecutor (in England and Wales) or a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent (in any part of the United Kingdom)<sup>2</sup> may apply to a judicial authority<sup>3</sup> for the issue of a warrant of further detention<sup>4</sup>. Where an application for a warrant of further detention is granted in respect of a person's detention, he may be detained<sup>5</sup> during the period specified in the warrant<sup>6</sup>. A warrant of further detention must authorise the further detention of a specified person for a specified period, and state the time at which it was issued<sup>7</sup>.

Subject to the qualification set out below<sup>8</sup>, the specified period in relation to a person must be the period of seven days beginning with the relevant time (that is, the time of his arrest<sup>9</sup>, or, if he was being detained under the provisions relating to port and border controls<sup>10</sup> when he was arrested, with the time when his examination under those provisions began)<sup>11</sup>.

An application for a warrant of further detention must be made<sup>12</sup> during the 48-hour period beginning with the time of the person's arrest<sup>13</sup>, or, if he was being detained under the provisions relating to port and border controls, with the time when his examination under those provisions began<sup>14</sup>, or within six hours of the end of that period<sup>15</sup>.

The person to whom an application relates must be given an opportunity to make oral or written representations to the judicial authority about the application, and is entitled to be legally represented at the hearing<sup>16</sup>. Where the person to whom the application relates is not legally represented, and he is entitled to be legally represented, and he wishes to be so represented, a judicial authority must adjourn the hearing of the application to enable the person to obtain legal representation<sup>17</sup>. A judicial authority may exclude the person to whom the application relates or anyone representing him from any part of the hearing<sup>18</sup>.

A judicial authority may, after giving an opportunity for representations to be made by or on behalf of the applicant and the person to whom the application relates, direct (1) that the hearing of the application must be conducted; and (2) that all representations by or on behalf of a person for the purposes of the hearing must be made, by such means<sup>19</sup> (whether a live television link or other means) as may be specified in the direction and not in the presence (apart from by those means) of the applicant, of the person to whom the application relates or of any legal representative of that person<sup>20</sup>. If the person to whom the application relates wishes to make representations about whether such a direction<sup>21</sup> should be given, he must do so by using the facilities that will be used if the judicial authority decides to give such a direction<sup>22</sup>.

The person<sup>23</sup> who has made an application for a warrant of further detention may apply to the judicial authority for an order that specified information on which he intends to rely be withheld from the person to whom the application for the warrant relates, and anyone representing him<sup>24</sup>.

A judicial authority may issue a warrant of further detention only if satisfied that:

- 497 (a) there are reasonable grounds for believing that the further detention of the person to whom the application relates is necessary<sup>25</sup>; and 498 (b) the investigation in connection with which the person is detained is being conducted diligently and expeditiously<sup>26</sup>.

A Crown prosecutor (in England and Wales) or a police officer of at least the rank of superintendent (in any part of the United Kingdom)<sup>27</sup> may apply<sup>28</sup> for the extension or further extension of the period specified in a warrant of further detention<sup>29</sup>. The period by which the specified period is extended or further extended must be the period which begins with the specified time<sup>30</sup> and ends with whichever is the earlier of the end of the period of seven days beginning with that time<sup>31</sup> and the end of the period of 28 days<sup>32</sup> beginning with the relevant time<sup>33</sup> (subject to the proviso that a judicial authority or senior judge<sup>34</sup> may extend or further extend the period specified in a warrant by a shorter period than is required<sup>35</sup> if either the application for the extension is an application for an extension by a period that is shorter than is so required<sup>36</sup> or the judicial authority or senior judge<sup>37</sup> is satisfied that there are circumstances that would make it inappropriate for the period of the extension to be as long as the period so required<sup>38</sup>). Where the period specified is extended, the warrant must be indorsed with a note stating the new specified period<sup>39</sup>.

Where an application for an extension of a warrant of further detention is granted in respect of a person's detention, he may be detained<sup>40</sup> during the period specified in the extension indorsed on it<sup>41</sup>.

If a person is detained by virtue of a warrant of further detention and his detention is not authorised by virtue of the fact that the application for the warrant is pending or proceedings on the application have not yet concluded<sup>42</sup>, then if it at any time appears to the police officer or other person in charge of his case that any of the matters mentioned in heads (a) and (b) above<sup>43</sup> on which the judicial authority or senior judge last authorised his further detention no longer apply, he must release him immediately (if he has custody of the detained person)<sup>44</sup> and immediately inform the person who does have custody of the detained person that those matters no longer apply in the detained person's case (if he does not have custody)<sup>45</sup>. A person with custody of the detained person who is thus<sup>46</sup> informed that those matters no longer apply in his case must release that person immediately<sup>47</sup>.

2     In Northern Ireland it is the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland who may apply: ibid Sch 8 para 29(1) (Sch 8 paras 29(1), (5), 32(1)(a), (2), 36(1), (4), (5) amended, Sch 8 paras 29(3A), 32(1A), 36(1A), (1B), (3A), (3AA), (7) added, and Sch 8 para 36(3) substituted, by the Terrorism Act 2006 ss 23, 24(2), (3), (5), 37(5), Sch 3). The amendments made to the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36 (as amended) do not apply in a case in which either the arrest of the person detained under Terrorism Act 2000 s 41 (see PARAS 420-421 ante) took place before the commencement of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 23 or s 24 (as the case may be) (ss 23(12) (a), 24(6)(a)) or his examination under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 (see PARA 430 post) began before such commencement (ss 23(12)(b), 24(6)(b)). Sections 23, 24 came into force on 25 July 2006: see the Terrorism Act 2006 (Commencement No 2) Order 2006, SI 2006/1936.

3     le a District Judge (Magistrates' Courts) who is designated for the present purpose by the Lord Chief Justice of England and Wales after consulting the Lord Chancellor: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 29(4)(a) (amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), (3), Sch 8 para 391, Sch 10; and by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 15(1), Sch 4 paras 287, 290(1), (2)(a)). The Lord Chief Justice may also nominate a judicial office holder (as defined in the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 109(4): see COURTS) to exercise his functions under these provisions: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 29(5) (added by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 paras 287, 290).

4     Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 29(1) (as amended: see note 2 supra); Code H para 14.3. As to the operation of Code H see PARA 421 note 4 ante. The refusal of an application for a warrant of further detention of a person does not prevent his continued detention in accordance with the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41: s 41(8).

Where a police officer intends to make an application for a warrant of further detention, the person may be detained pending the making of the application: s 41(5). Where such an application has been made, the person may be detained pending the conclusion of proceedings on the application: s 41(6).

When an application for a warrant of further or extended detention is sought under Sch 8 para 29 (as amended) or Sch 8 para 36 (see the text and note 29 infra), the detained person and his representative must be informed of his rights in respect of the application, and these include: (1) the right to a written or oral notice of the warrant; (2) the right to make oral or written representations to the judicial authority about the application; (3) the right to be present and legally represented at the hearing of the application, unless specifically excluded by the judicial authority; (4) the right to free legal advice (see Code H para 6; and PARA 421 ante): Code H para 14.4.

5     Ie subject to the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 37: see the text and notes 46-48 infra.

6     Ibid s 41(7).

7     Ibid Sch 8 para 29(2).

8     Ie under ibid Sch 8 para 29(3A) (as added) or Sch 8 para 36 (as amended): Sch 8 para 29(3) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 306(1), (2); and the Terrorism Act 2006 s 23).

9     Ie under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 41: see PARA 421 ante.

10    Ie under ibid Sch 7: see PARA 430 post.

11    Ibid Sch 8 para 29(3) (as amended: see note 8 supra). A judicial authority may issue a warrant of further detention in relation to a person which specifies a shorter period as the period for which that person's further detention is authorised if either the application for the warrant is an application for a warrant specifying a shorter period (Sch 8 para 29(3A)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra)) or the judicial authority is satisfied that there are circumstances that would make it inappropriate for the specified period to be as long as the period of seven days mentioned in Sch 8 para 29(3) (as amended) (Sch 8 para 29(3A)(b) (as so added)).

12    An application for a warrant is made when written or oral notice of an intention to make the application is given to a judicial authority: ibid Sch 8 para 30(3). An application may not be heard unless the person to whom it relates has been given a notice stating that the application has been made, the time at which the application was made, the time at which it is to be heard, and the grounds upon which further detention is sought: Sch 8 para 31.

13    Ie under ibid s 41: see PARA 421 ante.

14    Ibid s 41(3), Sch 8 para 30(1)(a).

15    Ibid Sch 8 para 30(1)(b). The judicial authority hearing an application made within six hours of the end of the 48-hour period must dismiss the application if he considers that it would have been reasonably practicable to make it during the 48-hour period: Sch 8 para 30(2).

A judicial authority may adjourn the hearing of an application for a warrant only if the hearing was adjourned to a date before the expiry of the 48-hour period mentioned in s 41(3) (see the text and note 14 supra): Sch 8 para 35(1). This does not apply to an adjournment under Sch 8 para 33(2) (see the text and note 17 infra): see Sch 8 para 35(2).

16    Ibid Sch 8 para 33(1).

17    See ibid Sch 8 para 33(2). See note 12 supra. This provision applies to the hearing of representations about whether a direction should be given under Sch 8 para 33(4) in the case of any application as it applies to a hearing of the application: Sch 8 para 33(7) (Sch 8 para 33(4)-(9) added by the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 75). The limits on the period of an adjournment under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 paras 35(1) (see note 15 supra) and Sch 8 para 36(1) (see the text and note 29 infra) do not apply to an adjournment under Sch 8 para 33(2): see Sch 8 paras 35(2), 36(5).

18    Ibid Sch 8 para 33(3).

19    Ie means falling within ibid Sch 8 para 33(5) (as added). A means of conducting the hearing and of making representations falls within Sch 8 para 33(5) (as added) if it allows the person to whom the application relates and any legal representative of his (without being present at the hearing and to the extent that they are not excluded from it under Sch 8 para 33(3) (see the text and note 18 supra)): (1) to see and hear the judicial authority and the making of representations to it by other persons; and (2) to be seen and heard by the judicial authority: Sch 8 para 33(5) (as added: see note 17 supra).

20    Ibid Sch 8 para 33(4) (as added: see note 17 supra). A judicial authority must not give a direction under Sch 8 para 33(4) (as added) unless: (1) it has been notified by the Secretary of State that facilities are available at the place where the person to whom the application relates is held for the judicial authority to conduct a hearing by means falling within Sch 8 para 33(5) (as added) (see note 19 supra); and (2) that notification has not been withdrawn: Sch 8 para 33(8) (as so added). If in a case where it has power to do so a judicial authority decides not to give a direction under Sch 8 para 33(4) (as added), it must state its reasons for not giving it: Sch 8 para 33(9) (as so added).

21 le a direction under ibid Sch 8 para 33(4) (as added) (see the text and note 20 supra).

22 Ibid Sch 8 para 33(6) (as added: see note 17 supra).

23 See note 2 supra.

24 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 34(1) (as amended: see note 2 supra). A judicial authority may make such an order in relation to specified information only if satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that if the information were disclosed:

- 53 (1) evidence of an offence under any of ss 11 (see PARA 387 ante), 12 (see PARA 388 ante), 15-18 (see PARAS 390-393 ante), 54 (see PARA 439 post), 54-63 (see PARAS 441-442, 447, 469-471 post) would be interfered with or harmed (Sch 8 para 34(2)(a));
- 54 (2) the recovery of property obtained as a result of an offence under any of those provisions would be hindered (Sch 8 para 34(2)(b));
- 55 (3) the recovery of property in respect of which a forfeiture order could be made under s 23 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 482) would be hindered (Sch 8 para 34(2)(c));
- 56 (4) the apprehension, prosecution or conviction of a person who is suspected of falling within s 40(1) (see PARA 420 ante) would be made more difficult as a result of his being alerted (Sch 8 para 34(2)(d));
- 57 (5) the prevention of an act of terrorism would be made more difficult as a result of a person being alerted (Sch 8 para 34(2)(e));
- 58 (6) the gathering of information about the commission, preparation or instigation of an act of terrorism would be interfered with (Sch 8 para 34(2)(f)); or
- 59 (7) a person would be interfered with or physically injured (Sch 8 para 34(2)(g)).

For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante.

A judicial authority may also make an order in relation to specified information if satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that: (a) the detained person has benefited from his criminal conduct; and (b) the recovery of the value of the property constituting the benefit would be hindered if the information were disclosed: Sch 8 para 34(3) (Sch 8 para 34(3), (3A) added by the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 s 456, Sch 11 para 39(1), (5)). For the purpose of the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 34(3) (as added), the question whether a person has benefited from his criminal conduct is to be decided in accordance with the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 Pt 2 (ss 6-91) (as amended) (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 391 et seq) or Pt 3 (ss 92-155) (confiscation: Scotland) : Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 34(3A) (as so added).

The judicial authority must direct that the person to whom the application for a warrant relates and anyone representing him be excluded from the hearing of the application under Sch 8 para 34 (as amended): Sch 8 para 34(4).

25 Ibid Sch 8 para 32(1)(a). For these purposes, the judicial authority must be satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the further detention of a person to whom an application relates is necessary as mentioned in Sch 8 para 32(1A) (as added). The further detention of a person is necessary as mentioned in Sch 8 para 32(1A) (as added) if it is necessary (1) to obtain relevant evidence whether by questioning him or otherwise; (2) to preserve relevant evidence; or (3) pending the result of an examination or analysis of any relevant evidence or of anything the examination or analysis of which is to be or is being carried out with a view to obtaining relevant evidence (Sch 8 para 32(1)(a), (1A) (Sch 8 para 32(1)(a) as amended, and Sch 8 para 32(1A) added: see note 2 supra)). 'Relevant evidence' means, in relation to the person to whom the application relates, evidence which relates to his commission of an offence under any of s 11 (see PARA 387 ante), s 12 (see PARA 388 ante), ss 15-18 (see PARAS 390-393 ante), s 54 (see PARA 439 post), ss 56-63 (see PARAS 441-442, 447, 469-471 post), or indicates that the detained person is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism: s 40(1)(a), (b), Sch 8 para 32(2) (as amended: see note 2 supra).

26 Ibid Sch 8 para 32(1)(b).

27 See note 2 supra.

28 Applications are required to be made to a judicial authority only if the grant of the application otherwise than in accordance with the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(3AA)(b) (as added) (see the text and notes 40-42 infra) would extend that period to a time that is no more than 14 days after the relevant time (Sch 8 para 36(1A)(a), (1B)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra)) and no application has previously been made to a senior judge in respect of that period (Sch 8 para 36(1B)(b) (as so added)), and may in any other case be made to in a senior judge (Sch 8 para 36(1A)(b) (as so added)) (except that where the maximum period of further detention is reduced to 14 days by virtue of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 25 (see note 32 infra), the application must in all cases be made to a judicial authority (see s 25(3)(b), (4)(a), (b))). 'Senior judge' means a judge of the High Court or of the High Court of Justiciary: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(7) (as added: see note 2 supra). Schedule 8 paras 30(3), 31-34 (see the text and notes 13-27 supra) apply to an application under Sch 8 para 36 (as amended) as they apply to an application for a warrant of further detention, and in relation to an application made to a senior judge by virtue of Sch 8 para 36(1A)(b) (as added) (unless the maximum period of further detention is reduced to 14 days by virtue of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 25 (see note 32 infra) (see s 25(4)(d))), as if references to a judicial authority were references to a senior judge and references to the judicial authority in question were references to the senior judge in question: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(4) (as amended: see note 2 supra).

29 Ibid Sch 8 para 36(1) (as amended: see note 2 supra). As to the procedure to be followed see note 4 supra. A judicial authority or senior judge may adjourn the hearing of an application under Sch 8 para 36(1) (as amended) only if the hearing is adjourned to a date before the expiry of the period specified in the warrant: Sch 8 para 36(5) (as so amended). A senior judge has no powers under Sch 8 para 36(5) (as amended) in a case where the maximum period of further detention is reduced to 14 days by virtue of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 25 (see note 32 infra): see s 25(4)(c).

30 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(3)(a) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). The time referred to is the end of the period specified in the warrant (in the case of a warrant specifying a period which has not previously been extended under Sch 8 para 36 (as amended)) (Sch 8 para 36(3A)(a) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 306(1), (3), (4); and substituted by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 23 (see note 2 supra))) and the end of the period for which the period specified in the warrant was last so extended (in any other case) (Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(3A)(b) (as so substituted)).

31 Ibid Sch 8 para 36(3)(b)(i) (as substituted: see note 2 supra).

32 At any time which is more than one year after the commencement of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 23 (ie 25 July 2006: see the Terrorism Act 2006 (Commencement No 2) Order 2006, SI 2006/1936, art 1) the reference in the text to '28 days' should be read, in relation to any further extension for a period beginning at such a time, as a reference to '14 days': Terrorism Act 2006 s 25(1)(a), (3)(a). The Secretary of State may by order made by statutory instrument disapply s 25 in relation to any period of not more than one year beginning with the coming into force of the order (s 25(2)), and the modifications contained in s 23 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 482) apply only to a time which does not fall within a period in relation to which s 25 is so disapplied (s 25(1)(b)). The Secretary of State may not make an order containing (with or without other provision) any provision disapplying s 25 in relation to any period unless a draft of the order has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House: s 25(6). At the date at which this volume states the law no such order had been made.

33 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(3)(b)(ii) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). 'The relevant time' is either the time of the person's arrest under s 41 (see PARAS 420-421 ante), or, if he was being detained under the provisions relating to port and border controls (ie under Sch 7: see PARA 430 post) when he was arrested, with the time when his examination under those provisions began): Sch 8 para 36(3B) (added by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 306(1), (3), (4)).

34 A senior judge has no powers under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(3AA) (as added) in a case where the maximum period of further detention is reduced to 14 days by virtue of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 25 (see note 32 supra): see s 25(4)(c).

35 Ie required by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(3) (as substituted) (see the text and notes 30-33 supra).

36 Ibid Sch 8 para 36(3AA)(a) (as added: see note 2 supra).

37 See note 34 supra.

38 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36(3AA)(b) (as added: see note 2 supra).

39 Ibid Sch 8 para 36(2).

40 Ie subject to ibid Sch 8 para 37 (as substituted): see the text and notes 42-47 infra.

Where a warrant is issued which authorises detention beyond a period of 14 days from the time of arrest (or if a person was being detained under the provisions relating to port and border controls under Sch 7, from the time at which the examination under Sch 7 began), the detainee must be transferred from detention in a police station to detention in a designated prison as soon as is practicable, unless: (1) the detainee specifically requests to remain in detention at a police station and that request can be accommodated; or (2) there are reasonable grounds to believe that transferring a person to a prison would: (a) significantly hinder a terrorism investigation; (b) delay charging of the detainee or his release from custody; or (c) otherwise prevent the investigation from being conducted diligently and expeditiously: Code H para 14.5. If a person remains in detention at a police station under a warrant of further detention he must be transferred to a prison as soon as practicable after the grounds listed in heads (2)(a)-(c) supra cease to apply: Code H para 14.6. Detainees should be moved to the most suitable prison for the purposes of the investigation and their welfare (see Code H para 14.7); and once they are transferred to prison then their detention will be governed by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 (as amended) (see PARAS 421-422 ante) and the Prison Rules (see PRISONS), and Code H will not apply during any period that the person remains in prison detention (Code H para 14.8). The investigating team and custody officer should provide as much information as necessary to enable the relevant prison authorities to provide appropriate facilities to detain an individual: see Code H para 14.9. As to the requirement to report the detainee's transfer to prison to the detainee's legal adviser, family and friends who have previously been informed and the person who was initially informed of the detainee's detention see Code H para 14.9.

45 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 37(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 2 supra). See note 44 supra.

46 Ie in accordance with ibid Sch 8 para 37 (as substituted).

Where at a time when the maximum period of further detention is reduced to 14 days by virtue of the Terrorism Act 2006 s 25 (see note 32 supra) (1) a person is being detained by virtue of a further extension under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8 para 36 (see the text and notes 27-39 supra); (2) his further detention was authorised (at a time to which the Terrorism Act 2006 s 25 did not apply) for a period ending more than 14 days after the relevant time; and (3) that 14 days has expired, then the person with custody of that individual must release him immediately: s 25(5), (7).

UPDATE

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(v) Counter-terrorist Powers/425. Search, seizure and forfeiture of terrorist publications.

425. Search, seizure and forfeiture of terrorist publications.

Provision is made for the search and seizure of terrorist publications intended for dissemination<sup>1</sup>. If a justice of the peace is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that relevant articles<sup>2</sup> are likely to be found on any premises<sup>3</sup>, he may issue a warrant<sup>4</sup> authorising a constable to enter and search the premises<sup>5</sup> and to seize anything found there which the constable has reason to believe is such an article<sup>6</sup>. An article seized under the authority of a warrant so issued may be removed by a constable to such place as he thinks fit<sup>7</sup> and must be retained there in the custody of a constable until returned or otherwise disposed of<sup>8</sup>. Notification of seizure must be given<sup>9</sup>.

An article<sup>10</sup> which is seized under these provisions<sup>11</sup> is liable to forfeiture<sup>12</sup> and is to be treated as forfeited<sup>13</sup> if, by the end of the period for the giving of a notice of claim in respect of it<sup>14</sup>, either no such notice has been given<sup>15</sup> or the requirements relating to the giving of such a notice<sup>16</sup> have not been complied with in relation to the only notice or notices of claim that have been given<sup>17</sup>. Where a notice of claim in respect of an article is duly given<sup>18</sup>, the relevant constable must decide whether to take proceedings to ask the court to condemn the article as forfeited<sup>19</sup>, and the court must, depending upon whether it finds that the article was or was not liable to forfeiture at the time of its seizure<sup>20</sup> and is or is not satisfied that its forfeiture would be inappropriate<sup>21</sup>, either condemn the article as forfeited<sup>22</sup> or order the return of the article to the person who appears to the court to be entitled to it<sup>23</sup>. Where an article is treated or condemned as forfeited under these provisions, the forfeiture is treated as having taken effect as from the time of the seizure<sup>24</sup> and the article may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of by a constable in whatever manner he thinks fit<sup>25</sup>.

In proceedings arising out of the seizure of an article the fact, form and manner of the seizure is to be taken, without further evidence and unless the contrary is shown, to have been as set forth in the process<sup>26</sup>. Neither the imposition of a requirement<sup>27</sup> to return an article to a person nor the return of an article to a person in accordance with such a requirement affects either the rights in relation to that article of any other person<sup>28</sup> or the right of any other person to enforce his rights against the person to whom it is returned<sup>29</sup>.

1 Terrorism Act 2006 s 28(2)(a). 'Terrorist publications intended for dissemination' means articles which are likely to be the subject of conduct falling within s 2(2)(a)-(e) and which would fall for the purposes of s 2 to be treated, in the context of the conduct to which it is likely to be subject, as a terrorist publication (see PARA 449 post): s 28(2)(b). For the meaning of 'article' see PARA 449 note 1 post; definition applied by s 28(9), Sch 2 para 18.

2 The articles to which ibid s 28 applies (see note 1 supra).

3 For the meaning of 'premises' see the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 s 23; and PARA 872 note 5 post (definition applied by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 28(9)).

4 A person exercising a power conferred by a warrant under these provisions may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances for exercising that power: ibid s 28(3).

5 Ibid s 28(1)(a).

6 Ibid s 28(1)(b). Nothing in the Police (Property) Act 1897 (property seized in the investigation of an offence: see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 520), or the corresponding Northern Ireland enactment (ie the Police (Northern Ireland) Act 1998 s 31) applies to an article seized under the authority of a warrant under these provisions: Terrorism Act 2006 s 28(7).

7 Ibid s 28(4)(a).

8 Ibid s 28(4)(b). 'Otherwise disposed of' means otherwise disposed of in accordance with the Terrorism Act 2006.

9 Where an article has been seized under the authority of a warrant under these provisions (ibid s 28(8), Sch 2 para 1(a)) and is being retained in the custody of a constable ('the relevant constable') (Sch 2 para 1(b)), the relevant constable must give notice of the article's seizure to every person whom he believes to have been the owner of the article, or one of its owners, at the time of the seizure (Sch 2 para 2(1)(a)) and, if there is no such person or it is not reasonably practicable to give him notice, every person whom the relevant constable believes to have been an occupier at that time of the premises where the article was seized (Sch 2 para 2(1)(b)). The notice must set out what has been seized and the grounds for the seizure (Sch 2 para 2(2)) and may be given to a person only by either delivering it to him personally (Sch 2 para 2(3)(a)), addressing it to him and leaving it for him at the appropriate address (Sch 2 para 2(3)(b)), or addressing it to him and sending it to him at that address by post (Sch 2 para 2(3)(c)), although where it is not practicable to give a notice in accordance with these requirements, a notice given by virtue of Sch 2 para 2(1)(b) to the occupier of the premises where the article was seized may be given by addressing it to 'the occupier' of those premises, without naming him (Sch 2 para 2(4)(a)) and leaving it for him at those premises or sending it to him at those premises by post (Sch 2 para 2(4)(b)). For these purposes, 'the appropriate address', in relation to a person, means: (1) in the case of a body corporate, its registered or principal office in the United Kingdom (Sch 2 para 2(6)(a)); (2) in the case of a firm, the principal office of the partnership (Sch 2 para 2(6)(b)); (3) in the case of an unincorporated body or association, the principal office of the body or association (Sch 2 para 2(6)(c)); and (4) in any other case, his usual or last known place of residence in the United Kingdom or his last known place of business in the United Kingdom (Sch 2 para 2(6)(d)). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante. In the case of a company registered outside the United Kingdom (Sch 2 para 2(7)(a)), a firm carrying on business outside the United Kingdom (Sch 2 para 2(7)(b)), or an unincorporated body or association with offices outside the United Kingdom (Sch 2 para 2(7)(c)), the references in Sch 2 para 2 to its 'principal office' include references to its principal office within the United Kingdom (if any) (Sch 2 para 2(7)).

10 I.e. an article to which ibid s 28 applies (see note 1 supra).

11 I.e. seized under the authority of a warrant issued under ibid s 28 on an information laid by or on behalf of the Director of Public Prosecutions or the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland: s 28(5).

12 Ibid s 28(5)(a).

13 'Forfeited' means treated or condemned as forfeited under ibid Sch 2 (see the text and notes 14-29 infra); and 'forfeiture' is to be construed accordingly: s 28(9). An article may be treated as forfeited under Sch 2 only if either the requirements of Sch 2 para 2 (see note 9 supra) have been complied with in the case of that article (Sch 2 para 2(5)(a)) or it was not reasonably practicable for them to be complied with (Sch 2 para 2(5)(b)).

14 A person claiming that the seized article is not liable to forfeiture may give notice of his claim to a constable at any police station in the police area in which the premises where the seizure took place are located (ibid Sch 2 para 3(1)); oral notice is not sufficient for these purposes (Sch 2 para 3(2)). A notice of claim may not be given more than one month after the day of the giving of the notice of seizure (see note 9 supra) (Sch 2 para 4(1)(a)) or if no such notice has been given, the day of the seizure (Sch 2 para 4(1)(b)). In a case in which notice of the seizure was given to different persons on different days, the reference in Sch 2 para 4 to the day on which that notice was given is a reference to the day on which that notice was given to the person (in relation to a person to whom notice of the seizure was given) (Sch 2 para 4(4)(a)) and to the day on which notice of the seizure was given to the last person to be given such a notice (in relation to any other person) (Sch 2 para 4(4)(b)).

A notice of claim must specify the name and address of the claimant (Sch 2 para 4(2)(a)) and, in the case of a claimant who is outside the United Kingdom, the name and address of a solicitor in the United Kingdom who is authorised to accept service, and to act, on behalf of the claimant (Sch 2 para 4(2)(b)). Service upon a solicitor so specified is to be taken to be service on the claimant for the purposes of any proceedings by virtue of Sch 2: Sch 2 para 4(3).

15 Ibid Sch 2 para 5(a).

16 I.e. the requirements of ibid Sch 2 paras 3, 4 (see note 14 supra).

17 Ibid Sch 2 para 5(b).

18 I.e. give in accordance with the requirements of ibid Sch 2 paras 3, 4 (see note 14 supra).

19 Ibid Sch 2 para 6(1). The decision whether to take such proceedings must be made as soon as reasonably practicable after the giving of the notice of claim (Sch 2 para 6(2)), and if the relevant constable decides not to take proceedings for condemnation in a case in which a notice of claim has been given, he must return the article to the person who appears to him to be the owner of the article, or to one of the persons who appear to him to be owners of it (Sch 2 para 6(5)). An article required to be so returned must be returned as soon as reasonably practicable after the decision not to take proceedings for condemnation: Sch 2 para 6(6). If the article is (without having been returned) still in the custody of a constable after the end of the period of 12 months beginning with the day after the requirement to return it arose (Sch 2 para 13(1), (2)(a)), but it is not practicable to dispose of the article by returning it immediately to the person to whom it is required to be returned (Sch 2 para 13(2)(b)), the constable may dispose of it in any manner he thinks fit (Sch 2 para 13(2)).

Proceedings by virtue of Sch 2 are civil proceedings and, in England or Wales, may be instituted either in the High Court or in a magistrates' court: Sch 2 para 7(a). Proceedings in a magistrates' court may be instituted only if that court has jurisdiction in relation to the place where the article to which they relate was seized (Sch 2 para 8(a)), and either party may appeal against the court's decision to the Crown Court (Sch 2 para 10(1)); this does not affect any right to require the statement of a case for the opinion of the High Court (Sch 2 para 10(3)). Where proceedings are instituted in the High Court, the court may require the claimant to give such security for the costs of the proceedings as may be determined by the court (Sch 2 para 9(2)(a)) and the claimant must comply with any such requirement (Sch 2 para 9(2)(b)); failing compliance with these requirements the court must find against the claimant (Sch 2 para 9(3)).

In whichever court proceedings are instituted, the claimant or his solicitor must make his oath that, at the time of the seizure, the seized article was, or was to the best of his knowledge and belief, the property of the claimant (Sch 2 para 9(1)) (failing compliance with which requirement the court must find against the claimant (Sch 2 para 9(3))), and where an appeal has been made (whether by case stated or otherwise) against the decision of the court in proceedings by virtue of Sch 2 in relation to an article, the article is to be left in the custody of a constable pending the final determination of the matter (Sch 2 para 11).

Where, at the time of its seizure, an article was either the property of a body corporate (Sch 2 para 16(1)(a)), the property of two or more partners (Sch 2 para 16(1)(b)) or the property of more than five persons (Sch 2 para 16(1)(c)), the oath required by Sch 2 para 9, and any other thing required by Sch 2 or by rules of court to be done by an owner of the article, may be sworn or done by the secretary or some duly authorised officer of the body corporate (where the owner is a body corporate) (Sch 2 para 16(2)(a), (3)(a)), any one or more of the owners (where the owners are in partnership) (Sch 2 para 16(3)(b)), or any two or more of the owners acting on behalf of themselves and any of their co-owners who are not acting on their own behalf (where there are more than five owners and they are not in partnership) (Sch 2 para 16(3)(c)), or by a person authorised to act on behalf of such a person (Sch 2 para 16(2)(b)).

20 Ibid Sch 2 para 6(3)(a), (4)(a).

21 Ibid Sch 2 para 6(3)(b), (4)(b).

22 Ibid Sch 2 para 6(3). An article may be condemned as forfeited under Sch 2 only if either the requirements of Sch 2 para 2 (see note 9 supra) have been complied with in the case of that article (Sch 2 para 5(5)(a)) or it was not reasonably practicable for them to be complied with (Sch 2 para 5(5)(b)). In proceedings, the condemnation by a court of an article as forfeited under Sch 2 may be proved by the production of either the order of condemnation (Sch 2 para 15(a)) or a certified copy of the order purporting to be signed by an officer of the court by which the order was made (Sch 2 para 15(b)).

23 Ibid Sch 2 para 6(4). For provisions in connection with the return of a seized article see note 19 supra.

24 Ibid Sch 2 para 12.

25 Ibid s 28(5)(b).

26 Ibid Sch 2 para 14.

27 Ie by virtue of ibid Sch 2.

28 Ibid Sch 2 para 17(a).

29 Ibid Sch 2 para 17(b).

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(v) Counter-terrorist Powers/426. Search of persons.

426. Search of persons.

A constable may stop and search a person whom he reasonably suspects to be a terrorist<sup>1</sup> to discover whether he has in his possession anything which may constitute evidence that he is a terrorist<sup>2</sup>. A constable may search a person arrested without warrant on reasonable suspicion of being a terrorist<sup>3</sup> to discover whether he has anything which may constitute evidence that he is a terrorist<sup>4</sup>.

A constable may seize and retain anything which he discovers in the course of a search of a person under either of these powers and which he reasonably suspects may constitute evidence that the person is a terrorist<sup>5</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'terrorist' see PARA 420 note 1 ante. As to powers to stop and search see also PARA 452 post.

2 Terrorism Act 2000 s 43(1). A search of a person must be carried out by someone of the same sex: s 43(3). A person who has the powers of a constable in one part of the United Kingdom may exercise the power under s 43 in any part of the United Kingdom: s 43(5). The powers under ss 43, 44 (see PARA 427 post) allow a constable to search only for articles which could be used for terrorist purposes; however, this would not prevent a search being carried out under other powers if, in the course of exercising these powers, the officer formed reasonable grounds for suspicion: Code A: Code of Practice for the Exercise by Police Officers of Statutory Powers of Stop and Search para 2.26. See also PARAS 451-452 post.

5 Ibid s 43(4). The additional powers of seizure under the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 51 (see PARA 890 post) apply to the power of seizure under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 43(4): Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 s 51(5), Sch 1 para 82. See also PARAS 451-452 post.

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(v) Counter-terrorist Powers/427. Authorisation to stop and search vehicles, their occupants and their contents and to stop and search pedestrians.

427. Authorisation to stop and search vehicles, their occupants and their contents and to stop and search pedestrians.

An authorisation to stop and search vehicles<sup>1</sup>, their occupants and their contents, and to stop and search pedestrians may be given:

- 499 (1) where the specified area or place is the whole or part of a police area<sup>2</sup> outside Northern Ireland other than one mentioned in head (2) or head (3) below, by a police officer for the area who is of at least the rank of assistant chief constable<sup>3</sup>;
- 500 (2) where the specified area or place is the whole or part of the metropolitan police district, by a police officer for the district who is of at least the rank of commander of the metropolitan police<sup>4</sup>;
- 501 (3) where the specified area or place is the whole or part of the City of London, by a police officer for the City who is of at least the rank of commander in the City of London police force<sup>5</sup>.

An authorisation authorises any constable in uniform to stop a vehicle in an area or at a place specified in the authorisation and to search (a) the vehicle; (b) the driver<sup>6</sup> of the vehicle; (c) a passenger in the vehicle; (d) anything in or on the vehicle or carried by the driver or a passenger<sup>7</sup>. An authorisation also authorises any constable in uniform to stop a pedestrian in an area or at a place specified in the authorisation and to search the pedestrian and anything carried by him<sup>8</sup>.

An authorisation<sup>9</sup> may be given only if the person giving it considers it expedient for the prevention of acts of terrorism<sup>10</sup>.

An authorisation has effect during the period (i) beginning at the time when the authorisation is given; and (ii) ending with a date or at a time specified in the authorisation<sup>11</sup>.

The person who gives an authorisation must inform the Secretary of State as soon as is reasonably practicable<sup>12</sup>. If an authorisation is not confirmed by the Secretary of State before the end of the period of 48 hours beginning with the time when it is given, it ceases to have effect at the end of that period, but its ceasing to have effect does not affect the lawfulness of anything done in reliance on it before the end of that period<sup>13</sup>. The Secretary of State may cancel an authorisation with effect from a specified time<sup>14</sup>. An authorisation may be renewed in writing by the person who gave it or a person who could have given it<sup>15</sup>.

The power of stop and search conferred by an authorisation<sup>16</sup> may be exercised only for the purpose of searching for articles of a kind which could be used in connection with terrorism, and may be exercised whether or not the constable has grounds for suspecting the presence of articles of that kind<sup>17</sup>.

A constable may seize and retain an article<sup>18</sup> which he discovers in the course of a search by virtue of an authorisation and which he reasonably suspects is intended to be used in connection with terrorism<sup>19</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he:

- 502 (A) fails to stop a vehicle when required to do so by a constable in the exercise of the power to stop and search conferred by an authorisation<sup>20</sup>;
- 503 (B) fails to stop when required to do so by a constable in the exercise of the power conferred by an authorisation<sup>21</sup>;
- 504 (C) wilfully obstructs a constable in the exercise of the power conferred by an authorisation<sup>22</sup>.

The offence is punishable on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>23</sup> months or a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale or both<sup>24</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'vehicle' see PARA 408 note 19 ante. As to powers to stop and search see also PARA 452 post.

2 For the meaning of 'police area' see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (definition amended by the Police Act 1996 s 103, Sch 7 para 32); the Police Act 1996 s 101(1); and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136.

3 Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(4)(a).

In a case within heads (1)-(3) in the text in which the specified area or place is a place described in s 34(1A) (as added and substituted) (see PARA 408 ante), an authorisation may also be given by a member of the British Transport Police Force who is of at least the rank of assistant chief constable: s 44(4A) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 101, Sch 7 paras 29, 31; and substituted by the British Transport Police (Transitional and Consequential Provisions) Order 2004, SI 2004/1573, art 12(6)(c)); Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 76, Sch 5 para 4. In a case in which the specified area or place is a place to which the Ministry of Defence Police Act 1987 s 2(2) (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 120) applies, an authorisation may also be given by a member of the Ministry of Defence Police who is of at least the rank of assistant chief constable: Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(4B) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 Sch 7 paras 29, 31). In a case in which the specified area or place is a place in which members of the Civil Nuclear Constabulary have the powers and privileges of a constable, an authorisation may also be given by a member of that constabulary who is at least of the rank of assistant chief constable: Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(4BA) (added by the Energy Act 2004 s 57(1), (2)(a)). See also note 10 infra. An authorisation may not, however, be given by a member of the British Transport Police Force, a member of the Ministry of Defence Police, or a member of the Civil Nuclear Constabulary, in any other case: Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(4C) (added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 Sch 7 paras 29, 31; and amended by the Energy Act 2004 ss 57(1), (2)(b), 197(9), Sch 23 Pt 1). The 'British Transport Police' means the British Transport Police established under the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 Pt 3 (ss 18-77) (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 281 et seq): Terrorism Act 2000 s 121 (definition added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 101, Sch 7 para 32); Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 73, Sch 5 para 4.

The power of a person mentioned in the Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(4) to give an authorisation specifying an area or place so mentioned includes power to give such an authorisation specifying such an area or place together with either the internal waters adjacent to that area or place (s 44(4ZA)(a) (s 44(4ZA), (5A) added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 30(1)-(3))) or such area of those internal waters as is specified in the authorisation (Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(4ZA)(b) (as so added)). 'Internal waters' means waters in the United Kingdom that are not comprised in any police area: s 44(5A) (as so added).

If an authorisation is given orally, the person giving it must confirm it in writing as soon as reasonably practicable: s 44(5).

When powers under s 44 (as amended) have been conferred by a chief officer on a community support officer on duty and in uniform, the exercise of this power must comply with the requirements of Code A: Code of Practice for the Exercise by Police Officers of Statutory Powers of Stop and Search (see PARA 859 et seq post), including the recording requirements: Code A para 2.24A.

As to powers of stop and search where the specified area or place is the whole or part of Northern Ireland see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(4)(d).

4 Ibid s 44(4)(b). See note 3 supra.

5 Ibid s 44(4)(c). See note 3 supra.

6 'Driver', in relation to an aircraft, hovercraft or vessel, means the captain, pilot or other person with control of the aircraft, hovercraft or vessel or any member of its crew and, in relation to a train, includes any member of its crew: ibid ss 44(5A), 45(7) (s 44(5A) as added: see note 3 supra).

7 Ibid s 44(1). See note 8 infra. When an authorisation under s 44 (as amended) is given, a constable in uniform may exercise the powers only for the purpose of searching for articles of a kind which could be used in connection with terrorism; whether or not there are any grounds for suspecting the presence of such articles: Code A para 2.24.

The selection of persons stopped under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 44 (as amended) should reflect an objective assessment of the threat posed by the various terrorist groups active in Great Britain. The powers must not be used to stop and search for reasons unconnected with terrorism. Officers must take particular care not to discriminate against members of minority ethnic groups in the exercise of these powers. There may be circumstances, however, where it is appropriate for officers to take account of a person's ethnic origin in selecting persons to be stopped in response to a specific terrorist threat: Code A para 2.25. The stop and search powers under the Terrorism Act 2000 are lawful as a matter of domestic law and do not breach the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 5 (right to liberty and security of the person), art 8 (right to respect for private and family life, home and correspondence), art 10 (freedom of expression) or art 11 (freedom of association and assembly): R (on the application of Gillan) v Metropolitan Police Comr [2006] UKHL 12, [2006] 2 WLR 537; affg R (on the application of Gillan) v Metropolitan Police Comr, R (on the application of Quinton) [2004] EWCA Civ 1067, [2005] QB 388, [2005] 1 All ER 970. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

8 Terrorism Act 2000 s 44(2). Where a vehicle or pedestrian is stopped by virtue of s 44(1) (see the text and note 7 supra) or s 44(2), and the driver of the vehicle or the pedestrian applies (within a 12-month period beginning with the date on which the vehicle or pedestrian was stopped) for a written statement that the vehicle was stopped, or that he was stopped, by virtue of s 44(1) or s 44(2), the written statement must be provided: s 45(5), (6).

9 Ie an authorisation under ibid s 44(1) or s 44(2) (see the text and notes 7-8 supra).

10 Ibid s 44(3). As to the meaning of 'act' see PARA 394 note 1 ante. For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante.

11 Ibid s 46(1). The date or time specified under head (ii) in the text must not occur after the end of the period of 28 days beginning with the day on which the authorisation is given: s 46(2). An authorisation under s 44(4BA) (as added) (see note 3 supra) does not have effect except in relation to times when the specified area or place is a place where members of the Civil Nuclear Constabulary have the powers and privileges of a constable: s 46(2A) (added by the Energy Act 2004 s 57(1), (3)).

12 Terrorism Act 2000 s 46(3). An officer who has authorised the use of powers under s 44 (as amended) must take immediate steps to send a copy of the authorisation to the National Joint Unit, Metropolitan Police Special Branch, who will forward it to the Secretary of State. The Joint Unit will inform the force concerned, within 48 hours of the authorisation being made, whether the Secretary of State has confirmed or cancelled or altered the authorisation: Code A Guidance note 14. See also Code A para 2.26.

13 Terrorism Act 2000 s 46(4). Where the Secretary of State confirms an authorisation he may substitute an earlier date or time for the date or time specified in the authorisation: s 46(5).

14 Ibid s 46(6).

15 Ibid s 46(7). If the authorisation is renewed, the provisions of s 46(1)-(6) apply as if a new authorisation were given on each occasion on which the authorisation is renewed: s 46(7).

16 Ie an authorisation under ibid s 44(1) or s 44(2) (see the text and notes 7-8 supra).

17 Ibid s 45(1). A constable exercising the power conferred by an authorisation may not require a person to remove any clothing in public except for headgear, footwear, an outer coat, a jacket or gloves: s 45(3).

Where a constable proposes to search a person or vehicle by virtue of s 44(1) or s 44(2) (see the text and notes 7-8 supra) he may detain the person or vehicle for such time as is reasonably required to permit the search to be carried out at or near the place where the person or vehicle is stopped: s 45(4). See also PARA 451 post.

18 'Article' includes substance or any other thing: ibid s 121.

19 Ibid s 45(2). See also PARA 451 post.

20 le an authorisation under ibid s 44(1) (see the text and note 7 supra): s 47(1)(a).

21 le an authorisation under ibid s 44(2) (see the text and note 8 supra): s 47(1)(b).

22 le an authorisation under ibid s 44(1) or s 44(2) (see the text and notes 7-8 supra): s 47(1)(c).

23 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 281(4), (5), (7) (not yet in force)), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (s 281(6)(b) (not yet in force)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

24 Terrorism Act 2000 s 47(2). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

427 Authorisation to stop and search vehicles, their occupants and their contents and to stop and search pedestrians

NOTE 7--However, see Application 4158/05 Gillan v United Kingdom [2010] All ER (D) 40 (Jan), (2010) Times, 15 January, ECtHR (powers under the 2000 Act ss 44, 45 breached the European Convention on Human Rights art 8).

NOTES 20-22--Where an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 47 is committed in the United Kingdom, proceedings for the offence may be taken at any place in the United Kingdom and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed at any such place: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 28(1), (2)(a).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(v) Counter-terrorist Powers/428. Prohibition or restriction of parking.

428. Prohibition or restriction of parking.

An authorisation may be given which authorises any constable in uniform to prohibit or restrict the parking<sup>1</sup> of vehicles<sup>2</sup> on a road<sup>3</sup> specified in the authorisation<sup>4</sup>. Such an authorisation may be given:

- 505 (1) where the road specified is wholly or partly within a police area<sup>5</sup> other than one mentioned in head (2) or head (3) below, by a police officer for the area who is of at least the rank of assistant chief constable<sup>6</sup>;
- 506 (2) where the road specified is wholly or partly in the metropolitan police district, by a police officer for the district who is of at least the rank of commander of the metropolitan police<sup>7</sup>;
- 507 (3) where the road specified is wholly or partly in the City of London, by a police officer for the City who is of at least the rank of commander in the City of London police force<sup>8</sup>.

An authorisation<sup>9</sup> may be given only if the person giving it considers it expedient for the prevention of acts of terrorism<sup>10</sup>. It has effect during the period specified in it<sup>11</sup>; and that period must not exceed 28 days<sup>12</sup>. An authorisation may be renewed in writing by the person who gave it or by a person who could have given it<sup>13</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he parks a vehicle in contravention of a prohibition or restriction imposed by virtue of the provisions described above<sup>14</sup>. The offence is punishable on summary conviction with a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>15</sup>.

A person commits an offence if (a) he is the driver<sup>16</sup> or other person in charge of a vehicle which has been permitted to remain at rest in contravention of any prohibition or restriction imposed by virtue of the above provisions; and (b) he fails to move the vehicle when ordered to do so by a constable in uniform<sup>17</sup>. This offence is punishable on summary conviction by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months<sup>18</sup> or a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale or both<sup>19</sup>.

It is, however, a defence to either offence for the defendant to prove that he had a reasonable excuse for the act or omission in question<sup>20</sup>.

1 'Parking' means leaving a vehicle or permitting it to remain at rest: Terrorism Act 2000 s 52.

2 For these purposes, 'vehicle' has the same meaning as in the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 s 99(5) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 870): Terrorism Act 2000 s 52.

3 'Road' has the same meaning as in the Road Traffic Act 1988 (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 206): Terrorism Act 2000 s 121.

4 Ibid s 48(1). The power conferred by an authorisation under s 48 must be exercised by placing a traffic sign on the road concerned: s 49(1). A constable exercising the power conferred by an authorisation under s 48 may suspend a parking place: s 49(2). Where a parking place is suspended under s 49(2), the suspension is treated as a restriction imposed by virtue of s 48 for the purposes of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 s 99 (as amended) (removal of vehicles illegally parked etc) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 870) and of any regulations in force under that provision: Terrorism Act 2000 s 49(3)(a). 'Traffic sign' has the meaning given by the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 s 142(1) (see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 830); Terrorism Act 2000 s 52.

5 For the meaning of 'police area' see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (definition amended by the Police Act 1996 s 103, Sch 7 para 32); Police Act 1996 s 101(1); and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 136.

6 Terrorism Act 2000 s 48(3)(a). If an authorisation is given orally, the person giving it must confirm it in writing as soon as is reasonably practicable: s 48(4).

7 Ibid s 48(3)(b).

8 Ibid s 48(3)(c).

9 Ie under ibid s 48.

10 Ibid s 48(2). For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante. As to the meaning of 'act' see PARA 394 note 1 ante.

11 Ibid s 50(1).

12 Ibid s 50(2).

13 Ibid s 50(3). The provisions of s 50(1), (2) (see the text and notes 11-12 supra) apply as if a new authorisation were given on each occasion on which the authorisation is renewed: s 50(3).

14 Ibid s 51(1).

15 Ibid s 51(5). As to the standard scale see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142.

16 'Driver' means, in relation to a vehicle which has been left on any road, the person who was driving it when it was left there: ibid s 52.

17 Ibid s 51(2).

18 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 51 weeks: see ibid s 51 (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 280(2), (3), Sch 26 para 55(1), (3)). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

19 Terrorism Act 2000 s 51(6).

20 Ibid s 51(3). Note that this is not one of the defences to be proved by the defendant to which s 118 applies (which states that in relation to certain provisions of the Act where the defendant has the burden of proof that burden is only an evidential one): see s 118. It may therefore be inferred that the burden imposed on the defendant of proving the present defence is a legal (or persuasive) one, but that implication was not drawn in respect of the corresponding issue in the context of s 11 (see PARA 387 ante): see Sheldrake v DPP, A-G's Reference (No 4 of 2002) [2004] UKHL 43, [2005] 1 AC 264, [2005] 1 Cr App Rep 450. See further PARA 1368 et seq post.

Possession of a current disabled person's badge does not itself constitute a reasonable excuse for the purposes of the Terrorism Act 2000 s 51(3): s 51(4). 'Disabled person's badge' means a badge issued, or having effect as if issued, under any regulations for the time being in force under the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970 s 21 (as amended) (see SOCIAL SERVICES AND COMMUNITY CARE vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 1071): Terrorism Act 2000 s 52.

429. Retention of communications data.

The Secretary of State must issue a code of practice<sup>1</sup> relating to the retention by communications providers<sup>2</sup> of communications data<sup>3</sup> obtained by or held by them<sup>4</sup> and may enter into agreements about the retention of communications data<sup>5</sup>. The Secretary of State has power to issue directions about the retention of communications data<sup>6</sup>. Appropriate arrangements must be made by him for the payments to communications providers towards the costs incurred by them in complying with the provisions of any such code of practice, agreement or direction or as a consequence of the retention of any communications data in accordance with any such provisions<sup>7</sup>.

1 The code of practice must comply with the procedural provisions of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 103.

2 'Communications provider' means a person who provides a postal service or a telecommunications service: ibid s 107(1). For the meaning of 'postal service' see PARA 506 note 5 post. For the meaning of 'telecommunications service' see PARA 507 note 6 post.

3 'Communications data' has the same meaning as in the Regulation of Investigatory Powers Act 2000 Pt 1 Ch 2 (ss 21-25) (see PARA 521 note 3 post): Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 107.

4 See ibid s 102(1). For this purpose, the draft code of practice entitled 'Voluntary Retention of Communications Data under Part 11: Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 - Voluntary Code of Practice' has been brought into force: Retention of Communications Data (Code of Practice) Order 2003, SI 2003/3175.

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(vi) Port and Border Controls/430. Power to stop, question and detain.

(vi) Port and Border Controls

430. Power to stop, question and detain.

For the purpose of determining whether he appears to be a person who is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism<sup>1</sup>, an examining officer<sup>2</sup> may question:

- 508 (1) a person if he is at a port<sup>3</sup> or in the border area<sup>4</sup>, and the examining officer believes that the person's presence at the port or in the area is connected with his entering or leaving Great Britain<sup>5</sup> or Northern Ireland or his travelling by air within Great Britain or within Northern Ireland<sup>6</sup>; or
- 509 (2) a person on a ship<sup>7</sup> or aircraft which has arrived at any place in Great Britain or Northern Ireland (whether from within or outside Great Britain or Northern Ireland)<sup>8</sup>.

A person who is questioned under this power must:

- 510 (a) give the examining officer any information in his possession which the officer requests;
- 511 (b) give the examining officer on request either a valid passport which includes a photograph or another document which establishes his identity;
- 512 (c) declare whether he has with him documents of a kind specified by the examining officer;
- 513 (d) give the examining officer on request any document which he has with him and which is of a kind specified by the officer<sup>9</sup>.

For the purposes of exercising the power to question<sup>10</sup>, an examining officer may stop a person or vehicle; and may detain a person<sup>11</sup>. For the purpose of detaining a person, an examining officer may authorise the person's removal from a ship, aircraft or vehicle<sup>12</sup>. Where a person is detained under this power there are specific rules as to his treatment<sup>13</sup>.

Unless detained under any other power, a detained person must be released not later than the end of the period of nine hours beginning with the time when his examination begins<sup>14</sup>.

1 See the Terrorism Act 2000 s 40(1)(b); and PARA 420 ante. For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante. As to the meaning of 'act' see PARA 394 note 1 ante.

2 An 'examining officer' means any of the following: (1) a constable; (2) an immigration officer (ie a person appointed for the purposes of the Immigration Act 1971 Sch 2 para 1 (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 140); Terrorism Act 2000 s 121); and (3) an officer of Revenue and Customs (ie an officer commissioned by the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs under the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 s 6(3) (as amended) (see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 901)) designated for the purposes of the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 (as amended) by the Secretary of State and the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs; Terrorism Act 2000 s 53, Sch 7 para 1; Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50(1), (2), (7). As to the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and officers of Revenue and Customs see PARA 354 note 2 ante.

3 'Port' includes an airport and a hoverport: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 para 1(2). A place is to be treated as a port for the purposes of Sch 7 (as amended) in relation to a person if an examining officer believes that the person has gone there for the purpose of embarking on a ship or aircraft, or has arrived there on disembarking from a ship or aircraft: Sch 7 para 1(3).

4 Is a place in Northern Ireland which is no more than one mile from the border with the Irish Republic or the first place in Northern Ireland at which a train from the Republic stops to allow passengers to leave: ibid Sch 7 paras 1(2), 4. An examining officer may also question a person who is in the border area for the purpose of determining whether his presence in the area is connected with his entering or leaving Northern Ireland: Sch 7 para 3.

5 For the meaning of 'Great Britain' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

6 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 para 2(1), (2) (amended by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 118(1), (2)). See note 8 infra.

7 'Ship' includes a hovercraft: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 para 1(2).

8 Ibid Sch 7 para 2(1), (3) (amended by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 118(1), (3)). An examining officer may exercise this power whether or not he has grounds for suspecting that a person is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism: Terrorism Act 2000 s 40(1) (b), Sch 7 para 2(4).

The Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 (Juxtaposed Controls) Order 2003, SI 2003/2818, provides for the exercise of immigration control by the authorities of the United Kingdom and France in each other's sea ports. Part 2 (arts 3-10) contains provisions relating to the exercise of immigration control by French officers in a control zone in the United Kingdom. Part 3 (arts 11-16) contains provisions relating to the exercise of immigration control by immigration officers in a control zone in France. The provisions of the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 paras 2, 5-9, 12-17 (as amended) apply, with some significant variations, in a control zone in the ports of Calais, Boulogne and Dunkirk under the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 (Juxtaposed Controls) Order 2003, SI 2003/2818, art 11(1), Sch 2 para 2.

The powers conferred by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 (as amended) are exercisable notwithstanding the rights conferred by the Immigration Act 1971 s 1 (general principles regulating entry into and staying in the United Kingdom: see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 84 et seq): Terrorism Act 2000 s 53(3).

9 Ibid Sch 7 para 5.

10 See under ibid Sch 7 para 2 or 3: see the text and notes 1-8 supra.

11 Ibid Sch 7 para 6(1). For these purposes, 'vehicle' includes a train: Sch 7 para 1(2).

An examining officer may enter a vehicle (which, for these purposes, includes an aircraft, hovercraft, train or vessel: s 121) for the purpose of exercising any of the functions conferred on him by virtue of Sch 7 (as amended), and may if necessary use reasonable force for the purpose of exercising a power conferred on him by virtue of those provisions (apart from Sch 7 paras 2, 3 (see the text and notes 1-8 supra)): see s 115, Sch 14 paras 2, 3.

Information acquired by an officer may be supplied (1) to the Secretary of State for use in relation to immigration; (2) to the Commissioners for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs or an officer of Revenue and Customs; (3) to a constable; (4) to the Director General of the Serious Organised Crime Agency; (5) to a person specified by order of the Secretary of State for use of a kind specified in the order: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 14 para 4(1) (amended by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act 2005 s 59, Sch 4 paras 125, 130); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs 2005 s 50(1), (2), (7). Information may be supplied in accordance with the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 14 para 4(2) only if the information has not been held solely in the exercise of functions relating to former Inland Revenue matters (within the meaning of the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 7): s 17, Sch 2 para 19.

Information acquired by an officer of Revenue and Customs or an immigration officer may be supplied to an examining officer: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 14 para 4(2); Commissioners for Revenue and Customs 2005 s 50(1), (2), (7).

An officer must perform functions conferred on him by virtue of the terrorist cash provisions in accordance with the code of practice about the exercise by officers of those functions which has been issued by the Secretary of State: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 14 paras 5, 6(1) (amended by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 2(6)). The Code of Practice for Examining Officers was brought into force by the Terrorism Act 2000 (Code of Practice for Examining Officers) Order 2001, SI 2001/427. The code has been extended with variations to examining officers in a control zone by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 (Juxtaposed Controls) Order 2003, SI 2003/2818, art 11(1), Sch 2 para 3. The failure by an officer to observe a provision of the code does not of itself make him liable to criminal or civil proceedings: Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 14 para 6(2). The code is admissible in evidence in criminal and civil proceedings, and is to be taken into account by a court or tribunal in any case in which it appears to the court or tribunal to be relevant: Sch 14 para 6(3).

The procedure for making a code of practice for examining officers is laid down by Sch 14 para 7. Code F: Code of Practice on Visual Recordings with Sound of Interviews with Suspects does not apply to interviews under the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 (as amended): Code F para 3.2.

12 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 para 6(2).

13 The provisions of ibid Sch 8 apply: see Sch 7 para 6(3). The provisions of Sch 8 have effect (with modification) in the control zone (ie including the ports of Calais, Boulogne and Dunkirk) established by the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 (Juxtaposed Controls) Order 2003, SI 2003/2818: see art 2.

14 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 para 6(4).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(vi) Port and Border Controls/432. Searches.

432. Searches.

For the purpose of satisfying himself whether there are any persons whom he may wish to question under the power relating to port and border controls<sup>1</sup>, an examining officer<sup>2</sup> may search a ship<sup>3</sup> or aircraft<sup>4</sup>, anything on a ship or aircraft<sup>5</sup>, or anything which he reasonably believes has been, or is about to be, on a ship or aircraft<sup>6</sup>.

For the purpose of determining whether a person is or has been concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism<sup>7</sup>, an examining officer who questions a person under this power<sup>8</sup> may:

- 517 (1) search the person<sup>9</sup>;
- 518 (2) search anything which he has with him, or which belongs to him, and which is on a ship or aircraft<sup>10</sup>;
- 519 (3) search anything which he has with him, or which belongs to him, and which the examining officer reasonably believes has been, or is about to be, on a ship or aircraft<sup>11</sup>;
- 520 (4) search a ship or aircraft for anything falling within head (2) above<sup>12</sup>;
- 521 (5) search a vehicle which is on a ship or aircraft<sup>13</sup>; and
- 522 (6) search a vehicle which the examining officer reasonably believes has been, or is about to be, on a ship or aircraft<sup>14</sup>.

For the purpose of determining whether they have been used in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism, an examining officer may examine: (a) goods<sup>15</sup> which have arrived in or are about to leave Great Britain or Northern Ireland on a ship or a vehicle<sup>16</sup>; and (b) goods which have arrived at or are about to leave Great Britain or Northern Ireland on an aircraft (whether the place they have come from or are going to is within or outside Great Britain or Northern Ireland)<sup>17</sup>.

An examining officer may authorise any person to carry out on his behalf a search or examination under any of the provisions<sup>18</sup> described above<sup>19</sup>.

3 For the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 430 note 7 ante.

4 Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 7 para 7(a). The search powers contained in Sch 7 paras 7, 8 are compulsory and the object of the search cannot object; and they do not contravene the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953); Cmd 8969) art 6 (the presumption of innocence) because they are proportionate to the threat terrorism can create and are justified in the interests of security and for the safety of the public: R v Hundal; R v Dhalilwal [2004] EWCA Crim 389, [2004] 2 Cr App Rep 307. The Convention is commonly referred to as the European Convention on Human Rights and is enshrined in the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 122 et seq.

An examining officer may enter a vehicle to carry out a search (Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 14 para 2) and may, if necessary, use reasonable force to do so or to conduct the search (Sch 14 para 3). There is also a power to search in respect of a vehicle where the examining officer questions a person in the border area: see Sch 7 para 8(2). As to the meaning of 'vehicle' see PARA 430 note 11 ante.

(vii) Terrorist Offences

A. TRAINING, PREPARING AND ORGANISING

439. Terrorist training.

A person commits an offence if he provides instruction<sup>1</sup> or training in the making or use of:

- 544 (1) firearms<sup>2</sup>;
- 545 (2) radioactive material or weapons designed or adapted for the discharge of any radioactive material<sup>3</sup>;
- 546 (3) explosives<sup>4</sup>; or
- 547 (4) chemical<sup>5</sup>, biological<sup>6</sup> or nuclear weapons<sup>7</sup>.

A person also commits an offence if he provides instruction or training<sup>8</sup> in:

- 548 (a) the making, handling or use of a noxious substance<sup>9</sup>, or of substances of a description of such substances<sup>10</sup>;
- 549 (b) the use of any method or technique for doing anything else that is capable of being done for the purposes of terrorism<sup>11</sup>, in connection with the commission or preparation of an act of terrorism<sup>12</sup> or Convention offence<sup>13</sup> or in connection with assisting the commission or preparation by another of such an act or offence<sup>14</sup>; or
- 550 (c) the design or adaptation for the purposes of terrorism, or in connection with the commission or preparation of an act of terrorism or Convention offence, of any method or technique for doing anything<sup>15</sup>, and at the time he provides the instruction or training he knows that a person receiving it intends to use the skills in which he is being instructed or trained for or in connection with the commission or preparation of acts of terrorism or Convention offences<sup>16</sup> or for assisting the commission or preparation by others of such acts or offences<sup>17</sup>. A person also commits an offence if he receives instruction or training in:

- 551 (i) the making or use of firearms<sup>18</sup>;
- 552 (ii) the making or use of radioactive material or weapons designed or adapted for the discharge of any radioactive material<sup>19</sup>;
- 553 (iii) the making or use of explosives<sup>20</sup>;
- 554 (iv) the making or use of chemical, biological or nuclear weapons<sup>21</sup>; or
- 555 (v) any of the skills mentioned in heads (a) to (c) above<sup>22</sup> intending at the time of the instruction or training to use the skills in which he is being instructed or trained for or in connection with the commission or preparation of acts of terrorism or Convention offences<sup>23</sup> or for assisting the commission or preparation by others of such acts or offences<sup>24</sup>.

A person also commits an offence if he invites another to receive instruction or training<sup>25</sup> and the receipt would constitute any of the offences referred to under heads (i) to (iv) above<sup>26</sup>, or would constitute that offence but for the fact that it is to take place outside the United Kingdom<sup>27</sup>.

It is a defence for a person charged with any of the offences in relation to instruction or training referred to under heads (1) to (4) and (i) to (iv) above to prove<sup>28</sup> that his action or involvement was wholly for a purpose other than assisting, preparing for or participating in terrorism<sup>29</sup>.

A person guilty of an offence under these provisions<sup>30</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both<sup>31</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months<sup>32</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>33</sup>.

A court by or before which a person is convicted of an offence referred to under heads (1) to (4) and (i) to (iv) above may order the forfeiture of anything which the court considers to have been in the person's possession for purposes connected with the offence<sup>34</sup>.

1 'The provision of instruction' includes making instruction available either generally or to one or more specific persons: Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(4)(a); Terrorism Act 2006 s 20(1).

2 Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(1)(a). 'Firearm' includes an air gun or air pistol: s 121. See further note 7 infra.

3 Ibid s 54(1)(aa) (s 54(1)(aa), (2)(aa) added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 120(1)). 'Radioactive material' means radioactive material capable of endangering life or causing harm to human health: Terrorism Act 2000 s 55 (definition added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 120(2)(b)). See further note 7 infra.

4 Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(1)(b). 'Explosive' means: (1) an article or substance manufactured for the purpose of producing a practical effect by explosion; (2) materials for making an article or substance within head (1) supra; (3) anything used or intended to be used for causing or assisting in causing an explosion; and (4) a part of anything within head (1) or head (3) supra: s 121. See further note 7 infra.

5 'Chemical weapon' has the meaning given by the Chemical Weapons Act 1996 s 1 (see WAR AND ARMED CONFLICT vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 473); Terrorism Act 2000 s 55.

6 'Biological weapon' means a biological agent or toxin (within the meaning of the Biological Weapons Act 1974) in a form capable of being of use for hostile purposes or anything to which s 1(1)(b) applies (see WAR AND ARMED CONFLICT vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 469); Terrorism Act 2000 s 55 (definition added by the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 s 120(2)(b)).

7 Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(1)(c).

Proceedings for this offence, and for the offences under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(2), (3) (see the text and notes 18-21, 27 infra), require the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 117(1), (2)(a). Where, however, it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence to which s 117 (as amended) applies has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, his consent for these purposes may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General: s 117(2A) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(2)). As to the effect of these restrictions see PARA 1071 post.

8 It is irrelevant for the purposes of the offences created by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 6(1), (2) whether any instruction or training that is provided is provided to one or more particular persons or generally: s 6(4)(a).

9 For these purposes, 'noxious substance' means either a dangerous substance within the meaning of the Anti-terrorism, Crime and Security Act 2001 Pt 7 (ss 58-75) (see s 58(4), (5); and PARA 622 post) or any other substance which is hazardous or noxious or which may be or become hazardous or noxious only in certain circumstances; and 'substance' includes any natural or artificial substance (whatever its origin or method of production and whether in solid or liquid form or in the form of a gas or vapour) and any mixture of substances: Terrorism Act 2006 s 6(7).

10 Ibid s 6(1)(a), (3)(a).

11 For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante.

12 'Act of terrorism' includes anything constituting an action taken for the purposes of terrorism, within the meaning of the Terrorism Act 2000 (see s 1(5); and PARA 383 ante); Terrorism Act 2006 s 20(2). For the meaning of 'act' see PARA 394 note 1 ante; definition applied by s 20(1).

13 For the meaning of 'Convention offence' see PARA 384 ante.

14 Terrorism Act 2006 s 6(3)(b). It is irrelevant for the purposes of the offences created by s 6(1), (2) whether the acts or offences in relation to which a person intends to use skills in which he is instructed or trained consist of one or more particular acts of terrorism or Convention offences, or acts of terrorism or Convention offences of a particular description, or acts of terrorism or Convention offences generally (s 6(4)(b)), and whether assistance that a person intends to provide to others is intended to be provided to one or more particular persons or to one or more persons whose identities are not yet known (s 6(4)(c)).

21 Ibid s 54(2)(c) (as added: see note 3 supra). See further note 7 supra.

22 Terrorism Act 2006 s 6(2)(a).

23 Ibid s 6(2)(b)(i).

24 Ibid s 6(2)(b)(ii).

25 An invitation to receive instruction or training may be either general or addressed to one or more specific persons: Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(4)(b).

26 Ie under ibid s 54(2): see the text and notes 18-21 supra.

27 Ibid s 54(3). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

28 This is one of the provisions to which ibid s 118(2) applies: see s 118(1), (5). Section 118(2) provides that if the person adduces evidence which is sufficient to raise an issue with respect to the matter, the court or jury must assume that the defence is satisfied unless the prosecution proves beyond reasonable doubt that it is not.

29 Ibid s 54(5).

30 Proceedings for an offence under the Terrorism Act 2006 Pt 1 (ss 1-20) may be instituted in England and Wales only with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions (s 19(1)(a)) unless it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence under Pt 1 has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, in which event his consent may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General (s 19(2)(a)).

Where an offence under Pt 1 is committed by a body corporate and is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate (s 18(1)(a)) or a person who was purporting to act in any such capacity (s 18(1)(b)), he (as well as the body corporate) is guilty of that offence and is liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly (s 18(1)). For this purpose, 'director', in relation to a body corporate whose affairs are managed by its members, means a member of the body corporate: s 18(3).

31 Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(6)(a); Terrorism Act 2006 s 6(5)(a).

32 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased, in the case of the offences referred to under heads (1)-(4) and (i)-(iv) in the text, to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

In the case of an offence committed after the commencement of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 154(1) (see MAGISTRATES) and falling within heads (a)-(c) and (v) in the text, the reference to six months is to be read as a reference to 12 months: see the Terrorism Act 2006 s 6(5)(b), (6).

33 Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(6)(b); Terrorism Act 2006 s 6(5)(b), (6). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140. As to extra-territorial jurisdiction see PARA 472 post.

34 Terrorism Act 2000 s 54(7). Before making an order under s 54(7), a court must give an opportunity to be heard to any person, other than the convicted person, who claims to be the owner of or otherwise interested in anything which can be forfeited under s 54(7): s 54(8). An order under s 54(7) does not come into force until there is no further possibility of it being varied, or set aside, on appeal (disregarding any power of a court to grant leave to appeal out of time): s 54(9).

Where court makes an order under s 54 (as amended) for the forfeiture of anything, it may also make such other provision as appears to it to be necessary for giving effect to the forfeiture: s 120A(1) (s 120A added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(3)). That provision may include, in particular, provision relating to the retention, handling, disposal or destruction of what is forfeited: Terrorism Act 2000 s 120A(2) (as so added). Provision so made may be varied at any time by the court that made it: s 120A(3) (as so added).

OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(vii) Terrorist Offences/A. TRAINING, PREPARING AND ORGANISING/442. Possession of article for terrorist purposes.

442. Possession of article for terrorist purposes.

A person commits an offence if he possesses<sup>1</sup> an article<sup>2</sup> in circumstances which give rise to a reasonable suspicion that his possession is for a purpose connected with the commission, preparation or instigation of an act of terrorism<sup>3</sup>.

It is a defence for the defendant to prove<sup>4</sup> that his possession of the article was not for a purpose connected with the commission, preparation or instigation of an act of terrorism<sup>5</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding fifteen years or to a fine or to both<sup>6</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>7</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>8</sup>.

1 If it is proved that an article (1) was on any premises at the same time as the defendant; or (2) was on premises of which the defendant was the occupier or which he habitually used otherwise than as a member of the public, the court may assume that the defendant possessed the article, unless he proves that he did not know of its presence on the premises or that he had no control over it: Terrorism Act 2000 s 57(3). This is one of the provisions to which s 118(4) applies: see s 118(3), (5). Section 118(4) provides that if evidence is adduced which is sufficient to raise an issue with respect to the matter mentioned the court must treat it as proved unless the prosecution disproves it beyond reasonable doubt. For the meaning of 'premises' see PARA 408 note 19 ante.

4 This is one of the provisions to which the Terrorism Act 2000 s 118(2) applies: see s 118(1), (5). Section 118(2) provides that if the person adduces evidence which is sufficient to raise an issue with respect to the matter, the court or jury must assume that the defence is satisfied unless the prosecution proves beyond reasonable doubt that it is not.

5 Ibid s 57(2).

6 Ibid s 57(4)(a) (amended by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 13(1)). ## B. OFFENCES INVOLVING RADIOACTIVE DEVICES AND NUCLEAR FACILITIES

444. Making and possession of radioactive devices and materials.

For these purposes, 'radioactive device' means a nuclear weapon or other nuclear explosive device<sup>1</sup>, a radioactive material dispersal device, or a radiation-emitting device<sup>2</sup>; and 'radioactive material' means nuclear material<sup>3</sup> or any other radioactive substance which contains nuclides of a specified type<sup>4</sup> and is capable, owing to its radiological or fissile properties, of causing serious bodily injury to a person, causing serious damage to property, endangering a person's life, or creating a serious risk to the health or safety of the public<sup>5</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he makes or has in his possession a radioactive device<sup>6</sup>, or has in his possession radioactive material<sup>7</sup>, with the intention of using the device or material in the course of or in connection with the commission or preparation of an act of terrorism<sup>8</sup> or for the purposes of terrorism, or of making it available to be so used<sup>9</sup>. It is irrelevant for these purposes whether the act of terrorism to which an intention relates is a particular act of terrorism, or an act of terrorism of a particular description, or an act of terrorism generally<sup>10</sup>. A person guilty of an offence under these provisions<sup>11</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for life<sup>12</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'device' includes any of the following, whether or not fixed to land, namely, machinery, equipment, appliances, tanks, containers, pipes and conduits: Terrorism Act 2006 s 9(5).

2 Ibid ss 9(4), 10(4), 11(5).

C. PROMOTION AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF TERRORISM

447. Collection of information.

A person commits an offence if he collects or makes a record of information of a kind likely to be useful to a person committing or preparing an act<sup>1</sup> of terrorism<sup>2</sup>, or he possesses a document or record<sup>3</sup> containing information of that kind<sup>4</sup>.

It is a defence for the defendant to prove<sup>5</sup> that he had a reasonable excuse for his action<sup>6</sup> or possession<sup>7</sup>.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six<sup>8</sup> months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the meaning of 'act' see PARA 394 note 1 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante.

3 'Record' includes a photographic or electronic record: Terrorism Act 2000 s 58(2).

4 Ibid s 58(1). Proceedings for this offence require the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions: s 117(1), (2)(a). Where, however, it appears to the Director of Public Prosecutions that an offence to which s 117 (as amended) applies has been committed for a purpose wholly or partly connected with the affairs of a country other than the United Kingdom, his consent for these purposes may be given only with the permission of the Attorney General: s 117(2A) (added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(2)). As to the effect of these restrictions see PARA 1071 post. For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

5 This is one of the provisions to which the Terrorism Act 2000 s 118(2) applies: see s 118(1), (5). Section 118(2) provides that if the person adduces evidence which is sufficient to raise an issue with respect to the matter, the court or jury must assume that the defence is satisfied unless the prosecution proves beyond reasonable doubt that it is not.

6 As to the meaning of 'action' see PARA 394 note 1 ante.

7 Terrorism Act 2000 s 58(3).

8 As from a day to be appointed this maximum term of imprisonment is increased to a maximum term of 12 months (see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 ss 281(7), 282(2), (3) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post), although this does not affect the penalty for any offence committed before that day (see s 282(4) (not yet in force); and PARA 1121 post). At the date at which this volume states the law no such day had been appointed.

9 Terrorism Act 2000 s 58(4). As to the statutory maximum see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140. As to extra-territorial jurisdiction see PARA 472 post.

A court by or before which a person is convicted of an offence under s 58 may order the forfeiture of any document or record containing information of the kind likely to be useful to a person committing or preparing an act of terrorism: s 58(1)(a), (5). Before making such an order a court must give an opportunity to be heard to any person, other than the convicted person, who claims to be the owner of or otherwise interested in anything which can be forfeited under s 58(5): s 58(6). An order under s 58(5) does not come into force until there is no further possibility of it being varied, or set aside, on appeal (disregarding any power of a court to grant leave to appeal out of time): s 58(7).

Where court makes an order under s 58 for the forfeiture of anything, it may also make such other provision as appears to it to be necessary for giving effect to the forfeiture: s 120A(1) (s 120A added by the Terrorism Act 2006 s 37(3)). That provision may include, in particular, provision relating to the retention, handling, disposal or destruction of what is forfeited: Terrorism Act 2000 s 120A(2) (as so added). Provision so made may be varied at any time by the court that made it: s 120A(3) (as so added).

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

447 Collection of information

TEXT AND NOTES--A person commits an offence who elicits or attempts to elicit information about an individual who is or has been a member of Her Majesty's forces, a member of the Security Service, the Secret Intelligence Service or GCHQ, or a constable, where that information is of a kind likely to be useful to a person committing or preparing an act of terrorism: Terrorism Act 2000 s 58A(1)(a), (4) (s 58A added by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 76(1)). Any document or record containing such information is liable to forfeiture: see the Terrorism Act 2000 s 120A (substituted by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 38(1)). A person commits an offence who publishes or communicates any such information: Terrorism Act 2000 s 58A(1)(a). It is a defence for a person charged with an offence under s 58A to prove that he had a reasonable excuse for his action: s 58A(2). A person guilty of an offence under s 58A is liable on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 10 years or to a fine, or to both, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum, or to both: s 58A(3). In relation to an offence committed before the commencement of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 154(1), the maximum term on summary conviction is six months' imprisonment: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 76(2). See also the Terrorism Act 2000 s 118 (amended by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 76(3)). Supplementary provision is made by the Terrorism Act 2000 Sch 8A (added by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Sch 8) to ensure compliance with European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2000/31. See further Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 143 (implementation of E-Commerce and Services directives: penalties).

NOTE 4--After 'committed' read 'outside the United Kingdom or': Terrorism Act 2000 s 117(2A) (amended by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 29). Where an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 58 is committed in the United Kingdom, proceedings for the offence may be taken at any place in the United Kingdom and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed at any such place: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 28(1), (2)(a). A defendant can be convicted of an offence under the Terrorism Act 2000 s 58(1)(a) or s 58(1)(b) only if he knew of the nature of the information collected, recorded or possessed and had control of it: R v G; R v J [2009] UKHL 13, [2009] 2 All ER 409. The offence is only committed if the document concerned was of a kind that was likely to provide practical assistance to such a person, rather than simply encouraging the commission of terrorist acts: R v K [2008] EWCA Crim 185, [2008] QB 827, [2008] 3 All ER 526. The fact that a document might be useful to persons other than terrorists does not take it outside the scope of s 58 provided it is not in every day use by ordinary members of the public: R v Muhammed [2010] EWCA Crim 227, [2010] All ER (D) 227 (Feb). See also R v S [2008] EWCA Crim 2177, [2009] 1 All ER 716; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 517.

NOTE 7--The test for a reasonable excuse is an objective one. As the Terrorism Act 2000 s 58(1) does not require the defendant to have a terrorist purpose, the fact that the defendant's actions do not relate to terrorism does not mean that they are reasonable: R v G; R v J [2009] UKHL 13, [2009] 2 All ER 409.

NOTE 9--Terrorism Act 2000 s 58(5)-(7) repealed, s 120A substituted by the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 38(1), Sch 3 para 3, Sch 9 Pt 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(vii) Terrorist Offences/C. PROMOTION AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF TERRORISM/448. Encouragement and glorification of terrorism.

448. Encouragement and glorification of terrorism.

A person commits an offence if he publishes a statement<sup>1</sup> likely to be understood<sup>2</sup> by some or all of the members of the public to whom it is published as a direct or indirect encouragement or other inducement to them to the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism<sup>3</sup> or Convention offences<sup>4</sup>, or causes another to publish such a statement<sup>5</sup>. For these purposes, the statements that are likely to be understood by members of the public as indirectly encouraging the commission or preparation of acts of terrorism or Convention offences include every statement which glorifies<sup>6</sup> the commission or preparation (whether in the past, in the future or generally) of such acts or offences<sup>7</sup> and is a statement from which those members of the public could reasonably be expected to infer<sup>8</sup> that what is being glorified is being glorified as conduct that should be emulated by them in existing circumstances<sup>9</sup>.

The offence is committed only if at the time the person publishes it or causes it to be published he either intends members of the public to be directly or indirectly encouraged or otherwise induced by the statement to commit, prepare or instigate acts of terrorism or Convention offences<sup>10</sup> or is reckless as to whether members of the public will be directly or indirectly encouraged or otherwise induced by the statement to commit, prepare or instigate such acts or offences<sup>12</sup>; however, it is irrelevant<sup>13</sup> whether any matter in issue<sup>14</sup> relates to the commission, preparation or instigation of one or more particular acts of terrorism or Convention offences, or of acts of terrorism or Convention offences of a particular description, or of acts of terrorism or Convention offences generally<sup>15</sup>, and whether any person is in fact encouraged or induced by the statement to commit, prepare or instigate any such act or offence<sup>16</sup>.

A person guilty of this offence<sup>17</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or to a fine or to both<sup>18</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding or six months<sup>19</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>20</sup> or to both<sup>21</sup>.

1 In the Terrorism Act 2006 Pt 1 (ss 1-20), references to a 'statement' are references to a communication of any description, including a communication without words consisting of sounds or images or both: s 20(1), (6). References to a person's 'publishing' a statement are references to his publishing it in any manner to the public (s 20(1), (4)(a)), his providing electronically any service by means of which the public has access to the statement (s 20(4)(b)), or his using a service provided to him electronically by another so as to enable or to facilitate access by the public to the statement (s 20(4)(c)). In connection with electronic publication see also s 3; and PARA 450 post. References to 'the public' are references to the public of any part of the United Kingdom or of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom, or any section of the public (s 20(1), (3)(a)), and (except in s 9(4) (see PARA 444 ante)) also include references to a meeting or other group of persons which is open to the public (whether unconditionally or on the making of a payment or the satisfaction of other conditions) (s 20(3)(b)). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 45 note 2 ante.

2 For these purposes, the question of how a statement is likely to be understood must be determined having regard both to the contents of the statement as a whole (ibid s 1(4)(a)) and to the circumstances and manner of its publication (s 1(4)(b)).

3 For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante; and for the meaning of 'act of terrorism' see PARA 439 note 12 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'Convention offence' see PARA 384 ante.

5 Terrorism Act 2006 s 1(1), (2)(a).

6 'Glorification' includes any form of praise or celebration; and cognate expressions are to be construed accordingly: ibid s 20(1).

7 Ibid s 1(3)(a).

8 For these purposes, the question of what members of the public could reasonably be expected to infer from a statement must be determined having regard both to the contents of the statement as a whole (ibid s 1(4)(a)) and to the circumstances and manner of its publication (s 1(4)(b)).

9 Ibid s 1(3)(b). In ibid Pt 1, references to 'conduct that should be emulated in existing circumstances' include references to conduct that is illustrative of a type of conduct that should be so emulated: s 20(7).

10 Ibid s 1(2)(b)(i). In proceedings for an offence under s 1 against a person in whose case it is not proved that he intended the statement directly or indirectly to encourage or otherwise induce the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism or Convention offences, it is a defence for him to show that the statement neither expressed his views nor had his indorsement (whether by virtue of s 3 (see PARA 450 post) or otherwise) (s 1(6)(a)) and that it was clear, in all the circumstances of the statement's publication, that it did not express his views and (apart from the possibility of his having been given and failed to comply with a notice under s 3(3) (see PARA 450 post)) did not have his indorsement (s 1(6)(b)).

11 Ibid s 1(2)(b)(ii).

13 Ie for the purposes of ibid s 1(1)-(3) (see the text and notes 1-11 supra).

14 Ie anything mentioned in ibid s 1(1)-(3) (see the text and notes 1-11 supra).

15 Ibid s 1(5)(a).

16 Ibid s 1(5)(b).

17 As to the institution of proceedings, and the liability of company directors, in connection with offences under the Terrorism Act 2006 see PARA 439 note 30 ante.

19 In relation to an offence committed after the commencement of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 154(1) (not yet in force) (see MAGISTRATES), this is to be read as a reference to 12 months: see the Terrorism Act 2006 s 1(7)(b), (8).

UPDATE

383-477 Prevention of terrorism

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 4 (ss 40-61), Sch 4-6 impose notification requirements on persons dealt with in respect of specified offences relating to terrorism and corresponding foreign offences: see PARAS 477A-477D.

448-449 Encouragement and glorification of terrorism; Disseminating terrorist publications

The offences under the 2006 Act s 1 (encouragement and glorification of terrorism) and s 2 (disseminating terrorist publications) are extended so that those offences apply to United Kingdom established information society service providers in EEA states other than the United Kingdom, but proceedings for such an offence against information society service providers established in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom is restricted: see the Electronic Commerce Directive (Terrorism Act 2006)

Regulations 2007, SI 2007/1550, regs 3, 4. An information society service provider is not capable of being guilty of an offence under the 2006 Act s 1 or 2 where it merely provides conduit, caching or hosting services: see SI 2007/1550 regs 5-7.

448 Encouragement and glorification of terrorism

NOTES 1-16--Where an offence under the Terrorism Act 2006 s 1 is committed in the United Kingdom, proceedings for the offence may be taken at any place in the United Kingdom and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed at any such place: Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 s 28(1), (2)(c).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-620; VOLUME 11(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 621-1049; VOLUME 11(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1050-1557; VOLUME 11(4) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1558-2180)/5. OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE OR SECURITY/(6) PREVENTION OF TERRORISM/(vii) Terrorist Offences/C. PROMOTION AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF TERRORISM/449. Disseminating terrorist publications.

449. Disseminating terrorist publications.

A publication<sup>1</sup> is a 'terrorist publication'<sup>2</sup> if matter contained in it is likely to be understood, by some or all of the persons to whom it is or may become available as a consequence of that conduct, as a direct or indirect encouragement or other inducement to them to the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism<sup>3</sup> or to be useful in the commission or preparation of such acts and to be understood, by some or all of those persons, as contained in the publication, or made available to them, wholly or mainly for the purpose of being so useful to them<sup>4</sup>.

A person commits an offence if he:

- 567 (1) distributes or circulates a terrorist publication<sup>5</sup>;
- 568 (2) gives, sells or lends<sup>6</sup> such a publication<sup>7</sup>;
- 569 (3) offers such a publication for sale or loan<sup>8</sup>;
- 570 (4) provides a service<sup>9</sup> to others that enables them to obtain, read, listen to or look at such a publication, or to acquire it by means of a gift, sale or loan<sup>10</sup>;
- 571 (5) transmits the contents of such a publication electronically<sup>11</sup>; or
- 572 (6) has such a publication in his possession with a view to its becoming the subject of conduct falling within any of heads (1) to (5) above<sup>12</sup>.

For these purposes, matter that is likely to be understood by a person as indirectly encouraging the commission or preparation of acts of terrorism includes any matter which glorifies<sup>13</sup> the commission or preparation (whether in the past, in the future or generally) of such acts<sup>14</sup> and is matter from which that person could reasonably be expected to infer that what is being glorified is being glorified as conduct that should be emulated by him in existing circumstances<sup>15</sup>.

The offence is committed only if at the time the person engages in the conduct in question he:

- 573 (a) intends an effect of his conduct<sup>16</sup> to be a direct or indirect encouragement or other inducement to the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism<sup>17</sup>;
- 574 (b) intends an effect of his conduct to be the provision of assistance in the commission or preparation of such acts<sup>18</sup>; or
- 575 (c) is reckless as to whether his conduct has an effect mentioned in head (a) or head (b) above<sup>19</sup>, although it is irrelevant for these purposes<sup>20</sup> whether any relevant matter<sup>21</sup> is in relation to the commission, preparation or instigation of one or more particular acts of terrorism, or of acts of terrorism of a particular description, or of acts of terrorism generally<sup>22</sup>; and it is also irrelevant, in relation to matter contained in any article, whether any person is in fact encouraged or induced by that matter to commit, prepare or instigate acts of terrorism<sup>23</sup> or in fact makes use of it in the commission or preparation of such acts<sup>24</sup>.

A person guilty of this offence<sup>25</sup> is liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years or to a fine or to both<sup>26</sup>, or on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding or six months<sup>27</sup> or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum<sup>28</sup> or to both<sup>29</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'publication' means an article or record of any description that contains any of the following, or any combination of them: matter to be read; matter to be listened to; and matter to be looked at or watched: Terrorism Act 2006 s 2(13). For the meanings of 'publish' and 'publication' generally see PARA 448 note 1 ante. 'Article' includes anything for storing data; and 'record' means a record so far as not comprised in an article, including a temporary record created electronically and existing solely in the course of, and for the purposes of, the transmission of the whole or a part of its contents: s 20(1). In connection with electronic publication see also s 3; and PARA 450 post. In Pt 1 (ss 1-20), references to what is 'contained in an article or record' include references to anything that is embodied or stored in or on it (s 20(8)(a)) and to anything that may be reproduced from it using apparatus designed or adapted for the purpose (s 20(8)(b)).

2 le in relation to conduct falling within ibid s 2(2) (see the text and notes 5-12 infra).

3 Ibid s 2(3)(a). For the meaning of 'terrorism' see PARA 383 ante; and for the meaning of 'act of terrorism' see PARA 439 note 12 ante. The question whether a publication is a 'terrorist publication' in relation to particular conduct must be determined as at the time of that conduct (s 2(5)(a)) and having regard both to the contents of the publication as a whole and to the circumstances in which that conduct occurs (s 2(5)(b)).

4 Ibid s 2(3)(b).

5 Ibid s 2(2)(a).

6 'Lend' includes let on hire; and 'loan' is to be construed accordingly: ibid s 2(13).

7 Ibid s 2(2)(b).

8 Ibid s 2(2)(c).

9 In ibid Pt 1, references to 'providing a service' include references to making a facility available; and references to a service provided to a person are to be construed accordingly: s 20(5).

10 Ibid s 2(2)(d).

11 Ibid s 2(2)(e). In connection with electronic publication see also s 3; and PARA 450 post.

12 Ibid s 2(2)(f).

13 For the meaning of 'glorification' see PARA 448 note 6 ante.

14 Terrorism Act 2006 s 2(4)(a).

15 Ibid s 2(4)(b).

16 References to the effect of a person's conduct in relation to a terrorist publication include references to an effect of the publication on one or more persons to whom it is or may become available as a consequence of that conduct: ibid s 2(6).
